RED CROSS SEALS ARE NOW ON SALE

Anti-Tuberculosis League Expects Big Demand for Holiday Stamps.

PRES. WILSON APPROVE

Letter of Endorsement Made Public Today—Numerous Places About Town Where They Can Be Purchased.

Red Cross seals for 1914 were put on sale in Plainfield today for the first time and the local Anti-Tuberculosis League expects to see a greater demand this year for them than has ever been the case. The seals this year are in the holiday colors, red and green, and are square. They contain a picture of a smiling Santa Claus. Above his head are the words "American Red Cross" and on each side are two small red crosses in white circles. At the bottom is the customary Christmas and New Year greetings.

The local sale is being directed by George H. Holstein, chairman of the finance committee of the Anti-Tuberculosis league, and Mr. Holstein has developed a comprehensive sale plan. The local league gets eighty-five per cent. of the proceeds of the sale, which last year amounted to over $500, and fifteen per cent. goes to the work of the American Red Cross Association. In addition to a number of individual workers the seals will be placed on sale at the City National Bank, the State Trust Company, First National Bank, Estil's stationery store (Will H. Williams), Laing's book store, A. E. Force and Company, Plainfield Milk and Cream Company, Queen City Hotel, Randolph's drug store, Schwed Brothers, Woman's Exchange, Y. M. C. A., Charity Organization Society, by the public school and Sunday-school children. Later a committee of young women will sell seals at a number of public places, which will be announced.

"May I not particularly express my interest in the Red Cross Christmas Seal," says President Wilson in a statement made public today. Beginning today every letter that goes out of the White House for the next four weeks, and from many of the government offices, will bear the Red Cross Seal. In writing of the work to Dr. Charles J. Hatfield, executive secretary of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, President Wilson says:

"May I not take this occasion to express to you my deep interest in the work of the National Anti-Tuberculosis Association and my hope that its work is growing in efficiency and extent from year to year? May I not particularly express my interest in the Red Cross Christmas Seal whose sale has been the means of raising funds for the work? It seems to me that this is a particularly interesting and sensible way of enabling the people of the country to give this great work their support."

Over 115,000,000 Red Cross Seals are on sale today in every State in the Union, except Nevada and even in Hawaii, the Canal Zone and Vera Cruz.

WILL SEND MILK TO BELGIAN CHILDREN

Local Relief Committee Receives Gift of $100 to Be Used For the Purpose.

As the result of a contribution of $100 which has been made by the First Baptist church of this city, the local Belgian Relief Committee is arranging to send a large amount of condensed milk to the sufferers abroad. Word has been received that because of the killing of the cows in Belgium for the armies, the little children are suffering greatly, and in many cases dieing, because of lack of food. The local committee is getting estimates as to the cost of milk in quantities from the various firms whose product is of a satisfactory test, and they are also getting prices for prepared baby's foods, as these two are the only possible substitutes for the cows milk. As soon as a price has been definitely fixed, it is planned to make appeals for subscriptions for this particular need.

In addition to the $100 received from the Baptist church, another subscription of $50 has been received for the work which the relief committee is doing. There is still great need, however, and it is hoped that contributions will be sent to the Daily Press or to Miss Hartridge, treasurer of the local Relief committee. Over $1,500 has already been subscribed. The effort to raise $1,000 in subscriptions of $100 each has not as yet been successful, as only $300 of the amount has been pledged, and part of that is conditional upon the rest of the $1,000 being given. Subscriptions for this cause may be sent to the Daily Press office, or notification given to any person connected with the paper.

Three large boxes of clothing were sent yesterday by the local committee to the general committee in Belgium, for distribution. One box contained clothes for adults, one for children, and one for very small babies. In the box for children there was sewed a toy to each garment.

TELLS OF WRITERS OF MODERN TIMES

Prof. J. Duncan Spaeth Lectures Before the Monday Afternoon Club.

SEARCH FOR REALITY

Speaker Describes Three Kinds of Realistic Writers—Creative, Mystic and Iconoclastic as Shown by Balzac, Tolstoi and Ibsen.

"The Realistic Movement in Modern Literature," was the subject of an interesting lecture given by Prof. J. Duncan Spaeth, of Princeton University, in the parish house of the Congregational church, yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Monday Afternoon Club. The professor, who is popular here, was greeted by an unusually large gathering of women, who thoroughly enjoyed his talk.

There are three kinds of realistic writers said the profesor, the creative, the mystic and iconoclastic. That life is worth just what one makes it worth, was the opinion of the speaker and he then went on to prove that the romancist of other days has been matching up the ideal of life to correspond to his own ideal especially when he found that the real ideal of life did not suit him. Continuing Prof. Spaeth said:

"Perhaps, one of the best examples of the creative realist is found in Balzac. Real life was romance to him. He created his characters in such a way that he really believed they lived. This was illustrated when the great writer was on his death bed. He demanded to know when he should die and when the physician told him he requested that 'Biancon' be sent for, for he could save him. Biancon was a character of his own creation.

"I consider Tolstoi as perhaps the best example of the mystic realist. He simply takes life as it is and then brings out the hidden in mankind through a deep insight, born of his knowledge of the passions of mankind. He illuminates life with its religion, phiosophy and its deeper spirit."

Referring to the iconoclastic realist, the professor told of the works of Ibsen, who out of a tangle builds up and readjusts. It was his opinion that English writers of the realistic movement are invariably on guard against the ideal. They are searching for reality. They are against all that is pure fancy and not real and perhaps, he said, there is no better illustration of this than in the works of Shaw.

WATCHUNG MEN BEGIN GOVERNMENT MISSION

Will Investigate Causes of Flood Conditions in Ohio and Mississippi Valleys.

For the purpose of securing information and data needed by Federal engineers in devising ways and means to lessen the danger from disastrous floods in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys, such as occurred in the spring of 1913, Henry Kirchoff and Harold Bigham, residents of Watchung, near here, left today for Pittsburg on a vital government mission. They will embark from the "Smoky City" on a specially constructed houseboat proceeding down the Ohio river to the Mississippi, thence down the father of waters to the Gulf of Mexico and across to Galveston. A camping outfit will be carried with the equipment and at frequent intervals the men will remain on shore in search of possible causes of the big overflows that have cost many lives and millions in money. It is the purpose of the authorities at Washington to spend big sums in protecting the Ohio and Mississippi towns from the inundations that seem to occur at regular intervals. The belief exists that with the proper understanding of conditions some method may be devised to bring this about.

Mr. Kirchoff was formerly an engineer in the German army and at the present time is a reservist, while Mr. Bigham is a magazine writer of repute who was formerly in the United States Forestry Commission service. Their selection for the flood-trouble investigation was made after careful consideration. The trip they are beginning today will extend for possibly a year and if successful will be continued in other parts of the country.

NAMED ADVISOR AND BILL EXAMINER

Assemblyman Beekman Gets a New $1,500 State Job.

Trenton, Dec. 1.—Speaker of the Assembly Azariah Beekman, Democrat, of Somerset county, was appointed by Attorney-General Wescott today as legislative advisor and bill examiner under the act passed by the last Legislature creating the new office. The salary is $1,500. Mr. Beekman immediately resigned from the Assembly and will qualify at once for his new position.

The duties of the new officer are: Upon the request of the Legislature or of any committee or member thereof to draw prospective acts, to examine any bill or resolution or any amendment for the purpose of avoiding repetitions and unconstitutional provisions and to insure accuracy in the text of measures. He is also to report to the consistency of a proposed measure with existing statutes. He is to act in conjunction with the Legislature reference library, which has just been created in the State Library under another act passed last winter.

FIRE IN THEATRE CONFINED TO BOOTH

Metal Structure Prevented Conflagration When Film Ignited.

Fire, started by the snapping of a celluloid film which came in contact with the rays of a powerful electric light, caused a scare in the Lyric motion picture theatre shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, but was extinguished before any great amount of damage was done. The accident happened during the latter part of the show and there were but thirty odd people in the playhouse. Manager Metz announced to the audience that a blaze was in progress inside the metal booth and all left the building in an orderly manner escaping unhurt.

In the booth at the time the reel caught fire were David Berse, the operator; and Manager Metz. Both leaped from the window to the alleyway, a distance of ten feet, and in the jump the manager sustained a badly wrenched ankle. Despite this injury, however, he went to the front of the theatre and dismissed the audience.

The fact that the motion picture machine and equipment were enclosed in a metal box, in accordance with the fire and building regulations, probaby was the cause of the prevention of a big conflagaration. The flames were confined to the box and the damage consisted of the burning of several reels and a quantity of materials and clothing, amounting in all to about $200. Insurance to the amount of $1,000 is carried by the owner.

Smoke ensued in clouds from the burning celluloid and in a short time the entire building was enveloped in a cloud so dense that passersby thought that the structure was burning. Although the fire started on the first floor, Patrolman Connelius McCarthy, and a reporter for The Daily Press standing on the opposite side of the street, were attracted by smoke pouring from the roof and hastened to the scene. The officer ordered the ushers to throw open the doors and then proceeded to ring box No. 12 which had just been reached by Clifford Cole, who sent in the alarm.

SCHOOL CALENDAR OF BORO REVISED

Board of Education Shortens Easter Holiday Vacation to Four Days.

TROUBLE IN ACCOUNTS

Authorities Bothered by Unauthorized Charging at Stores of Local Merchants—Will Make An Inquiry Into the Matter.

Revision of the North Plainfield school calendar was undertaken by the borough Board of Education at its monthly meeting last night and as a result the annual Easter vacation was cut down from one week to four days, school re-opening on the Tuesday following Easter Sunday. This will give a recess from the Thursday prior to Good Friday until April 6, inclusive. The Christmas holidays will begin December 23 and the new term will be ushered in January 4. Washington and Lincoln's birthdays will be celebrated in February and Memorial Day will be celebrated May 31. The schools will shut down for the annual summer vacation June 18.

H. A. Woodruff, vice-president, presided in the absence of President Cooley. This is the first meeting under the new rules and regulations that were drawn up and accepted about one month ago. Bills were ordered paid to the amount of $5,201.40 which included the following items: Teachers salaries, $3,264.90, books and supplies, $121.47; miscellaneous, $200; water, telephone and electric bills, $116; buildings, $1,118.94; coal and small bills, $104; salaries for janitor, clerk, supply clerk, $275. There has been some difficulty lately with unauthorized ordering and when the bills are presented they can not be placed. The clerk was authorized to notify the merchants of the city to supply no goods for the school except on proper order blanks that will be made up. This matter has caused the treasurer no end of trouble and there are bills that are presented to him that he cannot pass on.

The Building and Grounds committee was not ready to report last night and a special meeting has been called for next Tuesday night when plans will be submitted to the Board for approval. Reports were heard from the clerk and custodian. The latter asked for an appropriation for purchase of a filing cabnet but it was refused. Mr. Aungst brought up the question of the sale of Red Cross stamps for the Anti-Tubercular League in the school this year but on motion of Mr. Stuart it was decided not to take any official action in this matter although the sale of the stamps for this cause would not be prohibited in the school. It was decided to hold the regular December meeting which is supposed to come on December 28, on the Monday preceding that date, December 21, as the last Monday in the month comes during the holidays.

BORO POLICE SEEK ALLEGED ASSAILANT

David Allen Kicked and Beaten as Sequel to Quarrel.

David Allen, of Harrison avenue, the borough, is confined to his home under the care of Dr. Bernard Levinson, today, as the result of a severe beating he received on Greenbrook road last night, he alleges, at the hands of Arthur Fritz. A warrant has been sworn out for the latter before Justice Thomas Snape, but up to noon today the police had failed to apprehend him. He is believed to be in hiding near his home in upper Jerferson avenue near the base of the mountain, and several citizens are aiding in the search.

The attack had its origin in an altercation between Fritz and one of Allen's children, whom he slapped, it is said, for some slight offense. Allen met Fritz shortly after 7 o'clock as he was proceeding to town and addressing himself to the latter said: "If any of my children need slapping come to me and I'll do it, otherwise leave them alone."

He then proceeded on his way and when between Duer and Somerset streets on Greenbrook road, was suddenly attacked from behind. He claims he was knocked down and terribly kicked and beaten, afterward being left on the ground in a dazed condition. He finally recovered sufficiently to drag himself home. Dr. Levinson found his face and body a mass of cuts and bruises and he ordered him to remain in bed.

AUTOMOBILE CRASHES INTO A MAIN LINE TROLLEY

An automobile of the runabout type, owned and driven by Peter Walsh, of 130 North avenue, crashed into westbound trolley car No. 2,000, at West Front street and Sycamore avenue, shortly before 12 o'clock last night. Walsh was thrown from his seat by the force of the impact, but escaped injury beyond a few bruises. The auto was so badly damaged it had to be towed to Martin's garage for repairs. The trolley car emerged from the crash minus its lights and a bent fender.

The blame for the collision is said to rest with Walsh, as he suddenly swerved from the right side of the road directly in front of the trolley as it was slowing up for a passenger. John Peterson, the motorman, made an attempt to avoid the crash, but was unable. The passengers of the larger vehicle were slightly shaken up.

GERMANS RETIRE FROM DIXMUDE

Amsterdam Hears That Authorities Are Keeping Troop Movements Secret.

POLAND BATTLE RAGES

Kaiser's Troops Keep Up Violent Cannonade Along French-Belgian Border—Turks Abandon Forts.

Amsterdam, Dec. 1 (Central News Cable)—The Germans have retired from the front at Dixmude, a distance of 15 kilometres, according to the correspondent of the Vaz Dias. A despatch to the Telegraff from Brussels reports that the Germans are refusing to issue passports for travelers in any direction.

All train service in Belgium is completely suspended and all newspapers have been confiscated, even those printed in German. The probable reason for the latter move is believed to be that the authorities are keeping secret all measures which are being taken in connection with the situation on the eastern front.

An official statement given out by the German army headquarters in Berlin declares that despite the reports of an immense Russian victory in Poland, given out in Petrograd, the fighting still continues around Lodz without decisive result for either side. Since crossing the Polish frontier, the statement says the Germans have captured 70,000 Russians, 150 cannon, 200 machine guns and much ammunition and supplies.

An official denial has been issued in Berlin that the Allies naval bombardment of the Kaiser's naval base on Zebrugge, resulted in the place being totally destroped, as reported in London. It declares that not a single house was blown up and that the German military establishments there remain intact.

Major-General Ludendorff has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant-general, according to a despatch from Berlin, and it is supposed that he will replace General VonMoltke as chief of the general staff.

Parish, Dec. 1 (Central News Cable)—The French troops have occupied all of the heights of the Vosges, according to a telegram from Montbeliard. The message announces that the Germans have evacuated the three villages of Seppois, Moos and Bisel, abandoning a large quantity of ammunition and other war material.

The French war office gave out the following statement at 3 o'clock this afternoon:

"In Belgium the day of November 30 was marked by rather heavy cannonades. The German infantry made no attacks. The enemy contiues to show a very marked activity to the north of Arras.

"In the region of the Aisne there has been a continuous canonade all along the front. In the Argonne the fighting continues without causing any modification in the general situation. In the Woevre and in the Vosges there is nothing to report."

The violent battle is still raging in the region of Strykow, says a despatch to the Matin, from its correspondent in Petrograd. The Russian pressure is steadily tightening about three German army corps which were enveloped betwen Strykow and Brzeyiny and fresh forces have been dispatched to the front to meet the German reinforcing and rescue column, which is advancing from the vicinity of Lenzyca. The Germans have has-

Big List of Offerings to Be Made Known to Thousands of Residents in Special Edition of the Daily Press to Be Issued on Thursday of This Week—Leading Merchants to Participate in Plan Developed by the Daily Press.

Word is reaching Plainfield continually from the outlying sections showing that the residents of the towns surrounding Plainfield are on the tiptoe of expectation over the forthcoming week's special Fare Refunding Sale, to be conducted under the joint auspices of The Plainfield Daily Press and the leading merchants of the city, which is to open Saturday, December 5, and to continue until Saturday, December 12. Many suburban residents will do a lot of necessary shopping in anticipation of the holiday season.

A North Branch woman reader of The Press, who called at the office this morning to renew her subscription, asked many questions about the proposition and declared that a number of women in her village intended to "kill two birds with one stone" by visiting friends and doing a lot of necessary shopping at the same time, with the assurance of having their car fares to and from Plainfield refunded to them.

Investigation in other towns showed that the residents are awaiting with keen interest the big Fare Refunding issue of the Press which is to be published on Thursday and which will carry the announcements of the merchants and give all the details of the fare refunding plan.

No one entire section of The Press will be given up to the merchants who have united together in the en-

The Levgar Structural Company laid off thirty of its men on Saturday. It is said that one hundred of the one hundred and fifty or more men still employed by the company will be laid off this week. The unfilled orders on the books of the company are said to be at the lowest mark in its history and there appears to be no indication of any improvement at this time.

EVILS HAVE NO "RIGHTS."

The sacred principle of liberty confers on no man the right to coin money out of the degradation of manhood, the suffering of womanhood, and the privation of childhood. The greatest friends of "personal liberty" are those who protect and maintain their own spiritual independence and seek to keep others in the path of sobriety. To walk in the way that leads to drunkenness is bondage; to push others into that highway of ruin, for the sake of lucre, is criminality. Social evils have no inherent rights. Destructive vices have no sacred privileges. Freedom grants no man permission to injure himself or his neighbor. As a writer in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association so well puts the case: "The world is moving. The old fetish of 'personal liberty,' at whatever cost of danger to the public at large, seems to be losing its power."

DECISION OF SUPREME COURT.

The principle here set forth has the endorsement of the highest judicial authority in our land, the Supreme Court of the United States. The language of its notable decision is emphatic: "By the general concurrence of opinion of every civilized and Christian community, there are few sources of crime and misery equal to the dram shop. * * * The statistics of every state show a greater amount of crime and misery attributable to the use of ardent spirits obtained at these retail liquor saloons than to any other source. * * * The police power of the State is fully competent to regulate the business—to mitigate its evils or to suppress it altogether. There is no inherent right in a citizen to thus sell intoxicating liquor by retail; it is not a privilege of a citizen of the State or a citizen of the United States." Crowley vs. Christensen, 137 U. S. 91. In view of this clear and explicit language of our highest tribunal, it is exceedingly absurd for anyone to continue to talk of his "sacred right" to sell or drink liquor. At another time the same court used this language: "No legislature can bargain away the public health or the public morals. The people themselves cannot do it, much less their servants. Government is organized with a view to their preservation, and cannot divest itself of the power to provide for them."—Taken from "Shall I Drink?" by F. H. Crooker.

KANSAS—A CONCRETE CASE.

In 1881 Kansas passed an amendment to its constitution which reads: "The manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor shall be forever prohibited in this State." This simple sentence of only fourteen words has made Kansas, at the time a rough frontier State, considered to be mostly desert, into one of the most prosperous and attractive communities in the world, as shown by the following:

Average per capita wealth, $1,666.92. Declared by the "Wall Street Journal" to be the largest in America.

Second lowest death rate in America, namely 7½ per thousand. Rate in 1881 17 per thousand.

Fewer murders, homicides and accidental deaths than any other State, namely, 45 in 100,000.

Fewer deaths from kidney diseases than any other State.

There are 105 counties in the State out of which 87 did not send an insane patient to the asylum last year. 53 have empty jails; 38 have empty poorhouses; 14 have had no jury to try a criminal case in ten years.

Cook county, Illinois, has about the same population as Kansas, but has more insane alone than Kansas has altogether of insane, criminals, boys and girls in reformatories, feeble-minded, and all prisoners in jails and penitentiaries.

Kansas has more college students pro rata than any other State in the Union.

Kansas bank deposits have increased in the past ten years from $100,000,000 to $220,000,000.

Kansas has honest politics—no dealings with the saloon crowd.

Only within recent years can it be said that prohibition has been enforced; liquor is still sold in cities on the border, and national prohibition is needed to completely demonstrate what the abolishment of the liquor traffic means.

LIQUOR A MENACE TO SAFETY.

No drinking man can be a pilot for the Panama Canal. Gen. Goethals has signed an order to this effect. Only absolute "teetotalers" can obtain licenses as pilots.

Plainfield, N. J., Dec. 1, 1914.

THE NEW FIRE ENGINE.

Although nothing authentic has been given the public as yet, more or less comment has been aroused by what is believed to be the plan of the "powers that be" to place the city's newest auto engine at the Netherwood House. It is larger and more powerful in many ways than the one now located at headquarters, and the belief exists that the latter should be transferred to No. 4 house, thus allowing the latest arrival to remain in the business district. So far as is known, the only reason why the newcomer is slated for the upper end is that the Netherwood residents were promised an auto engine. If this is all, it does not seem reasonable.

The present engine, which is known as No. 2, has a pumping capacity of 600 gallons a minute. The new one will pump 800 gallons in the same time. The 600 gallon capacity certainly can take care of anything in Netherwood, while the center of the city is the only place where 800 gallons might be required. It is true that the old engine has no chemical equipment, while the new one has, but the shift from one to the other could probably be made in a few hours. Both pieces of apparatus are similar in equipment in every other detail.

Under the circumstances it is apparent that the argument in favor of keeping the more powerful engine at Second street is not without merit. The first of the new year will see a new epoch ushered into the Plainfield fire department, and no move should be made unless it is done with the idea of giving the greatest efficiency where it is most needed.

NO TIME LIKE THE PRESENT.

When the merchants appeal to the trading public to "Do Christmas shopping early" it is not a mercenary appeal. It is never too early to begin a good thing. The early shopping request has common sense and sound logic behind it, and if Plainfielders do not soon take advantage of it, it will be "too late to begin early."

It is not only the storekeepers that profit by early shopping. The consumers gain as much by so doing as do the merchants and clerks who receive the last hour assaults of late and anxious shoppers. Too many let their shopping go to the last minute, and then have to be content with what has been left by the more prudent men and women. Of course it is unavoidable with some, but there are hundreds who have little or no excuse for being so tardy.

Early shopping has the advantage of offering wider selection is well as more comfortable shopping. The early bird catches the worm. Much shopping can be facilitated by carrying small packages home, particularly where shopping has been neglected and delayed. Taking the package home is security against unavoidable mistakes upon the part of merchants and clerks rushed to the point of desperation in the final hours. DO IT NOW.

Don't forget that the Plainfield merchants are going to co-operate in inviting people from out of town to come here shopping next week. Have a word of greeting for the stranger who may stop you on the street to ask questions. It may make a permanent friend for the town and the stores, and result in greater future prosperity as a result of the courtesy.

Red Cross seals are being placed on sale today in Plainfield. They afford a means for local people to help along a worthy work, that of fighting the white plague, and the prices at which they are sold give the people of the city, regardless of their financial standing, an opportunity to aid the good cause. Put Christmas seals on all your letters.

The Public Service Corporation is going to have a representative tell the members of the Board of Trade tonight how to better illuminate their stores. If he was going to tell them how to cut down their electric light bills he would draw a crowd that the biggest hall in town would not hold.

The editorial for Saturday has been written by a well known Plainfielder, a man, who has been much in the public eye of late, and will be even more so as time progresses. He will discuss a topic which especially appeals to the women at the present time.

And while you are putting your hand down in your pocket to relieve some suffering person here at home think what a nice thing it would be to put it in a second time and help some of the homeless and fatherless in Belgium.

Don't look for soft snaps. The hard ones are the ones that have the ginger in them.

A good way to make the old world better is to begin with your own city.

A nice front porch has prevented many an old maid.

BARGAINS TO BE LISTED

terprise suggested by The Press.

The big Co-operative Fare Refunding Sale being promoted by The Plainfield Press to be held from December 5 to 12 inclusive, will offer opoprtunities to people living in and about Plainfield such as they never had before. With the plan as outlined it will be possible for people living within a radius of 30 or 40 miles of Plainfield to come to this city and trade without their carfare costing them a single penny.

This will be, without a doubt, the greatest trade event ever held in Plainfield.

Every merchant represented in the big trading event is making elaborate preparations in practically every department of his store and a general sweeping price reduction sale will continue throughout the week.

The big Bargain Edition of The Press published in connection with the Great Co-operative Fare Refunding Sale, will be issued Thursday December 3 and will be well worth waiting for and preserving.

It will contain the advertisement of every merchant who will offer special inducements for the week and there will be more and greater bargains enumerated in these advertisements than ever before in the city's history. This is but natural as never before has such a gigantic enterprise, undertaken to attract out of town buyers, been attempted in Plainfield.

And not only will they have the opportunity of making extensive purchases at cut rate prices, but they will have their car fares refunded—the full particulars of which will be explained in the Big Bargain Edition on Thursday.

Elsewhere is a list of the stores where bargains will be found and where fares will be refunded. Cut it out and send it to your relatives and friends residing outside of Plainfield. It will give them some idea of the magnitude of this sale and what it will mean to them.

SPECIAL SERVICE ON ST. ANDREW'S DAY

Anniversary of Founding of Brotherhood Observed at Holy Cross Church.

The Brotherhood of St. Andrew of the Church of the Holy Cross, held a special service in the parish house last evening, in honor of St. Andrew's day, the anniversary of the founding of the brotherhood. Representatives of chapters in Cranford, Elizabeth and Plainfield were present. The meeting was conducted by Duclos VanMater, director of Holy Cross Chapter. After the reading of the lesson by Harolld Noble, Rev. Charles S. Kues made an address of welcome, giving some of his personal experiences with brotherhood work, and mentioning some ways in which a chapter may be of service to a rector. He emphasized the relation between a chapter and the rector especially.

J. H. Thompson, director of Trinity Chapter, 1105, of Cranford, then spoke about the work in Cranford, making special note of Sunday-school work done by the brotherhood boys.

The address of the evening was made by J. W. A. Smith, national council member for New Jersey. He spoke more fully upon the relations of the clergy and the brotherhood, telling of some of his varied experiences in this work and warning the boys against neglecting their rector and also against leaning too much upon him.

The director, Duclos VanMater, read a letter from George H. Randall, national assistant secretary, expressing deep regret at his inability to be present and sending his greetings to those assembled at the meeting.

J. Wesley Hegeman, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Cranford, spoke briefly upon national brotherhood work. He told of several incidents bearing up the work in general and expressed his delight at seeing the number present at this union meeting.

A question box was then instituted and several questions asked by members were answered by those who had had more experience.

The final address was made by Guy D. Peck, Jr., secretary of Holy Cross Chapter. He spoke on ways of improving a chapter's work so as to be of more service to the rector, and to make the influence of the chapter felt in the church. He gave an account of the three "spirations," namely, inspiration, aspiration and perspiration, all of which are essential to the members of a successful chapter.

The meeting closed with a prayer by Mr. Kues.

The women of the parish turned out and, after the serving of the spiritual food, they brought forth the physical food ,in the form of hot chocolate, sandwiches and cake. They were given a hearty vote of thanks for their material assistance.

Those present were: J. H. Thompson, David I. Somerville, John Somerville, J. Wesley Hegeman, T. C. Chamberlain, Warren Darwent, Chas. Mott, of Trinity chapter, Cranford; Clinton S. Berrien, Miner Trowbridge, Philip S. H. Philips, of Grace chapter, Plainfield; J. W. A. Smith, of Elizabeth; Rev. C. H. Kues, Duclos VanMater, Harold G. Noble, Guy D. Peck, Jr., B. Harrison Fahn, Fred R. VanNorden, of Holy Cross, and J. Attwood Giddings, Clifford Fiering and Howard Wentz, visitors.

HARVEY R. LINBARGER REMOVES TO NORTH AVENUE

Harvey R. Linbarger, the real estate broker, who has been located at the former real estate office of Liefke & Laing on Park avenue, today removed to 197 North avenue, the former office of Thickstun & Emmons, where he will be in the future. He has taken over the real estate and insurance business of John H. McCullough, successor to William D. Thickstun, and will continue to carry on his extensive business at that address.

This office is one of the oldest in the city, it having been established many years ago by Mr. Thickstun who later formed a partnership with John P. Emmons.

The revival services at the South Plainfield Baptist church are steadily growing in interest. Thus far twenty-seven have accepted Christ. A quartet comprising two young women and two men from New Market will sing at tonight's service. The chorus choir will sing special selections and Rev. J. J. Allen, the pastor, will also sing "The Old Fashioned Faith." These services are held every evening at 7:30 o'clock and are in charge of Evangelist Pugsley, of Trenton. The evangelist preached two powerful sermons Sunday, in the morning on "The Power of Little Things," and in the evening on "The Devil."

There were several addresses of a helpful nature on the advancement of farming. F. M. Curtis, president of the Bergen County Board of Agriculture, urged the farmers to co-operate for the purpose of preventing harmful legislation, and E. R. Collins, president of the Union county Board, indorsed his remarks.

1,218 PUPILS IN BOROUGH SCHOOLS

High School Given Permission to Join Debating League.

The North Plainfield High School has been invited to enter an Interscholastic Debating Contest which will be held this winter under the auspices of Rutgers College. Sixteen selected schools in the counties of Hunterdon, Middlesex and Somerset, will probably form the circuit. There will be trophies offered for the winning and second teams and the plan is to have the schools that qualify for the final debate, hold the discussion at Rutgers and be the guests of the college.

It has been decided that the borough school will enter the contest and Supervising Principal D. Fred Aungst is in favor of such an organization. A representative from New Brunswick will probably visit the local school soon and explain everything concerning the formation of this plan. Several years ago one of the classes of the borough school met the Raritan school debating team on the question of Woman Suffrage but the Raritan team, with the affirmative side, was given the verdict. There are many interesting topics at the present time that are worthy of discussion and would make a contest very interesting. The debates will be held all winter and in the early spring.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

When "Honey Boy" Evans offers his new program of minstrelsy at the Plainfield Theatre, Monday night, he promises the introduction of a rare voice in minstrelsy. The newcomer is Master Paul VanDyke; he is a yodler and George Evans vouches for his excellence. The yodler is rare indeed who can give a satisfactory rendition of this peculiar style of singing. Master VanDyke, a native Hollander, is the possessor of a rarely sweet voice. All his life he has been singing the native songs of his own land and it is his natural style which he now brings to minstrelsy with the Evans company. Other sweet singers in the organization are John P. Rogers, James Meehan, William H. Thompson, Jim Doherty and Joe Wesley. The introduction of these vocal stars takes place in the beautiful new first part scene which represents the Grand Court of Honor at the coming Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco. It shows the semi-circle of olden times framed in a modern scenic picture. The setting has been executed by Unitt & Wickes, scenic artists for Daniel Frohman's New York Lyceum Theatre.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The girls' swimming classes met for the first time this morning. There has been considerable delay owing to a mistake in the ordering of the swimming suits. The suits have now arrived and the girls took their first swim this morning. Miss Ralston is the girls' swimming instructor and under her guidance many young women expect to learn how to navigate in the water.

The finishing touches are now being given to the play which the Girls' Atnletic Association will present next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. The title is "A Case for Sherlock Holmes."

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

A vaudeville bill of five flawless acts and special feature moving pictures combined to make the offering at Proctor's Theatre yesterday, one worth five times the money charged. The beautiful scenic offering, "The Girl in the Moon," is the headliner, and at the same time the most unusual presentation the Front street playhouse has ever had. Not to see it, means missing the best thing in town. The other acts on the bill are all good and include the Mimic Four, presenting comedy variety in the form of burlesque opera, splendid singing and difficult dancing; Bud Snyder & Co., comedy cyclists, with a clown fully as funny as the famous "Marceline;" Gertrude Arden & Co., comedy sketch, and Wezeman & Horton, comedians, who really know how to sing. "413," the first of the special series of big feature films to be shown at Proctor's was seen for the first yesterday and will be presented again this afternoon and tonight. It depicts the greatest train wreck ever flashed on the screen. The next episode of "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be shown tomorrow, and on Thursday and Friday the feature will be Blanche Walsh, America's famous emotional actress, in her greatest play, "The Ressurection."

DR. MAXSON TO SPEAK.

The next meeting of the Bryant-Lincoln Parent-Teacher Association will be held at Bryant School tomorrow afternoon at 3:15. Dr. Maxson will give an address and some of the children will sing. A good attendance is desired. Refreshments will be served.

OUR NEW-YORK LETTER

Tuesday, December 1st.

Do you know that there are some really wonderful bargains to be had at the sale now in progress at MAISON MAURICE, Fifth Avenue at 43rd Street. Wise women are replenishing their Winter Wardrobes with telling effect for many a lovely dancing frock, or fascinating gown or luxurious evening wraps may be picked up at astonishingly low prices. I have noticed prominent women buying, not one dress, but many, the styles are unusually good and very exclusive. At this season of entertaining many of us have already displayed our new frocks to our friends—at dances or dinners—so this sale comes opportunely just as we are desiring another frock or wrap, and will save you very nearly half of what you would pay for the same stunning garments at the beginning of the season. If you are contemplating a fur purchase between now and Christmas don't by any means overlook those at Maison Maurice—especially the very popular blue fox sets and the Seal Coats. Maison Maurice is well up the Avenue —at 43rd Street.

I have discovered another aristocrat among women's gloves at the well-known exclusively-glove-shop of P. Centemeri & Co., 296 Fifth Ave. "The Novelty Bandalette," a decidedly smart glove, novel but by no means extreme. Made of superior quality glace finish kid, trimmed with a ¾ inch wide bandalette of contrasting color, piping of contrasting color and the new Roberta embroidery—all in perfect harmony, $2.25 pair. In selecting your Christmas gifts you may choose this new glove in white with black trimming, gun metal with white trimming, tans, modes, grays, Copenhagen, pigskin, Gendarm, Bergundy, the new brown, wistaria and navy.

Are you going home for Christmas? Doubtless you need a new traveling case or bag. I saw one at M. Cherry's, 288 Fifth Ave., for $17.50. Perfectly stunning, of black morocco, fitted with white composition brushes, comb, etc., and lined with orchid moire silk. There are hosts of beautiful gift suggestions at this nice shop. Wallets, razor sets, card cases, etc., for men. And I saw an exquisite leather desk set in polished ecruse, of a violet hue, for women, at $15; and a never-ending variety of party boxes from $4 to $25; besides wrist watches, over-night cases and other acceptable gifts. Send for Gift Book, 288 Fifth Ave.

Next time you want hemstitching or plaiting done, send to MEHRLUST & GROSSMAN, who do excellent work, and are very prompt and reliable. They make buttons, too, from your own fabric. Write for booklet giving instructions how to prepare materials, etc. Prices are very moderate. Mehrlust & Grossman, 3460 Broadway (at 141st Street).

An electric flash lamp the size of a fountain pen is the latest and very useful novelty I have discovered at GIMBELS (fifth floor). Although so tiny and slender (it is in the exact model of a fountain pen) it throws a very powerful flood of white light by simply pressing the ball of the clip. They are only a dollar including the battery, which slips inside the barrel. Extra batteries 25 cents each. Now wouldn't this make a charming and very useful Christmas present. It eliminates the danger of striking matches in the dark or of giving oneself a nasty knock when groping for the electric light switch, handy to see the time by during the night and would surely fill the heart of a midnight marauder with the utmost dread. Remember at GIMBELS, 33d Street and Broadway.

Every one will be giving useful gifts this Christmas. If you are choosing a pretty Blouse for an intimate friend, I suggest you look at the lovely lace models shown at the exclusive Blouse shop of JOHN FORSYTHE & SONS, 3 West 42d St. These are of real lierre lace, lined with chiffon and set off with a large waist bow of some delicate shade and touches of black velvet; really remarkable value at $5. The same may be said of all Forsythe's waists, which are exclusive and very smart, at any price from $5 to $25.

Choose your Christmas Cards and Calendars in pleasant quiet among a host of beautifully expressed, suitably worded suggestions, at the Book and Art Exchange, 30 East 34th Street. You will find everything there is very carefully chosen, easy to find, and very inexpensive. Wonderful assortments, too, of Calendars, Cards, Mottos, Gift Books, Bayberry Candles, Sachets and dainty novelties.

Your Christmas Gown—what is it going to be? Perhaps you will say "I've bought all the new dresses I intend to for this season." Did it ever occur to you that you could have your gowns of yesterday rebuilt into lovely creations in the modes of to-morrow? Of course you can, but you must go to Homer, 11½ West 37th St. You will be astonished at the result, for Madame Homer is a perfect genius at just this thing. She has Paris at the tip of her deft fingers, and always uses the best of judgment in adapting style to material and effect to personality. Some of the smartest New York women have their gowns rebuilt by Homer, and her charges are about one-third the price of a new one. There is just time now, before the Christmas rush commences, so why not pick out one or two gowns you are tired of (and think worthless) and send them to Homer with a note that you will call and consult her in a day or so?

The Turks are fleeing in the direction of Erzerum, leaving quantities of ammunition and supplies behind them, and abandoning the area adjacent to the Russian frontier for many miles. The region along the coast of the Black Sea, north of Erzerum, is commanded by the guns of the light draught vessels of the Russian Black Sea fleet.

Rome, Dec. 1 (Central News Cable)—A despatch to the Messagero from Bucharest, says that the Russians have occupied the whole of the crownland of Bukowina, capturing enormous quantities of ammunition, arms and provisions. N. P. H. S. PUPILS GIVE DANCE TO SCHOOLMATES

Walter Debele and Earnest Pruden, two members of North Plainfield High School, gave a party and dance last evening in Debele's Auditorium and the affair proved a great success.

Notwithstanding the weather conditions about thirty people were present and although a great many more had been invited everybody present had a good time.

The refreshments which were furnished by those who attended consisted of sandwiches, cake and ice cream and proved a very delightful repast during the intermission of the dance.

Those present were: The Misses Helen Hand, Dorothy Martin, Madeline Blair, Helen Ryno, Bertha Debele, Helen Tompson, Elsie Vanderburgh, Lillian Spencer, Grace Vanderburgh and Alfred Seidel, Willard Back, Alfred Shyarback, Charles Moraller, John Dawe, William Seidel, Almon Doty, Clifford Causbrook, Leon Larison, Leroy Adams, Earnest Pruden, Walter Debele, Oscar Ditts and Nathan Boylan.

DAVIS ADMITS C. R. R. OF N. J. HAS BEEN INDICTED

Trenton, Dec. 1—United States District Attorney Davis today, confirmed the report that the Federal Grand Jury has returned an indictment against the Ceneral Railroad of New Jersey for alleged rebates to dealers in anthracite coal.

An investigation was begun by Mr. Davis today of complaints that the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Atlantic City Railroad and the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad, have conspired to raise their passenger rates. The complaints are made by residents of South Jersey. If investigation of the complaints by the district attorney proves their merit he said that he would present the facts to the next Federal Grand Jury.

MEAT MARKET BURGLARIZED, POLICE ARREST FIVE BOYS

Petty burglary, charged to small boys, was perpetrated in the meat market of Frank Neidig, at Somerset and Race streets at an early hour this morning, the intrduers getting a quantity of cooked meats and $3 in cash that had been left in the store after closing time. Entrance was gained through a rear window, three panes of glass being removed so that the culprits could enter.

Chief Weiss was apprised of the deed this morning, and immediately set to work rounding up a number of youths upon whom suspicion had been directed. At 1 o'clock this afternoon five had been caught in the borough authorities' dragnet and are being held at headquarters for a further investigation. It is thought that the guilt will be fastened on one of the prisoners before nightfall.

Night In the Trenches.

The moon above the trenches shone
Like a grim bedlam, wizened, wan;
It leered and jeered till some one swore,
In jets of ribald metaphor.

Silence, and then a song and then
The ghastly quietude again.
Pierced by the shrieking of a shell
Like a lost soul cast down to hell.

And so till dawn began to creep
Across the land, when soothing sleep
About its hallowed influence shed,
And none could tell the quick or dead.

DOG SLEUTHS UNERRING IN DETECTING CRIMINALS.

German Shepherds Trained by New Jersey Man For Police Work.

Out in Montclair, N. J., Louis de Winter trains German shepherd dogs for the police. He imports the animals from Germany when they are puppies and carefully accustoms them to their work. When he is through with them he has made a sleuth more unerring than Sherlock Holmes or Dupin and afraid of neither man nor devil.

A girl was murdered in Ridgewood, N. J. She had been struck on the head with a piece of iron pipe and dragged across the road about 200 feet into a wood. Bloodhounds were put on the track of her assailants, but without avail. Finally De Winter volunteered to put one of his dogs, Herta von Ehrengrund, on the case. The dog was given the piece of pipe to smell and immediately took up the trail. A mile and a half away the pursuers came to a farmhouse. The farmer told them there had been a stranger about there a night or so before, but he could give no definite description of him.

From the farmhouse the trail led to a building in the course of construction. There the dog rushed to a pile of pipe, and from one piece they found a length had been cut. That was where the murderer had got his bludgeon. Again the dog took up the trail and finally came upon a deserted shack. Here he led the searchers upstairs, where they found an old mattress with bloodstains upon it. Evidently they were on the right track.

The dog again struck out across country, and toward evening the party came upon a group of men talking by the roadside. The dog suddenly leaped upon one of them and pinned him to the earth. This fellow was arrested, put in jail and ultimately confessed that he and a colored man had committed the murder.

OUR DREADNOUGHTS BEST.

English Naval Authority Says We Will Have Strongest Squadron.

The Navy League of the United States called attention to the declaration of Maurice Prendergast, a noted British naval expert, that with the completion in 1918 of the Dreadnoughts California, Idaho and Mississippi the United States would possess the most powerful and homogeneous squadron in existence. It will consist of seven super-Dreadnoughts. Mr. Prendergast commends especially the American center line plan for mounting the big fourteen inch guns and praises the policy of American naval designers in favor of thick armor or none.

In an article for the Navy, the organ of the British Navy league, Mr. Prendergast says:

"With perhaps the exception of the Japanese Fuso no Dreadnought among the fleets on active service can compare with these new American ships in the matter of size. The American ships will probably be the largest afloat for many years after their completion.

"During the past ten years the design of American battleships has displayed a remarkable standard of excellence. It was clearly recognized in the very first United States Dreadnoughts that plain broadside fire was of more practical value than heavy end on fire at odd angles. After all navies had tried various methods of mounting big guns, the American center line plan had to be finally adopted.

"These new American ships are developed from the Nevada class. Both the Nevada and our Queen Elizabeth were designed about the same time, and numerous points of marked resemblance between them seem to raise the similarity above the field of vulgar coincidence. For neatness of design the American ships are facile princeps, a striking contrast to some Dreadnoughts, whose minor details seem to have been 'shoveled on just where they will fit,' as a sort of afterthought."

THESE OYSTERS BLUSH.

Turn Pink When About to Be Eaten, but Taste All Right.

Pink oysters are the latest freak of nature under investigation by experts of the department of agriculture. These blushing bivalves come from beds in Long Island sound. They look like any other oyster when they are gathered, but they turn pink on the plate of the ultimate consumer.

The news reached the bureau of chemistry, and a volunteer poison squad found the pink oyster not only harmless, but delicious. The chemists have a theory that the oysters are turned pink either by a wild yeast bacillus or some other micro-organism.

The corps of scientists which has decided such vexing questions as "When is an egg an egg?" is expected to find a solution for the latest puzzler.

BY MORRIS MILLER

Hand it to Dominick Tortorich, dean of the New Orleans boxing promoters, for being alive to his own interests. D. J., as Dominick is known to his Crescent City intimates, played a big part in the passage of the Louisiana law legalizing twenty-round boxing contests to a certainty. When rumors began to be spread recently that T. J. McCarey and Sunny Jim Coffroth, California promoters, intended to locate in their own state, Dominick only smiled and said nothing. And now the reason for his confidence has been discovered. There's a clause in the Louisiana boxing law which prohibits any club which has not staged ten-round contests for at least one year from pulling off twenty-round mills. Obviously no promoter is going to pull off ten-round contests in New Orleans for one year, now that twenty-round mills are legal, in order to qualify for the longer bouts at the end of twelve months. And, of course, Tortorich had nothing to do with the slipping of that joker in the New Orleans boxing law.

Although but twenty-five of the 330 ball players who figured in the American and National league races of 1902, the last year of the American league baseball war, still remain in the big arena, a team composed of these veterans, all of whom have been in the game for upward of fourteen seasons, would be capable of holding its own with any that might be selected today. All of these players are far above the average in intelligence, which accounts for their remaining in the game so long, are excellent fielders, great batsmen, and, with one or two exceptions, grand base runners. This all-star veteran team would line up as follows:

Mathewson, Plank and Hess, pitchers.
Bresnahan and Dooin, catchers.
Lajoie, first base.
Evers, second base.
Wagner, shortstop.
Wallace, third base.
Leach, center field.
Crawford, right field.

The manager for this team could be selected from among John McGraw, Fielder Jones, Clark Griffith, Frank Chance, Hugh Jennings, Wilbur Robinson, and "Whoa Bill" Phillips, as all of these former stars were in the game in 1902, Griffith and McGraw being pilots as now.

It is stated that all the members of the soccer football team that represented Belgium against England last season and all the members of the Belgian eight-oared crew that won the Grand Challenge cup at the Royal English Henley regatta a few years ago have been killed in the war. William Albany, who was defeated by Ernest Barry, present world's professional sculling champion, has enlisted in the Sportsman's battalion formed in London. F. S. Kelly, who won the Diamond sculls at Henley a couple of times, is in the royal naval volunteer reserve. British yacht owners have placed at the disposal of the admiralty about 500 vessels for the war.

The Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco will stage all the annual Amateur Athletic Union championships in 1915 except the boxing contests, which are to be held in Boston. However, the winners will be sent to the Pacific coast, which the recent boxing repeal law will not affect. The boxing contests to be held during the exposition will be Far Western championships, April 14 and 15; Pacific Association championships, April 22 to 24; Panama-Pacific International Exposition championships, open to the world, May 5 to 8, and state of California championships, October 18 to 23.

A recent interview with Hank Gowdy quotes Hank as saying that while he and Dick Dudolph had a big vaudeville offer, one matinee was enough for Brother Gowdy. It so happens that Rudolph and Gowdy played the week of October 19-25 at Hammerstein's, in New York. Gowdy says that he, as well as the other Braves, cannot be coaxed away from their club. Too much fun, too much glory, too much money right now, with good chances for another world's series next October. The Feds, so Gowdy opines, can live awhile longer, and the best interests of baseball would be served by a general peace treaty.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL TEAM HAD FAIR SEASON ON GRIDIRON

The Plainfield High School football team has just closed its 1914 season with a record of four victories, four defeats and one tie game. All of the defeats that the local team suffered were by teams that were acknowledged and were classed higher than the local eleven. Rahway, East Orange, Phillipsburg and Morris High School, of New York, were the quartet that took the measure of Plainfield's best and the showing that the local players made against these teams with the exception of one, was remarkable. During the season the team piled up a total score of 146, which is an average of 16.2 points per game, and allowed their opponents to score 98, which gives the local aggregation almost fifty points more.

William Peacock, captain of the team, was a very able leader, and his playing all during the season was a good example to his players, who were fighting for the good old red and blue. Peacock was injured in the East Orange game, but a short rest put him back in the next game. One of the good features about the season was that no member of the team was seriously injured, and all played like a machine.

The first three games of the season were easy, Somerville, Westfield and Randolph Military Academy falling in the order named before the locals attack and all being held scoreless while 98 points were credited to the Plainfield eleven. The first reverse of the year came when Rahway appeared on Parker Field and that was the best game of the season, the Rahway players being lucky to win. This was the hardest contest that the Rahway eleven was forced to play for the State championship. The second defeat came right on top of that, when the East Orange aggregation completely outclassed the locals and walloped them to the tune of 42 to 7. This was the worst drubbing of the season. New Brunswick lacked five points at the end of the game and the locals relinquished a game to Phillipsburg at that place in the last few minutes. Morris High School came to the fore in the last few minutes of play on Parker Field and put the ball between the bars for three points that defeated Plainfield. The season was ended with a tie game against the Alumni on Thanksgiving Day, which was one of the best exhibitions of the season.

Among the old players that showed up well all season were Peacock, Greene, Rosenson and Daniells. Much credit also belongs to Coaches Patch and Woodman. The record of the team follows:

P. H. S.
31	Somerville High School	0
19	Westfield High School	0
44	Randolph M. A.	0
13	Rahway High School	20
7	East Orange H. S.	42
12	New Brunswick H. S.	7
7	Phillipsburg H. S.	14
7	Morris High School	9

Daniells and Greene are tied for the most points scored by an individual player, having contributed six touchdowns each to their team's total. Rosenson comes next, having scored three touchdowns and kicked thirteen goals from touchdowns. W. Peacock scored two touchdowns, and Wheelan, Smith, Mutnick, Alpaugh and Semer each scored one. Two points were scored on a safety in the game with Randolph.

ROBINS TAKE PAIR FROM SPARROW TEAM

Drop the First Game But Easily Win the Second and Third.

The Robins took the odd game from the Sparrows in the Knights of Columbus five man bowling tournament last night. After dropping the first the Robins took the next two without any trouble, several two hundred scores giving them higher totals than their opponents. Shannon started off for the Sparrows with a 201 while Kennedy, of the Robins made his first score 144. The Sparrows obtained a big lead and then Sullivan's 224 for the Robins could not increase the score enough to win.

The Robins started off poorly in the second game but a 252 by Green, which was high score of the night, put the game safely away as the Sparrow pinners' highest mark was 161. The scores of this game were 941 to 775. Wilson hit for a 210 in the deciding roll and Coffey's 170 was the highest for the Sparrows, the former winning the game and match, the score being 813 to 741.

The score:

SPARROWS.
Shannon	201	160	148
Coffey	124	159	170

PRINCETON ELEVEN WANTS ANOTHER CRACK AT LOCALS

Members of the Princeton Colored Y. M. C. A. football team have prepared the following communication which has been forwarded to the sporting editor of the Daily Press and is self-explanatory:

A friendly rivalry has always existed between the Oriole football team of Plainfield, and the Princeton Y. M. C. A. For two successive years on Thanksgiving Day, the Princess Y. M. C. A. has consented to take their football team away from home and to come to Plainfield. Such is the willingness of the Princeton sportsmen to show their appreciation of Plainfield courtesy.

The Princeton people naturally expected a return game with the Oriole team, since the year before they had left home and given the Oriole team a return game.

On Thanksgiving Day, the two teams met on Parker Field, Plainfield. The referee and umpire were both secured by the Plainfield men. The umpire being the head coach of their football team. The game was hotly contested and then the officials began to give very questionable decisions.

The head linesman of the game, who was a Princeton man, was absolutely ignored by the other two officials.

At one time in the game when the ball had been lost on downs by the Plainfield men, the Orioles objected, and the referee remarked that he knew the ball was Princeton's, but to stop the Plainfield men's objections he was going to allow them to keep the ball at this time. The Oriole team was actually allowed six downs.

At about the end of the first half, a question arose concerning the time. By several of the spectators' watches and the watch of the timekeeper, the time was up. But the stop-watch of the head linesman had been stopped and was not started again. At this time the Plainfield men were allowed eight minutes overtime in which to score the touchdown which they eventually did

The people of Princeton are expecting a return game with the Orioles. This team, considering their victory, should be most anxious to consent to a return game. But several of the players on the Orioles object, saying that they had enough of Princeton.

No excuse was given by the Plainfield men save the very poor excuse of Manager Hobson, who refused to bring the team because Captain Kline would not play These two poor excuses bear the semblance of "cold feet."

The Princeton team challenges the Oriole team to come to Princeton on or after December 5 and to play the return game they owe, or be branded as a team of very poor sportsmen with cold pedal extremities.

The Princeton team wishes no hard feelings. It is only a question of a square deal. Should a similar question arise with Princeton in Plainfield's position, our boys can be depended upon to do the right thing.

BOB HEBERT RETURNS TO BOROUGH HIGH SCHOOL

The hearts of the North Plainfield High School basketball fans were made glad once more when Bob Hebert, who left school about three weeks ago to take up business work in New York, returned this morning to once more resume studies in the Borough High School.

"Bob," had been one of the many valuable athletes that North Plainfield High School lost and his return was certainly welcomed.

He is also a good baseball player and being one of last year's stars the baseball team was also glad to hear of his return.

CROW SCOUTS OF DUNELLEN WON COURT GAME YESTERDAY

The Crow Patrol, Boy Scouts of America basketball team, of Dunellen, defeated the Rooster Patrol of the same place on the Presbyterian court, yesterday, by the score of 29 to 20.

The game was close throughout and it was only in the last few minutes that the Crows drew away from their opponents. Dealaman and Russell starred for the Crows, while Morris and Nelson were the main point getters for the losers.

The score:

CLINTON AND BRUGGY ARE SOME BASKET GETTERS

During the past two weeks Frank Bruggy, who formerly played baseball in this city, but who is at present playing basketball on the Gloversville team in the New York State League, dropped from eleventh to thirteenth place in the individual standings and his team took a big slump, losing first place and going to fourth. To date Bruggy has been in fifteen games and has made a total of 68 points, divided into 26 field goals and sixteen fouls. Bruggy plays guard on the team.
in the deciding roll and Coffey's 170

Jimmy Clinton, one time one of the best baseball pitchers in this section, is now playing basketball in the New York State League. He is playing with the Cohoes team and in a game against the Bay View team last Sunday, was the whole show. Clinton plays forward and in this game scored 17 of his team's 21 points, getting 6 field goals and 5 fouls.

He has been seen in this city many times on the diamond and pitched for the High Bridge team in the Central New Jersey League several years ago.

SHOTS AND MISSES

Leal School basketeers will send their season's schedule underway tomorrow afternoon when they are slated to entertain the Roselle High School outfit on the local court. Indications point to a good attraction as a curtain raiser for the schoolboys on the Y. M. C. A. court and a large number of rooters will probably turn out.

The local private schoolboys will follow up tomorrow's performance with their annual game against the Upsala College quintet at Kenilworth.

Tentative arrangements have been made bteween the managerial forces of the Plainfield High School feminine Alumni team and the North Plainfield High School girls' sextet for a contest on the Saengerbund Hall court Friday night. This should prove a banner attraction and will give the constituents of the two schools an opportunity to size up their representatives in the feminine Interscholastic League. The P. H. S. Alumni players defeated the P. H. S. five, Saturday afternoon, and interest centers around the outcome of their tussel with the borough forces at this time.

Coach Ralph S. Patch took charge of the Plainfield High School basketball squad yesterday afternoon. This is the first time that the coach has been able to be present at a practice owing to the activity of the football eleven. From now on some hard work will be on the card for the localites who play their opening contest next week.

Bob Hebert's return to North Plainfield High School as a student is the source for considerable enthusiasm in the basketball camp. Hebert is recognized as a clever forward and will undoubtedly prove a valuable addition to the school's court quintet.

Saturday night the Y. M. C. A. team will entertain the Summit association five on the local court. The visitors come here with an excellent reputation and the Plainfielders will have to travel at top speed in order to make a creditable showing.

Hope Chapel is due to lineup against the Hope Memorial five, of Elizabeth, here, Saturday night.

N. P. H. S. VS. KEARNEY BOROUGHITES OPENER

The North Plainfield High School basketball team will play its first game of the season tomorrow afternoon at Kearny. This has been the first game of the season for the borough team for several years and the locals will be greatly handicapped by the court, which is very long and narrow with cement floor and iron girders on the sides. Last season the boroughites went there and won by one point after battling ten minutes overtime.

Captain Abrams will take several substitutes along and the team will probably lineup as follows: Townley and Conroy, forwards; VanMater, centre; Abrams and Hebert, guards.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat Also Take Glass of Salts Before Eating Breakfast.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water, also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

MUZZLED THE PRESS.

Sir Roger L'Estrange Was the Worst Censor In History.

The severest press censor of which English history bears record was Sir Roger L'Estrange. This worthy was appointed to the post in 1663, and he threw himself whole heartedly into his duties. According to C. B. Roylance Kent, "he suggested that the number of master printers in London be reduced from sixty to twenty, that printing offices be subject to inspection and have no back doors and that in addition to the ordinary treasonable and seditious publications culprits convicted of small infractions of the law be condemned to wear some visible badge or mark of ignominy, as a halter instead of a hatband, one stocking blue and another red, a blue bonnet with a red letter T or S upon it."

But L'Estrange went further. He was opposed to newspapers altogether, because the reading of them "makes the multitude too familiar with the actions and counsels of their superiors too pragmatical and censorious and gives them not only an itch, but a kind of right and license to be meddling with the government." All newspaper criticisms on the government were rigorously suppressed during his censorship. Indeed, he succeeded so effectively in muzzling the press that "his majesty said several times he wondered how it could be done."—London Chronicle.

Already Mis' Winslow was walking back to the house; the other two women overtook her, and from the porch they heard the children begin to sing: "Go bury St. Nicklis." The rest was lost in the closing of the door.

Back in the sitting room the women stood looking at one another. Mis' Bates was frowning and all Mis' Morran's expressions were on the verge of dissolving; but in Mis' Winslow's face it was as though she had found some new way of consciousness.

"Ladies," Mis' Winslow said, "them children are out there pretending to bury Santa Claus—and so are we. And I bet we can't any of us do it.

"Ladies," she said, "I don't want we should go back on our paper, either. But mebbe there's more to Christmas than it knows about—or than we know about. Mebbe we can do something that won't interfere with the paper we've all signed, and yet that'll be something that is something. Mebbe they's things to use that ain't never been used yet. Oh, I dunno. Nor I guess you dunno. Let us find out!"

Christmas week came.

Cities by thousands made preparation. Great shops took on vast cargoes of silk and precious things and seemed ready to sail about, distributing gifts to the town, and thought better of it and let folk come in numbers to them to pay toll for what they took. Banks opened their doors and poured out now a little trickling stream of pay envelopes, now a torrent of green and gold. Flower stalls drew tribute from a million pots of earth where miracles had been done. Pastry counters, those mock commissariats, delicately masking as servants to necessity, made ready their pretty pretences to nutrition. The woods came moving in—acres of living green, taken in their sleep, their roots left faithful to a tryst with the sap, their tops summoned to bear a hybrid fruitage. From cathedrals rose the voices of children, now singing little carols and hymns in praise of the Christ Child, now speaking little verses in praise of the saint, Nicholas; now clamoring for little new possessions. And afar from the fields that lay empty about the clustered roofs of towns came a chorus of voices of the live things, beast and fowl, being offered up in the gorgeous pagan rites of the day.

Hither and yonder in every city the grown townsfolk ran. The most bad lists of names—Grace, Margaret, Laura, Alice, Miriam, John, Philip, father, mother—beautiful names and of rich portent, so that, remembering the time, one would have said that these were entered there with some import of special comradeship, of being face to face, of having realized in little what will some day be true in large. But on looking closer the lists were found to have quite other connotations, as Grace, bracelet; Margaret, spangled scarf; Laura, chafing dish; Philip, smoking set; father (Memo: Ask mother what she thinks he'd like). And every name, it seemed, stood for some bestowal of new property, mostly of luxuries, and chiefly of luxuries of decoration. And the minds of the buying adults were like lakes played upon by clouds and storm birds and lightning, and, to be sure, many stars, but all in unutterable confusion.

Also from the cargo laden shops there came other voices in thousands, but these were mostly answers. And when one, understanding Christmas, listened to hear what part in it these behind the counter played, he heard from them no voice of sharing in the theory of peace, or even of truce, but instead:

"Two a yard and double width. Jewelry is in the annex. Did you want three pairs of each? Veils and neckwear three aisles over. Leather, glassware, baskets, ribbons, down the store beyond the notions. Toys and dolls are in the basement—toys and dolls are in the basement. Jewelry is in the annex."

So that a great part of the town seemed some strong chorus of invocation to new possessions.

But there were other voices. Whole areas of every town lay perforce within the days of Christmas week—it must have been so; for there is only one calendar to embrace humanity, as there is only one way of birth and breath and death, one source of tears, one functioning for laughter. But to these reaches of the town the calendar was like another thing, for, though it was upon them in name, its very presence was withdrawn. In those ill smelling stairways and lofts there was little to divulge the imminence of anything other than themselves. And wherever some echo of Christmas week had crept the wistfulness or the lust was for possession also. But here one could understand its insistence. So here the voices said only, "I wish—I wish," and "I choose this—and this," at windows, or, "If I had back my nickel." "Don't you go expecting nothink!" And over these went the whir of machinery, beat of treadles, throb of engines or the silence of forced idleness or of the disease of dereliction. It was a time of many pagan observances, as when some were decked in precious stuffs and some were thrown to lions.

To all these in the towns Christmas week came, and of them all not many stood silent and looked Christmas week in the face. Yet it is a human experience that none is meant to die without sharing, for the season is the symbol of what happens to folk if they claim it.

Christmas is the time of withdrawal of most material life. It is the time when nature subtracts the externals, hides from man the phenomena of even her evident processes. Left alone, his thought turns inward and outward, which is to say it lays hold upon the flowing force so slightly externalized in himself. If he finds in his own being a thousand obstructions, a thousand persons—dogs, sorcerers, scandalmongers—he will try to escape from them all back to the externals. But if he finds there a channel which the substance of being is using he will be no stranger, but a familiar, with himself. Only when the channel has been long cleared, when there has left it all consciousness of striving, of self in any form, only when he finds himself empty, ready, immaculate, will he have the divine adventure. For it is then that in him the spirit of God will have its birth, then that he will first understand his own nature, the nature of being.

CHAPTER X.

The Turn.

THEN the turn of the year comes in; the year begins to mount. Birth is in it; growth is in it; spring is in it. Sometimes, away back in beginnings, they knew this. They knew that the time of the winter solstice is in some strange fashion the high moment of the year, as the beginning of new activity in nature and in the gods. They solemnized the return of the fiery sun wheel; they traced in those solstice days the operations on earth of Odin and Berchta; they knew in themselves a thing they could not name, and when the supreme experience took place in Christ they made the one experience typify the other and became conscious of the divine nature of this nativity. So, by the illuminati, the prophets, the adepts, the time that followed was yearly set aside—forty days of dwelling within the temple of self, forty days of reverence for being, of consciousness of new birth. Then the emergence, then the apotheosis of expression typifying and typified by spring—the time when bursting, pressing life almost breaks bounds, when birth and the impulse to birth are in every form of life, without and within. These festivals are not arbitrary in date. They grow out of the universal experience.

Is it not then cause for stupefaction that this time of "divine bestowal" should have become so physical a thing? From the ancient perception, to have slipped into a sense of annual social comradeship and good will and peace was natural and fine—to live in the little what will some day be true in the large. But from this to have plunged down into a time of frantic physical bestowals, of "present trading," of lists of Grace and Margaret and Philip, of teeming shops with hunting and hunted creatures within, of sacrificial trees and beasts, of a sovereign sense of good for me and mine and a shameless show of Lord and Lady Bountiful—how can that have come about? How can the great festival have been so dishonored?

Not all dishonored, for within it is its own vitality which nothing can dishonor. Through all the curious variations which it receives at our hands, something shines and sings; self giving, joy giving, a vast, dim upflickering on humanity of what this thing really is that it seeks to observe, this thing that grips men so that no matter what they are about, they will drop it at the touch of the gong and turn to some expression, however crooked and thwarted, of the real spirit of the time. If in war, then bayonets are stacked and holly wreathed, and candles stuck on each point! If at sea some sailor climbs out on the bowsprit with a wreath of green. If on the western plains a turkey wishbone for target will make the sport, at fifty paces; if at home, some great extravagance or some humble gift or some poignant wish will point the day. If at church, then mass and carol; in certain hearts reverence. Everywhere the time takes hold of folk and receives whatever of greatness or grotesqueness they choose to give it. So, too, the actual and vital experience which it brings to humanity is universal, is offered with cosmic regularity, cannot be escaped. Through all the tumult of the time Christmas week and the time that lies near to it is always waiting to claim its own, to take to itself those who will not be deceived, who see in the stupendous yearly pageant only the usual spectacle of humanity trying to say divine things in terms of things physical, because the time for the universal expression is not yet come.

When that time comes, when the time of the worship of things shall be past, when the tribal sense of holiday shall have given place to the family sense, and that family shall be mankind; when shall never be seen the anomaly of celebrating in a glorification of little family tables, whose crumbs fall to those without, the birth of him who preached brotherhood, and the mockery of observing with wanton spending the birth of him who had not where to lay his head; when the rudiments of divine perception, of self perception, of social perception, shall have grown to their next estate; when the area of consciousness shall be extended yet farther toward the outermost; when that new knowledge with which the air is charged shall let man begin to know what he is; when that time comes they will look back with utmost wonder at our uncouth gropings to note and honor something whose import we so obscurely discern, but perhaps, too, with wonder that so much of human love and divining should shine for us through the mists we make.

Two days before Christmas Ellen Bourne went through the new fallen snow of their wood lot. Her feet left scuffled tracks clouded about by the brushing of her gown's wet hem and by a dragging corner of shawl. She came to a little evergreen tree, not four feet tall, with low growing boughs, and she stood looking at it until her husband, who was also following the snow filled path, overtook her.

"Matthew," she said then, "will you cut me that?"

Matthew Bourne stood with his ax on his shoulder and looked a question in slow preparation to ask one.

"I just want it," she said. "I've took a notion."

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

She had vibrated between the living room and the bedrooms for half an hour, answering the one and forty demands of three restless children who fought sleep to the last ditch.

Quiet at last reigned, and she sank wearily into the low rocker with her mending basket in her lap, utterly spent.

"Have you read the war news, dear?" asked her husband in a remote tone. His mind was away on the firing line.

"No, I have been too busy keeping tab on skirmishing along the home front," she answered.

Her husband chuckled, but did not look up. She waited for him to finish the paper, but the contending armies must have had a full day, judging from the length of time it took to read of their doings. Finally she said, "George, I think you will have to get Richard a suit of clothes for school. He is big enough now to wear a complete boy's suit."

"Has your allowance given out?" George inquired, his mind still intent on attacks and counter attacks on the other side of the earth.

"I wonder if you think those children are a luxury I have set up on my own account," rejoined his wife. You surely act on that supposition. Do you expect me to put Richard through college on my allowance?" Her irritated tone penetrated even to the firing line and Mr. Stanley laid down his paper and looked at his wife inquiringly. Seeing that she had an audience, she continued:

"Ever since those children were born I have supported them from my allowance; their clothes, amusements, everything except the rare doctor's bills and what toys you have purchased as presents has come out of my personal allowance, and their food from the housekeeping allowance, and there has been no increase in either for years. It's not fair. I knew you were making every effort to get your business on a firm foundation and I did not want to ask you for more, especially as my allowance originally was a very liberal one."

Mr. Stanley scratched his head with a whimsical expression on his face. Finally he said:

"My, but you have your brush dipped in tar tonight. I don't recognize myself."

She laughed as she drew her chair up to his big one. "I guess I am more than usually tired tonight. This has been one of the days you live through by hanging on and remembering all things come to an end sometime." He patted the bowed brown head as she continued: "I do think there should be a readjustment of expenses. I am not able any longer to clothe myself and the three children on my allowance."

"Such an efficient little wife makes a beast of a husband," George broke in. "Everything runs so smoothly, he gets to thinking it's the nature of the thing, or rather he never thinks of it. What do you want for clothing the children?"

"Suppose I go over my expense account and see just what their clothing has cost; from that I can make an estimate. Not tonight, though; I am too tired to add," and she put her head on his knee.

"You must not let those little beggars wear you out like this. Isn't there some way you can make things easier for yourself?" he asked.

"Everything will be all right when I have had a night's sleep. Your sympathy lifts pounds," and she sighed contentedly.

FASHION HINT

By JUDIC CHOLLET

Here is a transfer pattern for embroidering a doily ten and a half inches in diameter. The scalloped edge is padded and buttonholed. The letters and the smoke escaping from the cup of tea, the lines representing the table and the outline of cup and saucer, are to be done in outline stitch, or they may be worked solid.

Pad the scallops by darning backward and forward several times or work chain stitch between the lines; then buttonhole closely over this foundation. To outline the stem take short stitches, keeping the needle toward the right, and work upward. Long and short stitch is made by taking short, irregular stitches close together, working slantwise from the centers toward the outer edges of the pattern. When making the solid Kensington stitch always begin a petal or leaf at the top and work toward the base. Take one two, three short stitches and then a long stitch. Work backward and forward, instead of through and through, and the top or right side of the work will be solid, while the wrong side will show a succession of small stitches.

Use washable floss or embroidery cotton.

This May Manton pattern comes in one size only. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, 634, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage. When ordering use coupon.

Daddy's Bedtime Story— Mimi Meow's Adventures In the War.

She Curled Up For a Little Nap Before Tea.

"MIMI MEOW sat before the fire in the library and thoughtfully yawned; then she licked her chops and curled up for a little nap before tea." Daddy was beginning the evening story.

"But Mimi Meow was not to be left undisturbed. Chow Chow, the tiny doggie, came trotting in and sat down beside her for a friendly chat.

"'Tell me all about how you and Mistress Alice got away from Paris, will you, Mimi Meow?' asked Chow Chow.

"Mimi Meow blinked her eyes sleepily and looked very important. 'Why, I've told the story before. You must find it interesting.'

"'Yes, I do. I'm only very sorry that I couldn't have been with you and Mistress Alice,' said Chow Chow.

"'Well, it was a terrible experience, I'll admit,' said Mimi Meow. 'Why, for two days I couldn't get my milk, and when I did get it mistress was so worried that she didn't warm it for me.

"'And my ribbons were a sight. You know, I always have such beautiful ones, and they got soiled and bedraggled, and half the time they wouldn't be kept tied and'—

"'Oh, tell me about the way you and Mistress Alice got to London from Paris!' begged Chow Chow.

"'Well, of course, we were almost obliged to go, you know,' continued Mimi Meow, 'so Mistress Alice put me in a basket which she bought, and then we went to the station, where we had to wait ever and ever so long for a train—a half an hour, I should say. Then we went into a parlor car coach and rode very comfortably to Calais.

"'It was taking the boat at Calais to cross the English channel that upset me worse than anything that happened in the war zone. It's terribly choppy and rough, you see, and I was so sick.

"'Then, you know, when we got to Dover from Calais they were not going to let me into England because they thought I was a doggie. Now, what do you think of that?'

"'I think that it is just as well I was not with Mistress Alice in Paris,' replied Chow Chow. 'And you certainly did have a terrible time in the war zone.'

"'Yes, I did,' admitted Mimi Meow.

"'It seems fine to lie here perfectly safe and comfy after my thrilling experiences. I certainly hope I shall never be so unfortunate as to be obliged to drink cold milk and wear bedraggled ribbons again. Now, you must keep quiet, Chow Chow, because I want to take "forty winks" before tea.'"

Household Hints

FLORIDA HONEY

Peel one lemon, one orange and one grapefruit. Separate into sections and remove all the pulp. Let stand twenty-four hours.

Add three times as much water as pulp and cook ten minutes. Let stand twenty-four hours.

Add sugar measure for measure and cook to consistency of marmalade.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Some people love salted peanuts, but do not digest them. Do not remove the thin red skin. The skin aids digestion.

To use eggs put down with water glass, let them lie in cold water over night, then they will be like fresh eggs.

THE TABLE

A quarter of a head of cabbage (green), one ounce butter, four large potatoes, one ounce drippings, salt and pepper, the rest of chopped parsley. Put potatoes in a tin and bake, basting well with the drippings. Boil the cabbage. First remove all brown or faded leaves and hard part of stalk; lay in cold water and boil hard half hour; add a spoonful of salt about ten minutes before you take off the fire, strain thoroughly, and chop fine. Keep hot until ready to use it. When potatoes are well baked, take out and cut about an inch off the top, so that you can scoop it out without breaking the skin, then mash well, mixing in butter and a spoonful of milk, and the mashed cabbage. Take a piece of stiff white paper (writing paper will do), and make a kind of funnel by which you can fill the potato skins with the mixture, put into oven for a couple of minutes to brown the top, and decorate with a sprinkling of parsley.

The first recipe, "Galway call cannon," is the real thing; the secret is in seeing the potatoes are beaten as light as a feather.

Stewed Chicken With Dumplings—Cut up chicken, put in cold water in pot to boil. When boiling, skim off scum which has formed on top and season with salt and pepper. Boil until tender, then remove chicken and put in boiling broth.

Stew chicken till tender. Thicken gravy as for ordinary chicken gravy. Take one cup flour, one teaspoon baking powder, pinch salt. Then rub one small tablespoon lard into flour. Beat one egg light. Add enough milk to make a thick batter that will drop from spoon. Drain chicken gravy into roasting pan, drop batter in and bake fifteen or twenty minutes. To just boil dumplings, omit the lard and boil in gravy, covered tightly.

Whip-Cream Pancakes—One-half cup sweet cream, one tablespoon sugar; whip till stiff; one pint sour milk or buttermilk, teaspoon soda stirred in sour milk; one teaspoon salt; enough flour to make rather stiff pancake batter. Bake as other griddle cakes.

Croquettes of Odds and Ends—Use any bits of good food that happen to be left from one or more meals and in such small quantities that they cannot be warmed up separately. For example: A small piece of veal steak, the lean meat of one or two mutton chops, two hard-boiled eggs, a little cold chopped potato, a little mashed potato, a couple pieces of chicken, or a little salmon, scraps of hash, cold rice, boiled oatmeal left from breakfast, bits of bacon, pork or ham. Take any of these things, well chopped or taken through the food grinder, season to taste and mix with one raw egg, a little flour and melted butter and boiling water, then make into round or oval cakes and fry brown. They should be put together with care, so as not to have them too dry to be palatable, or too moist to cook in shape.

But how much worse if he dies penniless.

Yet had he started to save about 10 cents a day when he was 20 years old and had put this saving into life insurance he would have left a policy of $2,500.

HOLIDAY RUSH AT THE POSTOFFICE

Postmaster A. E. Hoagland Offers Some Timely Suggestions.

SEND YOUR MAIL EARLY

Don't "Swamp" the Service by Waiting Until Last Week to Send Gifts—Interesting Facts About Local Office.

Postmaster Alvin E. Hoagland offers some timely suggestions to the public apropos the usual holiday rush of mail at the local postoffice; and he especially urges that people send their Christmas mail early, wrap it securely, address it plainly. He also suggests the use of the tags "don't open until Christmas," for those who want to send gifts away at this time. Mr. Hoagland says that the "rush" has begun, and he hopes that the public will not "swamp" the service by holding mail back until the last week before Christmas.

Some data regarding the local service and the strength of the force here is interesting at this time. There is a total of twenty-six carriers, each one delivering daily on an average about 117 pounds of mail, the total being about 1,054 pieces of mail matter. The average distance covered by a carrier is 11¼ miles. They make on the average two trips, while some of them make three and four trips. Recently, one carrier took out 95 pounds of mail on one morning trip.

The parcels post deliveries are made with a horse and wagon, averaging 285 pieces of mail daily and covering a distance of about twenty-five miles. There is a total number of 116 letter-boxes from which mail is collected daily, twice by letter-carriers on their day trips and once by a regular collector at night.

All mail arriving by the 5:30 a. m. mail is delivered by carriers on morning trips; all mail arriving by the 1:30 p. m. mail is delivered on the afternoon trips; all mail collected from boxes by carriers on morning trip in residence section is despatched in the first outgoing mail after 12 o'clock noon; that collected on afternoon trip on first mail after 4 o'clock in the afternoon; that collected at night on first mail out after 6 o'clock in the morning. In the business section the mail is collected from boxes seven times a day. There is four times more mail handled in the month of December than in any other month of the year.

In the business section there is delivered on an average 1,406 letters a day, 30 pounds of letters and including all mail, 1,720 pieces weighing 114 pounds. In the residence section each carrier averages 1,013 pieces of mail weighing 91 pounds and he covers a distance of twelve miles on his two trips.

There is a total force of 47 clerks and carriers including the assistant postmaster, William B. Sharp.

CALL EXTENDED TO REV HENRY MEISER

Pastor Who Has Been Supplying Temporarily at St. Stephen's Responds.

The vestry of St. Stephen's church, in Netherwood, has extended a unanimous call to Rev. Henry Meiser, formerly of Kingston, N. Y., to assume the vacancy caused by the death of Rev. Warner E. L. Ward, as the result of a meeting held Monday night. Dr. Meiser has been officiating in St. Stephen's church since October 1, having been a personal friend of the deceased rector and supplying here in the emergency.

Rev. Mesier is a graduate of the General Theological Seminary, New York City, in the Class of 1896 and was ordered Deacon and Priest by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Littlejohn, of Long Island, in 1896 and 1897. He was assistant for four years at St. John's church Far Rockaway, until the death of the rector and became rector of the same parish for nine years following. Mr. Mesier was also Archdeacon of Queens and Nassau, in the church extension work outside of Brooklyn on Long Island and was for two years rector of St. John's Kingston, N. Y.

COMMISSION WILL MEET WITH MAYOR

Newly Selected Relief Committee to Organize Tonight.

In accordance with his announcement of Monday, Mayor Percy H. Stewart has selected four members to compose the Commission for the Relief of the Unemployed in Plainfield and this body has chosen its assisting force to begin active work along definitely stated lines. Working in co-operation with the local branch of the Charity Organization the commission has divided its endeavors into four classes with one commission member at the head of each. The various departments and the chairmen appointed are: Survey and Publicity, William H. Wherry, chairman; relief, Samuel T. Carter, Jr., chairman; employment, Duncan W. Taylor, chairman; and finance, A. M. Harris, chairman.

Mr. Wherry, who is also connected with the Charity Organization, has selected the following to assist in the publicity work, John A. Gaffney, William R. Townsend, Cornelius B. Taylor, Henry E. Haws and Leslie R. Fort. Chairman Carter, of the relief committee, is president of the Charity Organization, and has the following committeemen picked: Councilman Charles Graves, Emerson E. Parvin, Captain Wall, of the Salvation Army; Henry L. De Forest, A. B. Jones and W. H. P. Veysey.

The employment committee, headed by Mr. Taylor, has been picked as follows: Newton B. Smalley, William Newcorn, William F. Taliaferro, James T. McMurray, Abiel D. Edgar, John Cose, W. G. Besler and Joseph W. Gavett. Mr. Harris has picked Augustus V. Heely, Charles W. McCutcheon, Louis Hyde, Frank H. Smith, David T. Kenney, Herman Schwed, Ernest R. Ackerman, Elliot T. Barrows, Howard McWilliams and T. J. Mumford for the finance committee.

With the $150 donated by Major Stewart as an initial contribution the commission will start a campaign to raise funds for the relief work and it is probable that definite plans will be made for this campaign at a meeting of the body to be held tonight.

The exercises will be held at the convenience of the members of the lodge, between December 7 and 18. They will be in the afternoon and will not interferer with the regular routine work of the school.

Exercises will be held at both the Somerset and Watchung Schools and the flags will be accepted by members of the Board of Education.

RUSH TO PAY TAXES

Plainfielders Encountered Little Difficulty in Complying With Law—Telephone Patrons Pay Extra Fees for Fifteen Cent Calls.

Employes of local department stores, drug stores, cafes, five and ten-cent stores and other business houses have been working overtime during the last two days affixing stamps to various taxable articles in accordance with the provisions of the war tax enactment, which went into effect yesterday. Despite the fact that in other districts the tremendous crush of those bent on paying their taxes has tied up the offices of the internal revenue collectors, local merchants experienced little trouble in getting their credentials at the Elizabeth postoffice. Thousands of people in many cities spent hours yesterday rushing to the offices of the collectors, alarmed over their inability to obtain revenue stamps to comply with the war revenue tax law, but they were needlessly frightened over what might happen if they were not on the minute with their stamps. The Internal Revenue Bureau in Washington has sent telegrams to collectors making it plain that the government has no intention of prosecuting anyone who shows that he is willing to purchase stamps and pay.

Local dealers, as a whole, were able to comply with the law which

SCHOOL CHILDREN SELL RED CROSS SEALS

Big Demand Yesterday When They Were First Offered to Public.

One of the most sucessful methods of disposing of Red Cross Christmas Seals in the past has been to have the school children in Plainfield act as salesmen, and this method has been adopted again this year. The North Plainfield Board of Education would not permit the pupils in the schools in that municipality to handle the seals, but in the city the young people are playing an important part in aiding the anti-tuberculosis work.

The seals were placed on sale yesterday for the first time, and at all the local agencies a large number were disposed of. Not a few business houses took a thousand of them, and agreed to place them on all the mail sent one, and one or two merchants went further and will place them on packages which they deliver to customers.

Manager Sanderson, of the Proctor Theatre, has agreed to help along the work by displaying a slide on the moving picture screen, calling attention to the seals. Mr. Sanderson has never consented to permit any advertising matter of any kind to be displayed in the theatre, other than his own announcements, and he has given the worthy cause a big boost by his willingness to co-operate with the committee to this extent.

Seals are on sale at the City National Bank, State Trust Company, First National Bank, Estil's stationery store (Will H. Williams), Laing's book store, A. E. Force & Company, Plainfield Milk and Cream Company, Queen City Hotel, Randolph's drug store, Schwed Brothers, Woman's Exchange, Y. M. C. A., Charity Organization Society, by the public school and Sunday-school children. As the holidays approach there will be stands, in charge of a committee of young women, located at convenient places in the city.

WILL HOLD CHRISTMAS DANCE.

The annual Christmas dance of the Park Club will be held on the night of December 23. This event is always a large one and is enjoyed by many club members and their friends. The next informal dance of the club will be held on Saturday night December 12.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 52 degrees; 11 a. m., 55 degrees; 1 p. m., 57 degrees

OLD EMBANKMENT BEING REMOVED

This and Other Improvements Reported at Civic Association Meeting.

The East End Civic Association held an interesting and pleasant meeting last evening in the Netherwood Reformed church. In spite of the unpleasant weather a large number of the residents in that part of the city were present, both men and women. The first part of the evening was spent in the discussion of matters of general interest. It was reported that men are at work leveling the old railway embankment on Midway avenue; also that Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed has under consideration the status of East Second street as a public highway.

A contribution was made by the members to the fund for a "Community Christmas," which is being planned by a committee of the Federation of Men's Clubs of Plainfield. After the business session refreshments were served by a committee of women, and a social hour was enjoyed. The women in charge of the refreshments were Mrs. O. E. Mogensen, Mrs. O. F. R. Bruce, Mrs. A. R. Humble, Mrs. T. W. Sharpe and Mrs. Calhoun. The Association by a hearty vote thanked the women for their hospitality.

INFORMAL DANCE TO BE GIVEN BY LOCAL ELKS

Another of the winter series of receptions to be held by the members of the local Elks' Club will be conducted in the Watchung avenue home Thursday night, December 10. The affair will be an informal one and will be featured by dancing and various novelty numbers which a busy committee is now preparing.

Invitations will be issued to club members and their friends and arrangements are being made to entertain 20 guests. The clubhouse will be thrown open to the visitors and the members will be given an opportunity to conduct their friends through the new structure, a large number of persons not yet having the chance to view the interior.

WILL SPEAK ON MOST THREATENING PHASE OF WAR

The third talk in Miss Janet E. Richards' series of Current Topic talks for this winter will be given tomorrow afternoon at the Hartridge Auditorium. Miss Richards announces that she will speak on the latest and most threatening phase in the European conflict,—the fear of a Holy War, stirring up all Islam, following the call of the Sultan of Turkey to all the followers of the Phophet to take up arms against the Allies.

The Mexican situation will be brought up to date, and President Wilson's latest move for the settlement of the Colorado miners' strike by the establishment of a Commission with Seth Low of New York as Chairman, for the attempted settlement of industrial disputes in the future. Miss Richards believes this to be a big and important subject. As usual, minor questions of interest and importance will be discussed during the course of the afternoon's talk. Doors will be open at 2:30 o'clock and the lecture will begin promptly at 3:30. Season and single admission tickets will be on sale at the door.

DUNELLENITES SETTLE ARGUMENT WITH FISTS

Dunellen residents have been kept busy the past few days, discussing the merits and interests of an altercation in which two of its prominent citizens engaged in Monday evening. The two men are rivals in business and competition fanned a slight argument into a flaming quarrel. Being anti-law court disciples they decided to settle their differences in pugilistic style. With a number of friends they adjourned over the borough line, pummeled one another until the worst finished cried "Uncle," and then they quit.

The details of the affair were not given to the palpitating public so speculation is rife. Considerable zest is lent the tiff by the fact that one of the participants is a special policeman in the borough service.

MODERN WAYS OF LIGHTING

Expert Told Board of Trade Members About Various Methods Now in Vogue.

EFFICIENCY VS. COST

Efforts to Be Made to Allow Bars to Remain Open Extra Hour—Co-operation of Board Sought by Building Trades.

Modern methods of illumination were described to the members of the Board of Trade and their friends last night, at a well attended meeting held in Coward's Hall. There was a brief business meeting, preceding the talk, which was given by A. L. Powell, a representative of the Public Service Corporation. In the course of his address Mr. Powell illustrated the various kinds of electric bulbs, since they were first put on the market by Thomas A. Edison. He then explained, with the use of various colored lights, how the effect of various objects can be changed by directing the rays of light from different directions.

The latter part of Mr. Powell's talk was given over to showing a large number of lantern slides, which illustrated the proper method of lighting houses and stores, so that the greatest efficiency could be procured for the least amount of money. He also showed the use of modern electric cooking devices.

Prior to Mr. Powell's talk a nominating committee, consisting of Herman Schwed, Aug. Meisner and A. E. Force, was appointed, to name men for the annual election, which will be held January 5. A letter was read

FIRE APPARATUS TO BE CHANGED ABOUT

Netherwood Vehicles Going to No. 1 House When New Engine Arrives.

The city's newest automobile fire engine, ordered from the Nott Company, of Minneapolis, is due to arrive in Plainfield any day and, according to Chief T. O. Doane, its introduction to the service will only cause a slight readjustment of the present apparatus. If the new engine is placed at headquarters, the old Nott there now will be sent to Netherwood. The horse-drawn combination chemical and hose wagon and old-style steamer, now forming the Netherwood equipment, will be brought down town, taking the place of No. 1 hose wagon. The latter is the only piece of apparatus in the West Second street building. The efficiency from that section will be increased by the Netherwood combination's arrival and the stamer will be held in reserve. The present No. 1 hose is to be sold or used as a supply wagon.

The abolishment of the call system soon after the first of year will also mean an increase in the number of full-paid firemen. The councilmanic fire committee contemplates the appointment of only four new men at the start-off. Six names are to be submitted, but two of these will be to fill vacancies that have occured recently. Of the six, it is quite probable that George Leland, Roy McDonough and Harold Gloak, now doing special duty, will be retained, in realty leaving only three absolutely new men to come on. It is more than likely that all but one or two will do duty at headquarters, the others going to Netherwood because of the big engine to be there.

The fire committee of the Council has been securing estimates on the cost of motorizing all the horse apparatus in the city and the accomplishment of this will be brought about in the near future. The vehicles in this group include the present Netherwood combination, the No. 3 combination and the headquarters hook-and-ladder truck. The approximate cost, so far, figures at about $10,000.

WILL DISCUSS SUFFRAGE.

George LaMonte, State Commissioner of banking and insurance, and Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley, of New York, will address the members of Benevolent Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., at their meeting tomorrow night at the council rooms on Park avenue. They will speak on the subject of "Suffrage," having been invited to discuss the question. All persons interested are invited to attend the meeting.

KAISER'S FLEET IS IN NORTH SEA

London Hears That Ships in Kiel Canal Are Under Way.

NO DECISION IN POLAND

Artillery Duel Along Franco-Belgian Border Resumed With Little or No Gain by Either Side—Russians Dislodge Turks.

London, Dec. 2—That the German fleet, or at least a large part of the one which has its base at Kiel, has steamed out into the North Sea, is the information contained in despatches which have been received from Denmark by newspapers in this city. It is reported that there is the greatest activity in all the German dock yards. Thousands of mechanics have been brought back from the front and put to work constructing hydroaeroplanes, submarines and other craft.

The Times Petrograd correspondent wires there is still no definite decision in Poland. The Germans, while making desperate efforts to reinforce their army, which he believes can only be done from the Franco-Belgian lines, are holding their positions facing Lodz and Lowdicz despite awful climatic conditions.

In Petrograd there is no disposition to underrate the magnitude of the task still before the Russians. According to the military view, the situation is one of extraordinary and unprecedented importance. Nothing like it in respect to interest and danger has presented itself hitherto and the danger daily increases.

Despatches are reaching London which give hints that fighting in the Aisne region and east of the Vosges will soon be resumed on an active scale.

These despatches intimate this time that the Allies wil be on the offensive and are making preparations for an active campaign of that nature.

A correspondent declares the military situation is beginning to emerge in its true significance, and the battle of the Aisne, once relegated to history, may be resumed.

"The French headquarters staff has recently been closely inspecting the intrenched line from Belfort in the east to beyond Ypres, and the weakness of the enemy's line is beginning to reveal itself in vital places.

"Rheims today is being subjected to a fitful bombardment. It is held by the French, who have made the most exacting sacrifice any people could be called upon to make—a sacrifice of their most beautiful and sacred masterpiece. Rheims as seen today is a city of ruin and desolation.

"Every scar on what remains of its beautiful cathedral is a stab at the heart of France, and well the Germans know it. When the battle of the Aisne is resumed, as it will be, the Germans will be called upon to pay to the full the penalty for the crime of Rheims."

Another corespondent says, in spite of reports the Germans are retiring between Dixmude and the coast, they will probably make another effort to break through to the coast.

At the same time he repeats the German heavy guns have disappeared from the firing line, and even the light artillery is particularly active only at intervals.

He adds:

"Their one hope of success seems to depend upon their big guns, and

MAYOR AND COUNCIL DISCUSS STORM SEWERS

At an informal meeting of the Mayor and Council held in the Borough Hall, on Monday night, to discuss the proposed storm sewerage matter, the special committee of citizens appointed by Mayor Latham to assist the Council in its deliberations on the matter, was increased by the appointment of two additional boroughites, Postmaster H. S. Garretson and Lewis Schneider. There are now five members of this committee as follows: J. H. L. Peters, chairman; L. T. Churchill, Sigard Nicolaysen, H. S. Garretson and Lewis Schneider.

Mayor Latham was in Philadelphia on business for the day and did not arrive at the meeting until a rather late hour and as a consequence the meeting was a short one. The question of raising money for the cost of the work was discussed and the concensus of opinion seemed to be that the property directly benefitted by the improvement should bear most of the cost, which will probably be either 75 or 80 per cent. The proposed route of the trunk pipe to take care of the water accumulated along North avenue between Madison and Lincoln avenues, was gone into at length and it looks now as if the laying of storm sewerage pipe along North avenue will be postponed until work is started on the collecting sanitary sewerage system in the spring. The question of draining the properties in the vicinity of Madison avenue, however, is a very serious one and the probability is that action relative to taking care of the matter at once will be taken at next Tuesday's meeting of the Council.

Mrs. Jacob Fisher, of Washington avenue, is suffering with bronchitis.

Mrs. Clarence Vliet has so far recovered from her recent critical illness as to leave today for the South where she will spend sometime with her sister. It is hoped that the change will entirely restore her health and strength.

LIGHTING EXPLAINED

from H. F. Smith, of the Richmond, Va. Chamber of Commerce, in which he offered to come and speak at the annual banquet. President Jeffery said that he had consulted a number of members, and some of them fel. that it would not be advisable to hold a banquet this year, because of general business conditions. A. E. Force said that he believed a banquet should be held, and Herman Schwed moved that the matter be laid over until the January meeting.

A resolution was adopted, requesting the City Council to allow the hotels to keep their bars open one hour later in the evenings, so that people could secure service in the dining rooms after the theatres closed.

William H. Harding, as a representative of the Building Trades Council appeared to ask the co-operation of the Board in trying to force the Board of Education to adopt more economical ideas in the erection of schools in the future. He said that the mechanics did not want the people to think that there are any too many schools in Plainfield, but they do want to know why so much of their taxes should be spent to "inlay the buildings with ivory and pearls." He said that very good, fire-proof, school buildings had recently been erected in Cranford at a much less figure than was the case with recent buildings in this city. In his opinion the high expense of conducting the schools keeps people away from Plainfield.

Mr. Harding also said that until the Building Trades Council held a meeting last Friday night and protested, it had been necessary for any contractor who wished to figure on the new Evergreen Avenue School to go to New York to get a set of plans but that since the protest it had been publicly announced that they could be procured at the office of the Board of Education. He asked for the co-operation of the Board of Trade in a meeting of protest, in case future school board work is not done more economically.

Mrs. Helen Hoy Greely, representing the suffragists, appeared at the meeting and urged all present to attend the meeting at which Dr. Anna Howard Shaw is to speak on next Monday night.

When Mr. Harding's statement regarding the plans was explained to the secretary of the Board of Education this morning, Mr. Conger said that the plans have been on file at the Board of Education rooms for the use of contractors here for nearly two weeks, or since they were returned approved by the State authorities. He said that the Building Trades Council was evidently laboring under a misapprehension, as since he has been the clerk there has been no time with similar work when plans were not available to contractors who visited the High School building.

XMAS EXERCISES TO BE HELD IN THEATRE

Dunellen Board of Education Transacts Much Business at Monthly Meeting.

There are 557 pupils enrolled in the public schools of Dunellen, according to the report of Superintendent Guy H. Rentschler at the December meeting of the Board of Education at that place, last night. He recommended that the Christmas exercises be held in the borough theatre, the place affording more room than the schools. This matter was referred to the superintendent with power to act as he thinks best.

Dr. M. J. Whitford, the medical inspector, presented his report concerning defects found among the pupils in the schools, as follows: Defective eyes, 7.9 per cent; catarrh, 1.8 per cent; defective teeth, 65.3 per cent.; defective hearing, 1.8 per cent; enlarged tonsils, 16.3 per cent., adenoids, 13.2 per cent. It was decided that inasmuch as the Board of Health does not quarantine for chickenpox the local Board agreed not to exclude children from the school for the malady.

Miss Elizabeth Herder, of Somerville, a teacher in the first grade of the Whittier school, presented her resignation, and it was accepted. Miss Herder is to be married within a short time. The superintendent was instructed to engage another teacher.

The school of the borough will close for the holiday on December 23 and will reopen January 5. The building and repair committee reported that the work on the new school is about completed. The board authorized the floating of a $2,000 loan in the local bank and bills aggregating about $1,000 were ordered paid. Hervey B. Walters was sworn in as a member of the board and appointed a member of the building and repair committee. A communication was received from the State Board approving the construction of the new building. Three fire extinguishers were purchased for the Whittier school.

CONSENT GIVEN TO ENTER DEBATING LEAGUE

Supervisor D. Fred Aungst, of the borough schools, read his monthly report before the North Plainfield Board of Education at its meeting Monday night. He reported an enrollment of 1,218 in the schools, 207 in the High School, 707 in Somerset primary and intermediate and 304 in the Watchung School. Fire drills have been held in accordance with the law.

The board gave its consent to the High School to enter the Debating League that is being formed by Rutgers College. Mr. Aungst also stated that he wished to have speakers address the High School at various times during the year and was given the sanction of the Board.

The usual sum of $10 for the Kindergarten Christmas was not appropriated, but several members of the Board expressed a willingness to purchase the usual tree and other articles for the Christmas party of the children. It was decided to send the supervising principal to the annual State Teachers' Association conference that will be held in Atlantic City during the Christmas vacation.

The Return to a Definite Waist Line

Is skilfully developed in several new CORSETS now open to examination.

They have medium busts and skirts with straighter lines front and back and ... the suspicion of a curve at the waist. The mode in outer-garments requires that corsets thus designed be worn.

They are very sensible and fashionable models and are splendidly suited to variously proportin ed figures.

The fact that we are the first to introduce them emphasizes our preparedness at all times to supply the last-minute corset fashions.

Numerous other corset styles are also shown at various moderate prices.

WAR NEWS

at present Flanders is a sea of mud into which the big guns would inevitably sink. Soldier for soldier, the Belgian and French armies are equal to the German, and the light artillery of the Allies is very plentiful.

"While the Allies have been making sure their defense, they have at the same time made posible an advance in force, but the retaking of Belgium is going to be a long and terrible business.

"I have the best possible authority for stating the defenses behind the German lines are singularly complete. British airmen have inspected formidable defense works built of ferro-concrete, extending from Eecloo to Brussels, a distance of approximately sixty miles."

Paris, Dec. 2—Artillery bombardment by the Germans at several points, and repulses for the enemy, are reported in the official statement issued by the French war office at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The statement reads as follows:

"In the region to the south of Ypres at St. Eloi, an attack of the enemy against a trench captured by our troops during the day was repulsed. Our artillery damaged three heavy batteries of the enemy's artillery at Zermelles. A chateau at this place, and the park surrounding it, and two house of the village and some of the enemy's trenches were brilliantly captured by our troops.

"In the environs of Fay, to the south and to the west of Peronne, there was a lively connonade.

"In the region of Vendresse and Graonne, the German artillery bombarded violently. Our artillery answered the enemy's gun fire, and succeeded in destroying a battery.

"In the Argonne an attack of the Germans against Fontaine Madame has been repulsed, and we made some progress, capturing a trench in the woods of Courtes Chausses and a small work of defense at St. Hubert.

"On the heights of the Meuse, in the Woevre region and in the Vosges nothing worth mentioning has happened."

Petrograd, Dec. 2—Russian troops dislodged the Turks from the fortified positions in the valley of Euphrates, taking several guns and many prisoners.

The Czar's army in southern Galicia has captured 50,000 Austrians, and is now marching upon the fortified pases in the Carpathian Mountains.

BURDETTE JOKED ON HIS DEATHBED

Wrote Humorous Letter to an Old Time Friend.

FOUND FUN IN EVERYTHING.

Agreed With Henry Ward Beecher That Joke In Pulpit Was Not at All Out of Place—Declared That "People Are the Funniest Things This Side of the Grave."

Bob Burdette, a humorist to the end, could crack a joke when death was knocking at the door. This is demonstrated in a letter written by the famous humorist to his lifelong friend, the Rev. Dr. J. G. Walker, pastor of the Mantua Baptist church, West Philadelphia. When Burdette lived in Bryn Mawr twenty-five years ago he frequently visited Dr. and Mrs. Walker at their parsonage.

Burdette's letter, written on his deathbed, reads in part as follows:

"My health is sadly broken; permanently so. I still write a little every week, but my pulpit and platform days are yesterday's story. I go out to drive a little daily and see a few people—mighty few.

"I enjoy life. I love to live, though it isn't nice to be sick. I don't know just what is the matter with me; chronic pancreatitis I think the doctors call it. Do you know, until it went on strike I never knew I had a pancreas, and I'm mighty sorry I ever found out."

Instance of Humor.

A fugitive instance of Burdette's rollicking humor was a letter home to his flock in Los Angeles during his first trip to Europe. He dated the letter from "some distance out in the damp," and said in part:

"The scenery along this route, although somewhat monotonous, is splendidly irrigated. But it seems too early for the growing crops. Nothing has come up yet except on shipboard, and that has gone overboard. The route is not nearly so populous as the Santa Fe trail over the desert. We have just two kinds of days—the days we see a ship and the days we don't."

The veteran humorist found fun in everything. While he was forced to abandon it in the pulpit largely because of the reputation he had made for fun making, he agreed with Henry Ward Beecher that a joke in the pulpit was not at all out of place. It was, as Beecher said, "When you are fighting the devil shoot him with anything."

Burdette died with the conviction that there was not only just as much fun in the world today as ever, but "a great deal more, because," as he said, "there are more people in it, and people are the funniest things on this side of the grave."

On the occasion of his sixtieth birthday Burdette, asked by a newspaper man how it felt to be sixty years old, replied:

"Well, my boy, it feels rather crowded. There are so many more people in the world than there were when I took up my homestead claim. When I landed on this planet there wasn't a soul in Los Angeles that I would go across the street to shake hands with. (There was no city of Los Angeles, in fact)."

"A great many old people say they feel just as young at sixty as they did at twenty. Is it that way with you?"

"Not by forty happy years, my boy. No man, and fewer women, can be as young at sixty as at twenty. When I enter a room now I instinctively select the chair I want to sit in. I pick out the one that is the easiest to get out of, for it takes me longer to get up than it did at twenty. I do not love the kind hearted, stupid people who insist on my sitting down in a cavernous easy chair with a backward inclination and a foot rest which I cannot reach, for then there is a life and death struggle when I would emerge.

"Strokes of Paralysis."

"But you are still very vigorous."

"Oh, I do my daily stunts. But I don't rush at my work with a war-whoop, as I used to do. I have a stroke of paralysis every day right after my noontime dinner. It lasts about an hour and is incurable. I break and lose more spectacles every week than I used to break in five years—when I didn't wear any. I can hear a great deal better than I did in younger days, for I can't hear a thing with my left ear, and I use that—oh, very, very often—to rest the one I can hear with. So, though I don't hear so much, I hear a great deal better—much better."

"Is there as much fun in the world as there used to be?"

"More—a great deal more—because there are more people in it, and people are the funniest things this side of the grave. Monkeys tire me, but people amuse me."

"Would you like to be young again?"

"Indeed I would, my boy. And I'm going to be—when I get to be about ten or twenty years older. But I don't want to be young again in this world, because then I would grow old again. It is a sign of weakness—intellectual, physical and moral weakness—to want to be younger in this life. A man ought to be ashamed to have such a feeling. One of our boys, Robert, once wrote to me on one of his birthdays, 'A man's years are his retainers, and the more birthdays he has the stronger and greater is his following.' That's about the way it feels to be sixty."

THE KNOCKER.

(With apologies to Walt Mason)

You find a grouchy character in every kind of town, who never gives the city praise, but always runs it down. He says the streets are crooked and the aldermen are worse, and prospects are as cheerful as the plumage of a hearse; that Main street will be presently a pasturage for cows, for everything is drifting to perdition and bow-wows.

The elders are immoral and the preachers are inane, the children underwitted and the parents are insane; the houses all are tumbling down and rents are going up; our public school's the biggest joke a body ever saw; the officials are all soft ones and won't enfroce the law.

The knocker's face is gloomy and would stop a Chinese clock. His favorite diversion is to sit around and knock. You ask him what is keeping him and why he needs to stay, and why he doesn't pack his trunk and gladly go away; a man of his ability should never waste his prime by hanging 'round a burg like this—it's really a crime.

But Mister Hometown Knocker has no slight desire to leave—it's just the creature's nature to deplore, and rap, and grieve. He lacks the optimistic mind and energy and pluck; he has a drooping spirit—he's the image of bad luck. He'll grace some day the health resort that's run by Landlord Nick, and therefor dismal centuries he'll stand around and kick.

SHARE WITH THE NEEDY.

Seven million women and children and old men and women are reported to be crying out for bread in Belgium. With conditions as bad as they are in this country, they are not a circumstance compared to those in the stricken land abroad. Certainly it would be out of harmony with the Christmas spirit, if we failed to share our good things with them.

Penniless and homeless; sick and poverty stricken; bereft of fathers, husbands, and sons, think what it all means. War has laid waste to their land. They have been deprived of their homes by shot and shell and fire. They are also in the grip of bitter winter. Food and clothes are scarce. There is no work they can do to earn even one meal, and none of our suffering have reached that terrible stage here in Plainfield, let us all hope. Whatever they get comes from the outside. Generous hearted Americans are supplying flour and blankets and other bare necessities of life, but it takes a great volume to care for the needs of seven million.

All this explains why the Daily Press appeals to its readers to contribute to the fund being raised by the local Belgian Relief Committee. Money is the best thing to give because it enables the committee to buy exactly what is most needed, and therefore makes the most practical and quickest relief. Help the fund for the starving Belgians today by adding your contribution, whether it be large or small. Contributions may be sent to the Press office.

COMMUNITY MORALITY.

Elizabeth has an advertising men's club, which is doing a work which the Plainfield Business Men's Association should undertake. Not only is the organization teaching business and morality in business, but it is also striving to teach community morality as well. The Elizabeth Journal recently told how the organization, using such aphorisms as "It Pays to Be Honest," by presenting them over and over again in various forms, will surely have an effect upon the community outside of the business circle. As the Journal says:

The man who is surreptitiously living something back of the front he puts up to society may conclude that he will not survive his dishonesty any better than the merchant who sells a "twenty-five-dollar suit of clothes for fifteen" to an innocent customer, on the plea that a business emergency compels the sacrifice, when he knows that it would be dear to his customer at ten or twelve dollars.

It certainly pays to be honest, as the Ad Club teaches. But it pays to be honest all along the line as well as behind the counter. It pays to be honest with self, with family, with friends, with the eternal destiny that stares you in the face.

The Elizabeth Board of Trade recently published an attractive illustrated folder, telling of the beauties of the city, and describing some of the industries, attractions and other advantages of the county seat. The example set is a good one, and Plainfield should follow it.

Not only is it wise to do your Christmas shopping early, but it should be done early in the day. The clerks will appreciate any easing up of the afternoon rush which might fall to their lot.

Up in Morris Plains it has been found that the tango has a quieting effect on the insane, which leads the Paterson Call to remark that in that city it has an insane effect on the quiet.

When President Taft said the other day that he was sitting up in an apple tree watching the course of events, did he refer to a sour apple tree?

Good evening, have you bought your Red Cross Seals?

MANY MUSIC LOVERS HEAR JOHN M'CORMACK RECITAL

Many Plainfielders were among the 5,000 music lovers who heard John McCormack, the celebrated Irish tenor, in the recital given for the benefit of the National Association for the Education of Exceptional Children, in the Elizabeth Armory last night. The rendition of an unusually fine program of operatic numbers proved a great treat to the capacity audience and the singer was accorded many hearty ovations during the evening.

Mr. McCormack was assisted by Donald McBeath, violinist, and Edwin Schneider, pianist. Music lovers living in towns along the Central Railroad between here and Elizabeth attended the concert in large numbers and the proceeds of the affair amounted to over $10,000.

RAYMOND BELL QUALIFIES FOR SEMI-FINAL ROUND

Raymond Bell entered the semi-final round of the Y. M. C. A. pool handicap pool tournament yesterday when he defeated George C. M. Smith by the score of 75 to 55 with a handicap. By defeating Mr. Smith Bell stands a fine chance of qualifying for the finals which will give him one of the prize cues. Harry Moulton won his match of the first round from J. E. Kimball by default and will now meet Al Brynarski in the second round. The winner of this match will meet Bell in the semi-finals.

But two matches remain to be played in the first round and these must be played before next Saturday. C. William Bingeman is scheduled to meet John McLoughlin and H. V. Kinney has yet to meet J. C. Blanchard.

DESCRIBED SCENES AMONG THE FRENCH

Speaker Addressing McAll Auxiliary Outlined the Conditions Prevailing.

Miss Laura Maxwell ,of Easton, Pa., was the guest of the McAll Auxiliary, at the meeting of the organization held in the Y. W. C. A. parlors this morning, giving a talk on the war conditions now prevalent in France. The speaker spent five weeks in France after the war broke out and during that time thoroughly acquainted herself with the work being done for the troops by natives. She told of the efforts of the wives, mothers and children of those at the front to provide clothing for the soldiers and described in a vivid manner the many inconveniences with which the fighters had to contend.

The speaker visited several of the foremost posts verging on the battlefields and was treated to some thrilling experiences. About twenty-five members of the auxiliary were present and heard the interesting talk. Mrs. Samuel T. Carter, Jr., presided at the meeting.

BURGLARS TOOK BOOSE AND ATE FOODSTUFFS

Sometime during the night burglars entered the store of Morris Latzko, a wholesale liquor dealer on Somerset street, and took a quantity of liquors. Entrance was gained by prying open a rear window.

The thieves left the place through a door taking with them bottled goods. They ate a quantity of foodstuffs left in a refrigerator before leaving the place.

HARDNESS OF WATER.

Solid Streams at High Velocity Are as Rigid as Iron.

In the American Magazine a contributor gives a most interesting description of the resisting power of water. He says that a solid stream of water shot out of a hose at tremendous velocity is just as powerful and destructive as a rod of iron. An extract from the article giving an idea of the hardness and resisting power of water follows:

"Here is a fact which is probably novel to the average man who has not spent much of his life thinking about motor speed boats. This is what we may call the hardness of the water when a boat is running at speed. Water at fifty miles an hour is not the limpid liquid we are accustomed to bathe in. If you put your arm overboard from a hydroplane running at fifty miles an hour and strike a wave crest the probability is that you will break your arm or wrist, because at that speed the water has not time to give, not time even to change shape, and striking it is like striking so much metal.

"In the great hydraulic mining nozzles, where a stream of water under enormous head is used to wash down hillsides, a swordsman, in attempting to cut into one of these streams, will shatter the sword without being able to penetrate the water. The stream is like a bar of iron. The fact that water at relative speed is so hard—or that its inertia is so great, to be a little more accurate—is the reason why a skipping stone travels over the surface and is the reason why a hydroplane boat slides over the surface instead of plowing its way through.

"The picture we must have in our minds, then, of a speed boat is that she is traveling not in water, as we ordinarily understand it, but over the surface of a semisolid, very much as a sled travels over snow."

TRICKED HIS PREMIER.

Pitt Was Quick to Act, but the King Got Ahead of Him.

On Jan. 19, 1805, Dr. Manners-Sutton, bishop of Norwich, was giving a dinner party in his Windsor deanery when his butler informed him that a gentleman wished particularly to see him, but would not give his name.

"Well, I can't come now in the middle of dinner," said the bishop.

"Beg pardon, my lord, but the gentleman is very anxious to see you on important business," and the butler was so urgent that the bishop apologized to his company and went out. The gentleman who would not be denied proved to be King George III.

"How d'ye do, my lord?" said he. "Come to tell you that you're archbishop of Canterbury—archbishop of Canterbury. D'ye accept—accept? Eh, eh?"

The bishop bowed low in token of acceptance.

"All right," said his majesty. "You've got a party—see all their hats here. Go back to them. Good night."

Next morning Pitt appeared at Windsor castle to inform his majesty that Archbishop Moore had died the day before and to recommend the bishop of Lincoln, Dr. Pretyman, for the vacant primacy.

"Very sorry, very sorry, indeed, Pitt," said the king, "but I offered it to the bishop of Norwich last night, and he accepted. Can't break my word."

Pitt was very angry, but the deed was done, as the king meant it should be, and so Dr. Manners-Sutton became archbishop of Canterbury and held the great office for twenty-three eventful years.—Chambers' Journal.

COTTAGE PRAYER MEETINGS PROVED VERY SUCCESSFUL

Cottage prayer meeting services were held under the auspices of the Monroe Avenue church last night and proved very successful. D. B. F. Randolph, pastor of the church, visited five of these meetings but could not get the other two. Church workers of other denominations had charge of some of the meetings and they all proved very helpful.

The homes in which the meetings were held are as follows: Blanchard E. Randolph, 351 Albert street; Mrs. Oakley, 1331 South Second street; Mrs. Cox, 727 West Third street; Mrs. Mathews, 927 West Fifth street; Mrs. Lewis, 947 West Sixth street; Mrs. Hubach, 1026 West Seventh street, and Harry Ludi, 1058 Sherman avenue.

JAPANESE STORY FAKE.

Washington, Dec. 2.—Strong denial was made by Secretary Daniels today of the published report that plans for an American attack on Japan had been stolen from the Navy Department. SMALL BOYS ARRESTED FOR BUTCHER STORE BURGLARY

Five small boys, ranging in age from ten to sixteen years, were arraigned before Justice of the Peace Snape in the borough court this morning alleged to have had some complicity in the burglarizing of Frank Neidig's butcher stoire on Somerset street Monday night when a sum amounting to $3 was stolen. They were Charles Hope, 25, Harmony street; James Petrucelli, 23 Race street; John Trolina, 27 Race street; Somuel Ayers, 22 Harmony street; and Walter Weissbecker, 107 Somerset street.

In court this morning the youths blamed each other for planning the raid and returned a part of the money which they had not had time to spend when taken in by the police. The parents of the boys were all in court and besides reprimanding the boys and putting them on probation Justice Snape also cautioned the parents to see that the youngsters observed the Curfew regulation in the future.

CULVER-GATES DUO WON THREE GAMES STRAIGHT

Culver and Gates took three straight from the Clemens-Thorn combination in the borough bowling tournament on Gates' alleys last night. Tomorrow night two matches will be played, Connolly and Miller meeting W. Conover and Conshay, and Menzenbach and McGonigal playing Luthman and G. Conover.

EXTENT OF COYLE'S HURTS HAS NOT BEEN DETERMINED

Although he is still confined to his home suffering from injuries sustained in the Thanksgiving Day game at Cricket Field Billy Coyle's hurts do not appear to be as serious as was first feared. The physicians in charge of the case have not been able as yet to determine definitely whether or not his right leg is broken and a further examination of the injury will be made this afternoon.

Coyle is still in bed and has received many callers at his home since returning from Muhlenburg Hospital. A slight case of water-on-the-knee has developed in connection with the knee injury and even if it is found that no bones are broken the severe wrench he sustained will keep him an invalid for some weeks to come.

EAGLES' BOWLING.

The Plainfield Eagles will play in Newark tomorrow night against the birls of that place. The Newarks now hold the lead, which the local team boasted of several weeks ago, but their two meetings with Somerville, which accounted for the six defeats, put them down among the middlers and Newark's steady wining has placed that aerie on top. The locals are going over with their best players and try to get back some lost ground and a chance for the many trophies.

MEETING POSTPONED.

A meeting of the Hope chapel Young Men's Club was to have been held last night for the purpose of electing a new manager of the basketball team, which office was left vacant by the resignation of George Leighs, but there was only a few members present and the meeting was postponed until some time later.
poned until a later date.

Feickert, treasurer, reported that about $20,000 had been expended during the past year.

"WHY A RELIGIOUS REVIVAL?"

"Why a Religious Revival?" will be the subject of the mid-week meeting at the First M. E. church tonight. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, the pastor, and others will speak on this subject. There will be vocal solos and other special music. THE FEMALE OF THE SPECIES SEEMS HARDIER THAN THE MALE

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The coming of "Honey Boy" Evans to the Plainfield theatre, Monday night, December 7, recalls the inaugural appearance of this favorite little monologist at the head of the first "Honey Boy" Minstrels, under the direction of Cohan and Harris. Evans was the featured star of that big assemblage of stars, but he did not become sole owner and proprietor until the middle of the second year of the Cohen and Harris tour; it was in February, 1910 that Evans bought out Cohan and Harris and assumed his managerial dignity. This may appear to have been a daring plunge for a young fellow supposed to be only a black face comedian, but though he is now only forty years of age, George Evans has been for years a minstrel enthusiast. He was one of the original minstrel stock company at the Bush Street Theatre, San Francisco. Evans was a ballad singer in Haverly's Big Mastodon Troupe. So it may be seen that he "had been to school" in minstrelsy, long before the Cohan and Harris venture. This year, the seventh of the "Honey Boy" Minstrels, finds George Evans as enthusiastic about the possibilities of America's time-honored entertainment as he has ever been and he contends that minstrelsy is growing popular again and that its public is as eager now as ever to applaud its strides.

In the recent talk on this, his pet subject, the "Honey Boy" said: "The public who want high-class amusement, will as readily accept it in the form of minstrelsy as in any other form, in fact, it is from this form of entertainment that musical comedy has evolved, and the possibilities are as great as ever. William H. Crane, Nat Goodwin, Chauncey Olcott, Willie Collier and many other famous stars are graduates from the semi-circle of the Minstrel 'First Part,' and I am sure that the favorite amusement of our grand-daddies is as open to first-class effort now as ever. Class will tell in any effort and I hope to continue supplying high-class minstrelsy for many years to come."

ELY'S CREAM BALM OPENS CLOGGED NOSTRILS AND HEAD---CATARRH GOES

Instantly Clears Air Passages; You Breathe Freely, Nasty Discharge Stops, Head Colds and Dull Headache Vanish.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it. Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.—Adv.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

Sport Snap Shots

BY MORRIS MILLER

In producing "Bill Manages a Fighter," Eddie Dillon, director of the Komic company in Los Angeles, had quite a spirited time with Hobo Dougherty, the ex-lightweight pugilist.

In this production Dougherty plays the role of a prize fighter. Dillon and Dougherty are scheduled to put up a fake prize fight, in which Dillon is supposed to knock the former pugilist cold.

Dillon struck Dougherty a hard blow on the jaw. Instead of being knocked out, as per instructions, Dougherty's old ring training came back to him in a flash, and he retaliated with a left hook to Dillon's wind. Dillon's Irish then arose to the surface, and soon the stage resembled a regular prize ring, with Dillon and Dougherty pummeling each other with evident relish. The camera man kept to his post and continued to turn the crank on his machine, catching all the action on the film.

Fay Tincher, comedienne, kept calling to Dougherty to get knocked out. The ex-pugilist finally realized that he was acting before a camera and not engaged in a regular prize fight.

He then dropped to the floor with a reluctant grunt. As he was being counted out, Dougherty said to Dillon: "Remember, Eddie, I wasn't really knocked out."

Everybody had a good laugh over the yarn that came from New York a week ago that told how, after a Stevens Tech player had been thrown out of the game for rough playing, he changed jerseys, swathed his head in bandages and returned to the lineup under an assumed name. It was an amusing case of putting one over on the referee, but lovers of clean sport will be pleased to learn that the incident cost Lieut. A. C. Ayres, the coach who permitted the trick, his job. Dr. Humphreys, president of Stevens Tech, demanded Ayres' resignation as soon as he heard of the affair.

The announcement by Frank B. Ellis, graduate manager of the annual University of Pennsylvania relay races, that Penn will add several Olympic events to the program for her 1915 carnival, is the biggest boost that the cinderpath sport has had in many a day. The Olympic pentathlon, 400-meter hurdle race, javelin throw and 56-pound weight throw added to the list of events for the "relays" will serve to boom interest in Olympic affairs among the various colleges, and it can be truthfully stated that Penn has struck a great blow in the cause of interesting Uncle Sam's college students in the Olympic meets.

The Ohio Medics are original if nothing else. At the Ohio State-Northern game at Columbus, 300 medical students marched on the field in a body. A "dead wagon" appeared on the field and six pallbearers removed a coffin from the wagon and gently carried it to the waiting party while the band played the "dead march." When the lid was removed the Medics' cheer leader emerged very much alive. The stunt brought great applause.

Michigan expects to obtain revenge when the Wolverines clash with the crimson next year. Michigan retains several star players from this year's eleven and has the best freshman material in years to select from. Johnny Maulbetsch and Cochran, the star lineman, will be the nucleus around which Coach Yost is expected to build a team that can wallop Harvard.

If Harry Pollock, manager of Lightweight Champion Freddie Welsh, gives the word Welsh and Charley White, chief disputant of Welsh's right to the title, will meet in a real championship bout over the twenty-round route in San Francisco December 15.

It appears that every good ball player who ever was passed up by anybody as tried and found wanting was passed up by John McGraw. The latest is Benny Kauff. Not long ago it was Davis, the young pitcher of the Braves. Kauff and Davis were once the property of McGraw about as much as Alaska once was the property of Timbuctoo.

SPORT WRITER PLACES DEAL IN THE IMMORTAL CASEY'S CLASS

Berton Braley, the well known sport writer, is the author of some verses describing the recent world's series between Boston and Philadelphia. They are written to the rythm of Kipling's "Gunga Din" and come periously close to putting Charlie Deal, the Boston third sacker, in the baseball Hall of Fame along with the immortal Casey. For the benefit of the dyed-in-the-wool fans who stood in front of the scoreboards and watched the games play by play during the memorable games of the big series we publish the verses below:

He'd been many times at bat, but he couldn't wield the slat
In a way to yield the profit of a swat.
And the chances he had blown made the Boston rooters groan,
As they saw their scoring visions go to pot.
Yes, some seven times or more, when a single meant a score,
He had hit into a double off the reel.
But at last—at last he rose and banged one on the nose,
And the second game was won by Mr. Deal.

It was "Deal! Deal! Deal!" from the rooters came an agonized appeal,
"Can't you wield the stick at all?
Can't you hit that bloomin' ball—
For Gawd's sake, make a single, Mr. Deal!"

And he made a soaring double when the need of one was great,
And on Mann's unerring single he came sprinting 'cross the plate.
It was in the final inning that he scored the needed run,
And although the Mackmen struggled they were finished, they were done.

Yes, 'twas "Deal! Deal! Deal! can't you help us; can't you see the way we feel?
Hi, summon all your grit
And deal us out a hit"—
And he done it at the last, did Mr. Deal!

Football, like the diamond sport, has not been a success financially in Plainfield this year for reasons that are obvious. As was stated in these columns at the conclusion of the baseball season interest in sport appears to be at a low ebb. Something is missing and that "something" will have to be supplied by the magnates before the old-time interest can be rekindled. It's time someone got wise to this fact and aroused a movement to set things on their feet once more. Plainfield's reputation as a sport center is fast slipping away and if things are left in their present condition until this time next year it will be too late to ressurrect the old-fashioned enthusiasm.

One striking example of the lack of co-operation between team and followers of sport is illustrated in the present plight of the Holy Cross club. Although Manager Doyle has given Plainfield a glance at some of the best metropolitan elevens the club has suffered financially and indications at the present time are exceedingly discouraging. The club is in a rut financially and prospects for pulling out on the level are dim.

We might suggest a "war tax" with "Doc" Doyle as the official collector, but feel rather dubious about the outcome. It is one thing to levy a tax and another thing to ring it out.

Ralph Runyon's victory in New York Saturday afternoon in the Irish-American games reminds us of a similar triumph of another Plainfield boy several years ago. Runyon received a watch for winning first place in the pole vault and Franklin Newell, now of California, copped a similar timepiece in a "met" festival in 1910. Newell was a high jumper and proved the peer of interscholastic leapers during his career as a Plainfield High School color bearer.

Now that Jack Fritts has stirred up a little enthusiasm over the track sport in the Ninth street institution, it's about time someone came to the fore with a bid to have the Union County High School meet moved to Parker Field this spring. The local schoolboys appear to have sufficient talent to back them up in the request and it's better to start the movement now than to wait until some other institution has been awarded the plum.

We're glad to see that the Holy Cross football eleven has such a worthy follower as Royal T. Phillips, one of the best referees of schoolboy football games in this section of the State. In another column of this issue Phillips comes to the fore with the question of the right of enacting a technical penalty such as "Hub" Stine levied in Saturday's contest. What escaped the eyes of casual observers was readily noticed by Phillips, thus substantiating our claim that local football elevens should stick to the old reliable tried and true officials for their home contest. Another case of "Shop in Plainfield."

Those who have been to visit Billy Coyle since his confinement might well envy the little athlete and the taste he is getting of the "simple life." While we are glad to learn that the injury is not as bad as was at first thought, still we're a little peeved over the idea that Billy has "pulled one over on us." Coyle has nothing to do but eat, sleep and be merry.

DOYLE SAYS:

"When it's all going out and nothing coming in.
It's time to hike to Newark and touch the Franklins for a win."

That's the reason the Holy Cross club is going to move the scene of hostilities to Ashton Field next Saturday afternoon. Why not show your loyalty to the home eleven and take the jaunt to Jersey's metropolis as a rooter?

Plainfield sport lovers are getting so used to swallowing defeats and losing good old shekels on home team wagers that they're about ready for any old thing the teams have the heart to serve up. Just for a change the Y. M. C. A., Hope Chapel, North Plainfield High School, Plainfield High School and Leal School basketball quintets have contributed reverses to the fattening list. Something else to blame the war for and to agree with Sherman on.

Just to change the luck why not start something along the aquatic line at old P. H. S.? Those who have been yelping for a swimming tank seem to have gotten their mouths full of water and right when we've been expecting to hear from the human fish everything seems to have taken a plunge.

Too bad we can't raise a fuss around this burg by selecting an all-star football eleven. Other sport scribes are keeping the wolf away from the door by singling out the poorest possible choices, thus creating a hubbub. But we haven't anything to pick from.

What's the use of putting men together on an all-star aggregation that refuse to face each other as opponents, one thinking that the other is too rough and the other coming back with an allegation of the rival clan's brittleness. It cawn't be did.

Something else to worry about. The North Plainfield Board of Education has seen fit to put a three days' crimp in the Easter vacation of the little ones over the water. Captain Abrams comes back with a backer-up for the old adage, "an ill wind always blows someone some good" (or something like that). Abrams says he won't have to worry about keeping his basketeers in condition over the holidays inasmuch as they won't have time to get out of condition.

Haven't heard of any vaudeville bookers approaching our Charlie Brickleys or Percy Haughtons this year. Such is fame.

News item—"Ritchie paid $374 a minute as a fighter." And yet there are several thousand pugilists in the gridiron arena who are exchanging blows merely for the purpose of obtaining lodging in the nation's hospitals.

Ironies of the Times—Captain Abrams and a delegation of his basketball friends induce one Bob Hebert to forget the fact that the weekly nightmare of the salary ghost is a welcome thing and he returns to his studies in the North Plainfield High School, thus depriving the business world of his services. It's a ten to one shot that this same athlete will be the most maligned individual in the borough institution in a couple of weeks. Such is the life of a star who has to be coaxed to shine.

There are songsters who don't come as high as John McCormack who can make just as much noise, judging from the bass sounds ensuing after a basketball referee hands out a raw decision.

LOCAL EXHIBITS IN GRAND CENTRAL SHOW

Dunellen Also Represented in Poultry Exhibit Having 4,300 Entries.

New Jersey was well represented at the Poultry Show, which opened at the Grand Central Palace, yesterday, with close to 4,300 entries and nearly every gain over last year.

The Single Comb Buff Orpington is in the lead this year, and among the notable specialties in this line are the showings of M. R. Jacobus and the Martling Hennery of Ridgefield, while F. D. Baerman, of Dunellen, has specialized in Houdans. Williard McGee, of this city, is one of the attendants at the show.

In addition to the chickens, the cats and the pigeons, there will be many features of general spectacular interest. One of these, it is announced, will be a Mexican double-headed King Parrot. He is the property of Mrs. C. D. Atwood, of 820 Seventh avenue, New York. He is between twelve and fourteen years old, and as this special variety lives to between eighty and one hundred years, he is a very young specimen. He sings, whistles and speaks fluently in both English and Spanish, and should be the most sought-for feature by far on the part of children. There will also be a remarkable array of Manchurian and other cranes, Japanese Silkies and the large variety of rare water and ornamental fowl that George W. Tilley, of Darien Conn., is to bring forward.

BOUND BROOK BOY WINS RUTGERS FOOTBALL "R"

Randolph Mason, of Bound Brook, is one of the sixteen members of the Rutgers football squad who will receive their varsity letter this season. Mason played guard and centre in the majority of the games, and won his letter by consistent work in the line. He is only a freshman at Rutgers, and should develop into a star player before the conclusion of his college course.

Mason attended the banquet given the team last Saturday night at the Hotel Imperial in New York city, after the W. and J. game. At that time, Howard P. Talman was elected captain of the team for next season.

ANCHORS TO PLAY.

One of the local Masonic bowling teams will get into action tonight on the Second street alleys. The Anchor pinners line up against the Herrman five, of Elizabeth, and the Washington quintet is due to play Lafayette at Rahway.

LOCAL JUNIOR ELKS ANNEXED ODD GAME

Newark Pinners, Rolling on Local Alleys, Win Last Game by One Point.

Newark pinners of the Elks' Junior Bowling League were lucky in annexing the last game of the three played against the Plainfield colts on the local alleys last night. The Queen City pin knights took the first two and then lost out in the third by one point. Captain Stout had several new men pinning in this game, which is the second for the locals, among them being Woolston, Townley and Hoyt. All of the locals made fairly good scores, the highest team count being 860 made in the first game. The highest individual mark was 199 made by Hoyt in the initial roll.

Woolston was the first to roll for the local team and his opening mark was 167, which was the lowest score he bowled. Newark's first man overshadowed this mark by 13 pins. Townley's 149 about evened matters up against and then Hoyt made high score, which practically put the visitors out of the running for the first game. Waldorf's 161 and Stout's 184 gave the locals the first game with a margin of eleven points, the scores being 860 to 849.

Thirty-eight pins separated the two scores in the second game, all of the Plainfield tallies but one being higher than Newark's. Woolston went his first score three points better and registered a 170, while Townley made his highest mark, 179. Newark gathered a lead of 23 pins on the first three scores of the last game, which was a hot fight from start to finish, and then Waldorf's 191 put the local quintet back in the running for a clean sweep. Weber, anchor man for the Newark team, made his best mark when it was needed and the 181 that he was credited with gave the visitors the decision in this game by one point.

IT'S ALL OVER BUT THE FINAL SHOUTING

Manager Doyle Makes the Final Drain on His Weary Football Elites.

The shades of night are falling fast. Manager Doyle lets out his last plaintive wail summoning his little fighters around him and explaining the importance of beating the Franklins in the curtain struggle. Optimism is a ruling factor in the Holy Cross camp. All of the warriors expect to put up a grand finale on the gridiron season by copping a scalp in the village of Newark next Saturday afternoon. After that the 1914 season will pass into the world of the forgotten for nothing remains to be bequeathed to the incoming talent.

The team has encountered its bumps, the treasury has been found to be "dry" some days before 11 p. m., and the scalps of several battles dangle from the belts of rival forces. A thorough research has failed to reveal any grounds upon which claims to a title can be based and, therefore, the players this year will receive no medals bearing the trouble making inscription "State Champions." We've been expecting the annual resignation of Manager Doyle for sometime to come, but as usual he is staving off the shock until the final contest is disposed of. What he will do after that remains to be seen, but take a tip from us and wager your last clean collar that he will be right on deck when the whistle blows for the 1915 curtain raiser, resignation or no resignation. He can't keep away from the stuff. We're so used to hearing of Doyle's plans for retirement that we've become reconciled to the fact that he will be delivered to his final six feet of real estate with his head resting on a pillow of pigskin and Holy Cross admission tickets in his hand. They may gain entrance for him to the great beyond and then again they may not.

But in passing we are forced to look back upon the resume of the present season and contrast it with that of last year and the year previous. It has produced no thrilling record and where brilliant victories were conspicuous last year defeats are equally prominent this year.

Some condolence is garnered in the fact that 1914 has proved a year of reverses to sports of all kinds and it is only natural that Holy Cross should keep apace of the times. Polo, tennis and baseball teams that ruled popular favorites for big titles were dumped, so why not footballists? Here's a duplicate of the "war extra" handed out by Doyle to his players last night:

"There will be practice Thursday night at 8 o'clock on Marshall Field. Saturday will be the last game of the season and as we were beaten the last time we played the Franklins we should be anxious to turn the tables this time and close the season with a victory. It is important that YOU be on hand Thursday night. Get out on the field at 8 o'clock sharp. Do not come strolling out any time between 8 and 9. Watch your clock all day Thursday and arrange your business and personal matters so that nothing will interfere with your being on hand at 8 o'clock. YOU need practice as does every other man on the team. Full arrangements for the trip to East Orange, Saturday, will be made known Thursday night. Should it rain Thursday the above holds good for Friday."

ROYAL T. PHILLIPS IS FROM MISSOURI

One Sport Lover Who Champions a Square Deal for the Home Warriors.

Here's some thing that comes as an aftermath of the Holy Cross-Viking football engagement on Cricket Field last Saturday afternoon :

"Sporting Editor:

"Quoting from the account in your paper of the Holy Cross-Viking game follows: 'Ricketts carried the ball over the line for a touchdown. When he carried the ball out to be kicked Manning was off-side and they were forced to forfeit their chances for an extra point.'

"Will you, or can some of your football men inform me of what rule prohibited Holy Cross from kicking the goal?

"ROYAL T. HILLIPS."

In the words of Kipling we might say "It cawn't be did," Mr. Phillips. Herbert Stine, one of Springfield Training School's finest in football livery, refereed the contest in question and, according to the statement he made to our football man the rule code gave him the right to levy the penalty. Although we've paid out a perfectly good ten-cent piece for a Spalding's official guide and burned the midnight oil in searching the little sport encyclopaedia from cover to cover we've failed to find even so much as an inkling of the vestment of such authority in an official. Your intimation that "You come from Missouri" is a creditable one and because of the fact that Stine has left for the wilds of Springfield we have not been able to get a line on the peculiar penalty for you.

In a game as the one Saturday the penalty was an extremely grave one and might have resulted in the locals being whipped by the adversary. The rule is a new one on us and also on Mr. Spalding, if the guide book is to be taken as a criterion. Rule twelve, section four, states:

"The kicker's side shall be behind the ball when it is kicked."

From what we have been able to glean the pigskin was never kicked and, therefore the penalty appears to be without the necessary fundamentals to make it legitimate. Your interest in the Plainfield eleven is a commendable one and if there were a few more sportsmen of the same calibre in this burg the sport promoters would not be encountering so much tough sledding.—Sporting Ed.

SMANEY PLAYED ON UNIVERSITY ELEVEN

Former Local Boy Shifted From End to Halfback on N. Y. U.

Although small in size, light in weight and young in years, Edward P. Smaney, of Roselle Park, who lived here during last summer, when he was employed on the reportorial staff of the Courier-News, this year proved one of the most promising young football players at the New York University. Smaney is completing his second year at the Gotham institution and, although this was the first season he tried for the 'varsity eleven, he succeeded after a hard struggle in securing a permanent position. Once given the opportunity to appear in the line-up of the representative team, the Roselle Park youth immediately made good.

Smaney, who is 19 years old, weighs 128 pounds and stands five feet five inches in his stocking feet, is probably the lightest intercollegite football player in this vicinity. After the try-outs in the early fall he was picked as a first substitute. His work in scrimmages attracted the attention of the coaches and he was soon given a chance to play right end for the 'varsity eleven. The success he met with in his first trial resulted in him playing in four of six games with the 'varsity outfit.

After a splendid showing at right end, he was shifted to halfback in the game against Stevens a week ago Saturday. The creditable showing this year makes him almost positive of a regular berth next season. Smaney, before entering New York University, was a student at Roselle High School, Roselle Park High School and Cranford High School. He spent three years at Roselle High School. He is a member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity of the N. Y. U.

P. H. S. "GRADS" TO PLAY N. P. H. S. GIRLS

Contest Arranged Between Present-day Shooters and Former Stars.

The manager of the girls' basketball team of North Plainfield High School has completed negotiations for a game with the Plainfield High School girl's alumni team. The game has been scheduled for Friday night and will be played on the Saengerbund Hall court.

A lot of interest is centered on this game as the P. H. S. Alumni team beat the P. H. S. girls' team and this will be a fair test of the relative strength of the borough sextet as compared with that of Plainfield High School.

A big crowd is expected at the game and dancing will follow.

The North Plainfield High School basketball team is the first on the schedule of the New Brunswick High School five, which has been announced by Manager Ingling. It is the largest that the school has ever had, consisting of 23 games. The first contest will not be played until January 6, when the borough quintet will go to New Brunswick. Twenty-three games between this date and March 27 will keep the team pretty busy all the time.

A return game will be played with the boroughites on the Saengerbund Hall court January 20. Only one game has been arranged with the city High School five, that being booked for March 17 at New Brunswick. The Somerville High School team has two game scheduled, thefirst at New Brunswick on February 10, and the second at Somerville on March 24. The New Brunswick schedule contains many hard games with teams all over this section of the State.

He said that she had a good many notions, it seemed to him. But he cut the little tree with casual ease and no compunctions, and they dragged it to their home, the soft branches patterning the snow and obscuring their footprints.

"It's like real Christmas weather," Ellen said. "They can't stop that coming anyhow."

In the kitchen Ellen's father sat before the open oven door of the cooking stove, letting the snow melt from his heavy boots.

"Hey," he said, "I was beginning to think you'd forgot about supper. What was in the trap?"

At once Ellen began talking rapidly. "Oh," she said, "we'll have some muffins tonight, father; the kind you like, with"—

"Well, what was in the trap?" the old man demanded peevishly. "Why

"Matthew," she said then, "will you cut me that?"

don't you answer back? What was, Mat?"

Matthew, drying his ax blade, looked at it with one eye closed.

"Rabbit," he said.

"Where is it?" her father demanded.

"It was a young one, not as big as your fist," Ellen said. "I let it out before he got there. Where's mother?"

"Just because a thing's young it ain't holy water," the old man complained. "Last time it was a squirrel you let go because it was young. It's like being spendthrift with manna," he went on.

Ellen's mother appeared, gave over to Ellen the supper preparations, contented herself with auxiliary offices of china and butter getting and talked the while, pleased that she had something to disclose.

"Ben Helders stopped in," she told. "He's going to the city tomorrow. What do you s'pose after? A boy. He's going to take him to bring up and work on the farm."

"Where's he going to get the boy?" Ellen asked.

Her mother did not know, but Mrs. Helders was going to have a new diagonal, and she wanted the number of Ellen's pattern. Ben would stop for it that night.

Evenings their kitchen was a sitting room, and when the supper had been cleared away and the red cotton spread covered the table, Ellen asked her husband to bring in the little tree. She found a cracker box, handily cut a hole wtih a cooking knife and set up the little tree by the window in the kitchen.

"What under the canopy"—said her mother, her voice cracking.

"Oh, something to do in the evening," Ellen answered. "Father's going to pop me some corn to trim it with, aren't you, father? Mother, why don't you get you a good big darning needle and string what he pops?"

"It'll make a lot of litter," said her mother, but she brought the needle for something to do.

"Hey, king and country!" said her father; "I'd ought to have somebody here to shell it for me!"

"Who you trimming up a tree for?" her mother demanded. "I thought they wasn't to be any in town this year."

"It ain't Christmas yet," Ellen said only. "I guess it won't do any hurt two days before."

While the two worked, Ellen went to the cupboard drawer, and from behind her pile of kitchen towels she drew out certain things—walnuts, wrapped in shining yeast tinsel and dangling from red yarn; wishbones tied with strips of bright cloth; a tiny box, made like a house, with rudely cut doors and windows; eggshells penciled as faces, a handful of peanut owls, a glass stoppered bottle, a long necklace of buttonhole twist spools. A certain blue paper soldier doll that she had made was upstairs, but the other things she brought and fastened to the tree.

Her husband smoked and uneasily watched her. He saw something within her plan, but he was not at home there. "If the boy had lived and had been upchamber asleep now," he thought once, "it'd be something like to go trimming up a tree. But this way"—

"What you leaving the whole front of the tree bare for?" her mother asked.

"The blue paper soldier goes there. I want it should see the blue paper soldier first thing," Ellen said and stopped abruptly.

"You talk like you was trimming the tree for somebody," her mother observed, aggrieved.

"Maybe something might look in the window—going by," Ellen said.

"Get in there! Get your heads in there, ye beggars!" said the old man to the popcorn. "I'd ought to have somebody here to pick up them shooting kernels," he complained.

In a little while, with flat footed stamping, Ben Helders came in. When he had the pattern number, by laborious copying against the wall under the bracket lamp, Matthew said to him:

"Going to get a boy to work out, are you?"

Helders laughed and shifted.

"He's going to work by and by," he said. "We allow to have him to ourselves a spell first."

"Keep him around the house till spring?"

"More," said Helders. "You see," he added, "it's like this with us—family all gone, all married and got their own. We figured to get hold of a little shaver and have some comfort with him before he goes to work for life."

"Adopt him?" said Matthew curiously.

"That's pretty near it," Helders admitted. "We've got one spoke for at the City Orphan asylum."

Ellen Bourne turned. "How old?" she asked.

"Around five—six, we figure." Helders said it almost sheepishly.

Ellen stood facing the men, with the white festoons of popcorn in her hands.

"Matthew," she said, "let him bring us one."

Matthew stared. "You mean bring us a boy?" he asked.

"I don't care which—girl or boy. Anything young," Ellen said.

"Good Lord, Ellen," Matthew said, with high eyebrows, "ain't you got your hands full enough now?"

Ellen Bourne lifted her hands slightly and let them fall. "No," she answered.

The older woman looked at her daughter, and now first she was solicitous as a mother.

"Ellen," she said, "you have, too, got your hands full. You're wore out all the time."

"That's it," Ellen said, "and I'm not wore out with the things I want to do."

"Hey, king and country!" the old man cried, upsetting the popper. "Don't get a child around here underfoot. I'm too old. I deserve grown folks. My head hurts me"—

"Matthew," said Ellen to her husband, "let Helders bring us one. Tomorrow—for Christmas, Mat!"

Matthew looked slowly from side to side. It seemed incredible that so large a decision should lie with a man so ineffectual.

"Seems like we'd ought to think about it awhile first," he said weakly.

"Think about it," said Ellen. "When haven't I thought about it? When have I thought about anything else but him we haven't got any more?"

"Ellen," the mother mourned, "you don't know what you're taking on yourself"—

"Hush, mother," Ellen said gently. "You don't know what it is. You had me."

She faced Helders. "Will you bring two when you come back tomorrow night?" she said. "And one of them for us?"

Helders looked sidewise at Matthew, who was fumbling at his pipe.

"Wouldn't you want to see it first, now?" Helders temporized. "And a girl or a boy, now?"

"No, I wouldn't want to see it first. I couldn't bear to choose. One healthy, from healthy parents, and either girl or boy," Ellen said and stopped. "The nicest tree thing I've made is for a boy," she owned. "It's a paper soldier. I made these things for fun," she added to Helders.

For the first time Helders observed the tree. Then he looked in the woman's face. "I'll fetch out a boy for you if you say so," he said.

"Then do," she bade.

When the four were alone again Mat sat looking at the floor. "Every headlong thing I've ever done I've gone headlong over," he said gloomily.

Ellen took a coin from the clock shelf. "When Ben goes past tomorrow," she merely said, "you'll likely see him. Have him get some little candles for the tree."

"My head hurts me," the old man gave out. "This ain't the place for a great noisy boy."

Ellen put her hand on his shoulder almost maternally.

"See, dear," she said, "then you'd be grandfather."

"Hey?" he said. "Not if it was adopted, I wouldn't."

"Why, of course. That would make it ours—and yours. See," she cried "you've been stringing popcorn for it already, and you didn't know!"

"Be grandfather, would I?" said the old man. "Would I? Hey, king and country! Grandfather again!"

Ellen was moving about the kitchen lightly with that manner which eager interest brings, of leaving only half footprints.

"Come on, mother," she said; "we must get the popcorn strung for sure, now!"

The mother looked up at the tree. "Seems as if," she said, wrinkling her forehead, "I used to make pink tarleton stockings for your trees and fill 'em with the corn. I donno but I've got a little piece of pink tarleton somewheres in my bottom drawer."

Of Interest to Women and the Home

The Pebbles Were Unusually Beautiful.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Something About Diamonds and Diamond Mines.

"KIDDIES, would you like to hear something about diamonds tonight?" asked daddy.

"Yes, daddy, and I'd like to own a heap of them, too," replied Jack.

"Doesn't it seem strange that diamonds are really only a form of carbon, that black substance which we use in electric arc lamps and which is in the coal we burn—that is, it has to be in the coal that burns very well?

"Probably the best anthracite coal—the soft we are burning in the grate tonight—is about 92 per cent carbon.

"Then the graphite which, mixed with some clay, makes our lead pencils is a form of carbon.

"But, of course, the diamond is the most beautiful form of carbon known and the purest.

"About the first diamond that we know anything about was a stone set in the ring of Charlemagne, the French king. This was in 768.

"One of the greatest discoveries of diamonds was made in 1867 in South Africa by a trader and hunter whose name was John O'Reilly.

"One night he stopped at a farmhouse near the junction of two rivers and begged permission to stop overnight.

"The farmer's name was Van Niekerk, a Dutchman, who had two children. Mr. O'Reilly noticed that the pebbles with which these kiddies were playing were unusually beautiful, so he asked permission to take one of them to a friend of his, a Dr. Atherstone, at Cape Town.

"Dr. Atherstone examined the pretty pebble and told Mr. O'Reilly that it was a diamond of 22½ carats. This little pebble with which those two children were carelessly playing was sold later for $3,000.

"Mr. Van Niekerk remembered that he had seen a similar stone, only very much larger, in the hands of a Kaffir witch doctor, who used it in his incantations.

"He hurried right away and found this old Kaffir witch doctor and offered to buy the stone, but the Kaffir didn't wish to sell.

"So Mr. Van Niekerk began offering him things to persuade him to sell, and before he had finished he had given the Kaffir about all he possessed—500 sheep, horses and his house and farm in the forks of the rivers.

"At last the old fellow was persuaded to part with the pretty pebble and the very same day it was sold to a diamond buyer for $56,000.

"It weighed 84½ carats and is called the 'Star' and was bought by the English Earl of Dudley."

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"What is it dear?" asked Mrs. Prentiss as her little daughter came crying into the kitchen where she was washing dishes.

"My foot hurts," sobbed the child. "That old shoe! Let mother see! Oh, a stone has worked into that hole. The cardboard mother put in has worn through. I'll cut another piece. Then no stones can work in for a while," she said as she buttoned the shoe.

"Won't you ask Daddy to get me a new pair?" asked the child.

"Yes, dear. Much good will it do," she added to herself as the child ran from the room.

"There comes the grocer's man. I am afraid to meet him. He surely will tell me I can order nothing more until something is paid on account, but if I keep my boarders, I must feed them, that is certain," and she answered the knock at the door and gave her order.

In just such a tension as this Mrs. Prentiss had lived for two years. Her husband earned a good salary, but Saturday evening he came home late with most of his money gone. He had made it a habit to hide the little bit that remained before he went to work Monday morning. That was easier than meeting the reproachful eyes of his wife when he handed her a sum pitifully inadequate to meet the household needs.

After the order clerk had left, she placed the roast in the oven and set about a thorough search for the money. She had looked in the corners of the bureau drawers, in the medicine cabinet, and the tray of her trunk and had found nothing. She began making her bed, wondering where to look next. While she was beating up the pillows something fluttered to the floor. She picked up a roll of money that had evidently been tucked in the pillow case. Unrolling it she found there were four one-dollar bills. She opened her pocket book and placed them with the $8 she had received from her two boarders that morning, making $12 in all.

Taking a pencil she jotted down these items: Rent $20, grocer $28, coal $8, shoes $2.25. "What can I do with $12?" she asked herself aloud, then bowed her head on her arm and the hot tears wet her gingham sleeve. She reached for her handkerchief and resolutely wiped them away.

From a drawer in her writing desk she took out a leather case and opened it. A diamond sparkled on its satin bed. It was her engagement ring. She wondered if she could be the happy girl to whom that ring had been given, she whose life stretched in one dead level of monotonous work and desperate struggle to meet her bills. She slipped the case back in the drawer and returned to the kitchen.

After the dinner work was cleared away she dressed herself and little Bess and placing the leather box in her handbag she left the house.

She had a friend who was a jeweler. He would give her what the ring was worth, she knew.

"Do you wish to sell it or borrow on it?" asked the jeweler, noticing the name and date engraved on the inside.

"Sell it," she answered, while the hot blood surged to her face.

"A good judge of diamonds selected that," said her friend, as he counted out the money. "That is a fine stone."

"Now I can pay all the debts," she breathed as she left the store.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Fall Victories.

The two new equal suffrage States, Montana and Nevada, bring the number up to twelve and make the Western part of the country solidly white on the suffrage map. As far as area goes, just about half the country now has votes for women, and more than four million women will vote for the next President, and on the election of one-quarter of the members of the United States Senate. The Nevada and Montana suffrage presidents, Anne H. Martin and Jeannette Rankin, were the heroines of the recent national suffrage convention in Nashville. They have both promised to come and speak in New Jersey during the coming suffrage campaign.

Within the past four weeks four more State Federations of Women's Clubs have unqualifiedly endorsed suffrage, those in New Mexico, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and New York. In Pennsylvania and New York determined resistance was offered by the antis, who had previously circularized every club in the federation upon the question. In New York, the anti faction was led by the State and national presidents, Miss Alice Hill Chittenden and Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, but the vote was 227 in favor to 72 against. Many prophecies were made as to the large number of clubs who would leave the federation if such a stand was taken, but up to date no resignations have come in. The New Jersey federation endorsed a referendum on woman suffrage a year ago, but the question of suffrage has not been voted upon, as the president, Mrs. William T. Ropes, herself a Suffragist, decided that no resolutions either for or against suffrage should be introduced at the meeting this fall in Hackensack.

The National Convention.

The National Suffrage Convention was notable for a number of things. There were at least a hundred delegates from States south of Mason and Dixon's line, a wonderful showing when we remember that up to two or three years ago there was practically no suffrage sentiment in the South. The way in which the people of Nashville and neighboring towns turned out night after night to attend the evening meetings, which were held in Ryman's Auditorium, a building seating over three thousand people, was pretty good evidence that Tennessee is taking a serious interest in the question. It is the belief of the Suffragists that Tennessee will be the first Southern State to give its women political equality. A number of prominent women writers were delegates to the convention, among them being Mary Johnston, Kate Langley Bosher, Maria Thompson Daviess, Grace Gallatin Seton, Kate Waller Barrett and Zona Gale. Many women prominent in the social reform work of the world were present, and several of them spoke at the tremendous Sunday afternoon mass meeting, when the aduitorium was jammed to the doors and numbers of people were turned away because there wasn't even standing room. A picturesque figure at this meeting was Madame Rosika Schwimmer, of Hungary, who has been sent to this country by the women of fifteen European countries now either actually engaged in the war or standing on the brink of it. Her errand is to stir up sentiment among the people of the United States, not so much to the need of help for present sufferers as to the need of such measures as will prevent a recurrence of the present horrible catastrophe. Foremost among such measures, Madame Schwimmer believes, should be placed the granting of equal political rights to the women of the world.

The Suffragists' Thanksgiving Proclamation

By Carrie Chapman Catt, President of the International Suffrage Association.

Let the American people give thanks in this year of the Lord, 1914, that no Kaiser, Czar, King or Emperor rules over us. Let us be grateful that our national destiny rests upon ballots, not bullets. Let a prayer of reverent thanksgiving arise from every throat that our families are united, our children provided with safe homes and loving care, and that the bloody demon of war holds no terrors for our people.

Let us rejoice that our fertile far-spreading acres have produced enough food for all our own millions and for the millions of starving, stricken ones across the sea. And in the midst of our thanksgiving let us not forget to utter one other prayer: that our dear land may be preserved from the greed and hate which have led our kindred to murderous slaughter.

Let us not boast our American superiority, but with all humility, mindful of human weakness, repeat with one acclaim: O God, give us permanent peace; give us the tolerance and the liberty upon which alone an honorable peace may be founded. Give us a democracy in which the prayer of Thy children may be heard, and give us faith to trust that the "Voice of the People is the voice of God!"

Household Hints

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

It must be embarrassing to persons unable to rid themselves of the odor of perspiring too freely. Such persons can find in mother's kitchen cabinet common baking soda, of which take one teaspoonful on a washcloth, wet with clean water and thoroughly rub into the armpits; will remove all that disagreeable odor. No soap should be used, as that sours and adds to the trouble. When taking a bath, a little soda on the washcloth will remove all skin secretions, leaving it smooth and free from odor.

For Croup—This recipe is worth its weight in gold to any mother who has children that are subject to croup: Ten cents' worth of oil of organum, five cents' worth of dark iodine; mix with one cup lard. Let lard melt (not get hot), then mix all together. It will be green when well mixed. Grease throat and chest at night and children will never have the croup.

THE TABLE

Light Dessert After Heavy Dinner—One pint cream whipped until stiff; add one tablespoon powdered sugar and one teaspoon vanilla. Roll five graham wafers into crumbs. Place a layer of whipped cream in sherbet glass, on that a layer of rolled graham wafers, and continue likewise until glass is full, finishing with the whipped cream; then dash a piece of jelly on top, about the size of a walnut. This dessert is light, simple and delicious.

Philadelphia Scrapple—Hog's head boiled until meat falls off bones; strain and separate bones from meat, run meat through grinder, put chopped meat into kettle, add water to make ten quarts, season with pepper, salt and sage to suit taste. Boil and add white cornmeal to make consistency of mush. If desired, add one tablespoon buckwheat to each pint of cornmeal while dry. Boil 15 minutes, stirring constantly, then pour into pans, let cool; slice and fry in lard.

Queen Victoria's Plum Pudding—Two cups raisins, two cups currants, one cup hickorynut meats, two cups suet, one-fourth pound mixed peel, two cups flour, one teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder. Stir together and put in well greased cans (such as pound coffee cans); fill two-thirds full and put in a large kettle with water enough to almost reach the top of tin. Boil eight hours. If plum puddings are cooked this way once you will never go back to the old way of boiling in a cloth. One can of pudding will serve six people. It can easily be warmed when ready for meal by setting tin ni the oven for a few minutes. This is a cheap pudding, as neither eggs nor sugar is called for. Can be served with any kind of a sweet sauce. Spice can be added if desired.

Genuine Irish "Call Cannon"—One dozen medium-sized Irish potatoes; peel and boil until soft. Strain, and season with salt to taste. Mash with potato masher, add half cup milk and tablespoon butter. Mash real fine with the masher, then take a big basting spoon and whip potato the same as you would cream, then put in a large vegetable dish. Make a large hole in the center, put in a good-sized piece of butter in the hole, and the "call cannon" is ready for the table.

Here is another recipe for "call cannon." The late Patrick Ford, editor of the Irish World, gave a prize of $25 for it. It is called Glengarriff "call cannon," and on Hallowe'en it is in great favor with the Irish policemen in New York and Chicago:

Dumplings: To one quart flour add 1½ tablespoons baking powder, one even teaspoon of salt and pinch of pepper. Mix thoroughly, then add sufficient milk to make a soft dough that will drop from the spoon into the boiling broth. This recipe calls for neither egg nor shortening.

DEALERS AFFIX STAMPS

declared that they should have secured stamps before 2 o'clock Monday afternoon and a majority are today selling articles with the stamps affixed. Chewing gum, perfumes, powders and practically all toilet luxuries, wines and distilled or fermented liquors when sold in bottles, must bear war-tax stamps. All the stock that is in the stores in this city, therefore, had to be stamped before it was put on sale yesterday. The dealer has to pay the entire cost of stamps on cosmetics, chewing gum and distilled liquors. In turn, the consumer will have to pay, but the increase, except in a few instances, will be slight and hardly noticeable, dealers assert. The tax on cosmetics is two and one-half cents on the dollar.

The bureau at Washington made public last night the ruling that certificates issued by officials of the State in the interests of the State are not subject to tax. Certificates issued by officers of the government at the request of private persons solely for private use are not to be stamped.

No great amount of kicking has been heard coming from local merchants and on the whole they seem pretty well supplied with the necessary stamps. In other parts of the State and country this is not so true, however, and merchants of all kinds are worrying over their inability to secure the necessary marks. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing has worked day and night turning out the new stamps and they have shipped away from Washington many tons at a time. The problem of furnishing stamps to all applicants has been complicated, however, by the action in some instances of collectors to regard suggestions from Washington that all applicants be given a sufficient supply to last a few days and not be permitted to load up with large quantities. Information that has come to hand indicates that the merchants in some cases who do business in this city have secured enough of the stamps to last a month or more, while in other communities merchants have been unable to get the stamps at all.

There are two classes of the stamps, one for use on proprietary articles and wines and the other for documents. The proprietary stamps range in value from 1-8 to 20 cents and the documentary stamps from 1-2 cent to $1,000. The adhesive stamp taxes are the ones which will fall directly on the average citizen.

One of the most noticeable war tax enactments which went into effect yesterday was the one on telephones and telegrams. Senders of telephone messages and telegrams for which a fee of fifteen cents or over is charged, are subject to one cent tax.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The offering at Proctor's theatre, beginning tomorrow, will be one of headliners throughout. In addition to the Van and Carrie Avery Company, numbering six people in all, who present the big laugh-getter, "Making the Movies," there will also be Arthur Hustin & Co., presenting vaudevilles funniest novelty with "Roosevelt in Africa." Both of these acts are among the highest priced attractions ever brought to Plainfield. Those well known and artistic musicians, Markee Brothers, will delight young and old with their novelty musical act. Skeddon and Pike will [illegible] class singing and dancing. De Pinna, will present graceful feats upon the high trapeze. The continuation of the great serial, "The Million Dollar Mystery," will be shown on the screen this afternoon and tonight and for tomorrow and Friday the big Photo play feature will be "The Resurrection" with Blanche Walsh in the leading rôle. This film is in four parts and holds the breathless attention of the spectators from start to finish.

FANWOOD RECORDER WANTS TO RESIGN

Charles Sheelan's Resignation Received But Not Accepted by Council.

Charles Sheelan, who for sixteen years has held the office of recorder in the Borough of Fanwood, tendered his resignation at a meeting of the Borough Council held last night but the matter was laid over until a future meeting with the object of inducing him to retain the recordership between now and that time. On several previous occasions Mr. Sheelan has announced his desire to discontinue in that capacity but each time he was again induced to change his mind.

Ordinances were introduced providing for the licensing of dogs and junk dealers and will be drawn and presented at the next meeting.

Bills amounting to $6,687.20, including the State school tax of $1,672.98, township school tax of $2,343.50, and the county tax of $2,187.69 were read and ordered paid. The greater part of the bills were of annual standing. The finance committee reported cash on hand $2,293.30, which, with the taxes and other items to come in during the coming month, would meet the bills.

John Ford, Jr., who was granted a license to drive a taxicab at the last meeting, was granted a second to operate another taxi.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the clerk to purchase twelve more hack badges. A communication was received from Mrs. Charles Sternheim asking that she be re-imbursed for the loss of a number of chickens, but as the letter was not filled out properly nothing was done in the matter. Louis J. Garda was allowed $16 for the loss of twenty-six chickens and Charles Sheelen $10 for the loss of twenty, all being killed by one or more dogs, making the borough responsible.

PETITIONS FOR BIG REDUCTION IN TAXES

William Palmer Smith Asks for Cut of $24,450 in 1914 Assessment.

William Palmer Smith, of Belvidere avenue, appeared before the Union County Board for the Equilization of Taxes at its meeting in the city building this morning with a petition for a reduction of $24,450 in his 1914 tax assessments. Because of the peculiar conditions surrounding the appeal made by Mr. Smith and the fact that it is in a particularly beautiful section of the city the Board decided to investigate the claims and went to the place during the noon lunch hour. A report and disposition will be made of the appeal when the Board reconvenes this afternoon.

Several other minor hearings were conducted this morning and when the board meets this afternoon it is thought that the entire remaining list of names will be disposed of. Many petitions for a reduction were made by Plainfield taxpayers and today's session is the third of the county body in this city.

WANT INSPECTOR FOR SEWER WORK

Commissioners Met Last Night But Failed to Make the Appointment.

Mayor Robert Clark, of North Plainfield, acting as one of the members of the Joint Sewer Commission in the interests of the Borough Council, last night introduced a resolution at the meeting of the commission to have a steering committee appointed to work in conjunction with the construction work. It was brought out that the engineers in charge of the work had made this request and also the selection of an inspector to keep tabs on the progress of the work with a view to making reports at the commission meetings. A representative of the engineers spoke in behalf of this movement but failed to convince the commissioners that the appointment was necessary at this time.

The various sub-committees made their reports all of which indicated that the work is progressing in a satisfactory manner. Representatives of the Dunellen, North Plainfield and Plainfield Councils were present at the meeting held in the city building.

COMPLETE CITY'S NEW OUTLET SEWER

Kelly-McFeeley & Co., of Camden, Finish $30,000 Contract.

The contracting firm of Kelley, McFeeley & Company, of Camden, yesterday completed the city's new outlet sewer, constructed for the purpose of relieving the overtaxed trunk line on West Front street. The new line runs from Grant avenue and West Third street, straight west on the later thoroughfare to Clinton avenue, north to Myrtle avenue and thence to the disposal beds at Rock avenue. The cost approximates $30,000 and although considerable difficulty was experienced in constructing an inverted syphon beneath the Clinton avenue bridge, because of water, the contractors will probably net a good profit.

The new sewer is already in service, the swing-over at Grant avenue and Third street having been made by means of a cleverly constructed manhole designated by City Engineer A. J. Gavett. A false wall was first built in to hold back the flow and when all was in readiness, this was knocked away in favor of a new channel. A large crowd of interested spectators watched the operation.

RELIEF COMMISSION PLANS ITS CAMPAIGN

William M. Wherry, Jr., Elected Chairman of Newly Formed Committee.

William M. Wherry was selected as chairman of the Commission for the relief of the Unemployed at the meeting held in Mayor Percy H. Stewart's office last night, for the purpose of organization. At that time a set of by-laws governing the work of the body was drawn up and it was decided to give out official statements at regular intervals, reporting the relief given, the employment arranged for and the general progress of the work and the estimated requirements for its continuation.

The members of the Commission include Mr. Wherry, Samuel T. Carter, Jr., A. M. Harris, Duncan W. Taylor and Mayor Stewart, and these members head committees appointed by themselves to carry on definite phases of the proposed campaign. Money will be appropriated only on warrants signed by the chairman of the finance comuittee, A. M. Harris; and one other commissioner. Mr. Harris, speaking in behalf of the finace committee, emphasized the necessity for immediate activity on the part of that committee toward raising the necessary funds for commencing the actual relief work; also the importance of bringing home to every citizen of Plainfield and North Plainfield a realization of the situation confronting the community and the need of universal support.

Mr. Wherry, chairman of the committee on employment of the Charity Organization Society, reported that the society had employed a special investigator to look up every one of the 300 families registered at the Mayor's office, and to determine the exact condition of each and its probable needs. This investigation is still in progress, but will be finished by the end of this week. From what has already been done, however, it is known that there is much distress, and in many cases pressing want.

AIRMAN DROPS BOMB ON KRUPPS

German Nation Alarmed by Success of Hostile Aviator at Essen.

RUSSIANS AT CRACOW

Czar Expects to Hear of Victory Soon—King George Pays Visit to Troops at Front—Nicholas Reported to be With Troops in Poland.

The Hague, Dec. 3—A foreign aeroplane circled above the Krupp gun factories in Essen, yesterday, and dropped bombs on the cannon works, according to a report from Berlin. The extent of the damage is unknown. The aviator escaped unhurt despite the heavy fire directed at him. The news that a hostile aircraft has been able to fly over Germany far back from her battle lines has created the greatest excitement in Berlin.

Petrograd, Dec. 3—Czar Nicholas is reported to have reached the battle front in Poland, in an official announcement given out today. The Russians have retaken Strykow, thus regaining possession of the Lodz-Warsaw Railway. A correspondent at the front wires:

"There is no perceptible alteration in the relative positions of the opposing armies in Poland and the Germans apparently still maintain their hold on the central region west of Yowicz. The situation remains extremely hazardous.

"The Russians are making progress in the neighborhood of Gracow. They are now within eight miles of the city."

General Rennenkampf has been superseded because he was two days late in taking up a position through which the German armies in Poland were to have been hemmed in. This failure robbed Grand Duke Nicholas' strategical scheme of its full success a week ago, entailed a week of heavy fighting and allowed the hurrying up of large German reinforcements.

But the arrival of the Czar at the front is expected to be the occasion for the declaration of the good news of the completion of the grand duke's strategic plans.

The German attack with new forces from the west frontier on the Russian left was repulsed after heavy day-long fighting Monday. The Russian succeses on the right wing are not yet so marked, but the strategic position on both flanks is admirable.

Paris, Dec. 3—The French war office gave out the following statement at 3 o'clock this afternoon:

"In Belgium a rather vigorous cannonade has been directed against Nieuport and to the south of Ypres. Inundation of the country extends now to the south of Dixmude, between the Lys and the Somme. The village of Aix Noulette to the west of Lens has been violently bombarded. Calm prevails all along the front from the Somme to the Aisne and in the Champagne region.

"In the Argonne we have repulsed several attacks of the enemy and we have made some slight gains.

"In the Woevre region the German artillery has shown some activity, but only with insignificant results.

"In Lorraine and in the Vosges there is nothing of importance to be

A COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS

For Plainfield and North Plainfield

The city and borough got together last Christmas in a hearty effort for the common good. The Community Christmas committee, which was then formed, representing the Federation of Men's Bible Classes and similar groups, gathered and expended about $800 to brighten the festival for the friendless and forgotten (whether solitary, in families or in the Alms House or over at Bonnie Burn). It has been reorganized for another vigorous campaign of the same sort. Arthur M. Harris is president, Wm. H. Murray, M. D., is secretary, and Charles A. Rice, treasurer. This committee now confidently appeals to the generous people of this community for funds with which to cheer the Christmas of the city's fifteen forlorn old men and women in the Industrial Home, to gladden the long days in Bonnie Burn's household of 120 patients, nurses, doctors and helpers, and to give clothing, food, fuel and playthings, too, where they will be appreciated to many families and individuals whom this winter has overtaken in distress. Careful investigation by the Charity Organization Society is depended upon to prevent duplication and waste and the committee will co-operate with the Mayor's committee on unemployment to find jobs for the jobless. The aim of the movement is to use the means which shall be placed in its hands so as to bring happiness to the most deserving, without distinction of race or creed.

No one in Plainfield need go hungry on Christmas day, and none will, if the plans of the committee receive the generous support of the people. The Community Christmas idea offers a perfectly practical method of wise and sympathetic distribution of the community's bounty.

And now Mr. and Mrs. Plainfielder how does it strike you, and what are you going to do to make it a success?

WHY ORGANIZED CHARITY DESERVES YOUR SUPPORT

It distinguishes, by investigation, the deserving poor from the professional beggar.

It gives freely to relieve immediate want, then builds for permanent betterment by "helping people to help themselves."

It seeks work for those who really want it.

It furthers legislation to check the causes of poverty and suffering; and to create better public institutions and more of them.

It guides the giver in placing his gift where it is most badly needed.

It promotes general co-operation in all benevolent work, to avoid duplication of effort

It provides a clearing house through which all may know what others are doing.

It educates the ignorant to a better understanding of sanitation and hygiene.

It benefits no particular class or race or creed. Its work is for all.

DO YOU BELIEVE IN THESE IDEALS? If so, we want to explain to you how we are working to attain them. We need YOUR help and YOUR interest NOW. The Charity Organization Society, 323 Babcock Building.

ALTON VAIL ATTACKED BY A FOX TERRIER

Alton Vail, the ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Vail, of Front street, was bitten by a fox terrier at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The terrier, which belonged to Jeremiah Flaherty, of Front street, nabbed Alton just above the shoe-top as he was returning from the postoffice via a short cut afforded by the North avenue and Front-street entrances to the Park Hotel stables. Alton hurried home and Dr. Cooley was immediately summoned by his mother. The doctor upon examining the bite found that the skin had merely been dented by the teeth of the dog. Heavy underwear had prevented its being punctured. Dr. Cooley, nevertheless, deemed it advisable to cauterize the wound.

This is not the first time that the dog has bitten someone and it was put out of the way last evening by Marshal Harry Shugars. The marshal incidentally attempted to perform the execution shortly after the animal manifested its vicious temperament by biting Alton. He boards with Mrs. Lydia Vail, whose home is next to Alton's. He had a day off yesterday and happened to be in when Alton came home yelling. As soon as he found out what had happened he hastened to the neighborhood in which Alton had been bitten with a revolver in his hand. The dog was out in the roadway in front of its home. The animal seemed to have an intuition as to what was up and it would not stand still and give the marshal a good shot. The marshal would have taken a shot at it anyway, but a large number of people assembled and he was afraid of hitting some one. The scene ended with the animal being called into its home, whereupon, the marshal biding his time quickly despatched the canine.

GIFTED CONDUCTOR PLACED ON PENSION

Patrick Fay, Authority on Music and Literature, Retired by P. S. C.

Patrick J. Fay, of West Front street, one of the oldest and best known trolley conductors in the city was yesterday officially placed on the retired list by the Public Service Railway department. From now on he will receive a substantial pension from the corporation in recognition of twenty years of faithful service, during which time he held a record second to none in point of merit marks.

He is the second Plainfield conductor to be placed on pension by the P. S. C., the first being Charles L. Ryder, of Grant avenue, who was retired two years ago.

Mr. Fay began his railway career on the West Fourth street line and has always remained in the local service, most of the time on the Arlington avenue and Netherwood lines. His last run was made on the latter a few days ago. Despite his seventy-two years of life, Mr. Fay is as active as a man half h is age. He is an ardent lover of music and Irish literature, two subjects of which he has a wonderful knowledge. The fact was frequently discovered by connoisseurs who sought to quiz him, generally to their great discomfiture. In other ways, Mr. Fay is a gifted conversationalist and his absence from the cars will be noted with regret by his hundreds of patron friends.

GOOD OLD SUMMER TIME.

According to weather observer John Neagle, today's weather is a record breaker for December 3. The maximum temperature was 65 and the minimum 51, making a mean temperature of 58. The normal temperature for December is 35 degrees, making today 23 degrees above the normal. The previous highest temperature for December 3 was in 1905 when the thermometer climbed to 60.

A Smoldering Volcano; Trouble Again Brewing In Distracted Mexico

ALL eyes having been turned away from Mexico and concentrated on the fearful struggle on the European continent, it was assumed that the Mexican troubles were over and that the dove of peace had permanently alighted on that distracted country. But it appears now that Carranza and Villa have unreconcilable ideas and that both have been merely banking their fires.

After declaring war upon Carranza Villa the other day issued the following statement:

"In view of the attitude of Venustiano Carranza, which has been the cause of great injury to our country, and since he could never govern a republic nor make happy a country which aspires to a real democracy, a country which wants to have a government emanating from the people subject to an interpretation of the national feelings, we have been obliged to renounce him as commander in chief of the Constitutionalist army in charge of the Constitutional party, and we have declared hostilities, being disposed to fight until the last—until he is forced to abandon his power and place and place the same in the hands of the real representatives of the people, who are disposed to remedy all evils of the republic and to direct it through the proper road of progress and well being.

"We are not in favor of personalism, but we are defenders of principles, and consequently we will not fight against any other of the chiefs who have contributed to the downfall of the usurper Huerta, our difficulties being against the person of Venustiano Carranza.

"The states of Sonora, Zacatecas and part of Coahuila have seconded us to present our attitude, and shortly we will be joined by adherents from other localities."

According to the official account issued by the Constitutionalist agency, the trouble between Carranza and Villa, which has been brewing for some time, came to a head through Villa's arrest of General Alvaro Obregon, one of the Constitutionalist military commanders, who recognizes Carranza as first chief of the Constitutionalist organization and head of the executive authority in Mexico.

Evidently fearing that this act was preliminary to a revolutionary movement under Villa, Carranza ordered service discontinued on certain railways which Villa might be able to use in the transportation of his troops, said to number 40,000. In a telegram to Carranza Villa demanded an explanation of this action, and Carranza replied by asking Villa to explain his conduct toward Obregon. Villa replied that Obregon was his prisoner and added that he did not recognize Carranza as first chief of the Constitutionalist cause and did not intend to be present at the national convention to be held in Mexico City.

When the way for a settlement of Mexico's revolutionary troubles had been paved by the retirement of General Huerta from the provisional presidency there were predictions that Villa would not consent to have Carranza installed as the head of the national government. These predictions were deprecated in official circles in Washington, where the disposition was to insist that Mexico's troubles had been settled and that peace would soon be established throughout the republic.

The opinion is prevalent in Washington that the American troops in Vera Cruz city will not be withdrawn immediately. General Funston, the commanding officer of the American forces there, has been opposed to evacuating Vera Cruz at this time, and when he was notified of President Wilson's decision to withdraw from that port and city he recommended that the evacuation be postponed until Oct. 10 at least. It was the original intention to have the American forces leave Vera Cruz without delay, but it is now admitted in official circles that the evacuation will not take place until a satisfactory agreement has been reached with the national authorities at Mexico City in regard to the customs revenues collected by the United States authorities during the American occupation.

Americans who have claims against Mexico for damages during the recent revolutions are making inquiries of the state department as to when these claims will be taken up. Such inquirers are being informed that none of the claims will be considered until after a government has been recognized in Mexico.

UNION MEETING OF PARENT-TEACHER ASSN

W. D. Lewis, Well Known Educator, to Speak Here December 10.

"Socializing the School," will be the subject of an address to be made by W. D. Lewis, principal of the William Penn High School, of Philadelphia, at the union Parent-Teacher Association meeting to be held at the Plainfield High School, Thursday night, December 10, at 8 o'clock, and an invitation is extended to all members of the association, as well as parents and other people who are interested.

Plans for this union meeting were made as far back as last spring, and at a meeting of all the presidents and secretaries of the Parent-Teacher Association of Plainfield, North Plainfield, Dunellen and other nearby places held at the home of Mrs. William Sandford, Tuesday afternoon all of the arrangements for the union meeting were completed.

While the expenses will be shared equally by the members of the various associations, they hope that as many people as possible will share in the enjoyment of the gathering and pleasure of hearing such a distinguished speaker. The meeting will be held especially for parents, but everyone interested is invited.

Mr. Lewis is widely-known in educational circles. Within the past month he has addressed the Southeastern Ohio Teachers' Association, the Indianna State Teachers' Association, the teachers of Washington, the New England Superintendents' Association and the New Jersey State Teachers' Association. During 1913 he was on the Chautauqua platform, speaking in Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma. He recently published a book entitled, "Democracy's High School," which has been brilliantly reviewed. Just how Mr. Lewis will present the subject of "Socializing the School," is not known, but it is promised that his talk will be one of vital interest to all parents.

SUITS FOR $15,000 AGAINST LOCAL MAN

Godfrey Weinman Made Defendant in Action Brought by Accident Victims.

Trenton, Dec. 3.—Papers in two suits against Godfrey Weinman, of Westervelt avenue, Plainfield, were filed in the New Jersey Supreme Court here, last night, James C. Calvert, the Union County Clerk, being complainant in one for $5,000, and Henry Schoope, court crier at Elizabeth, pressing the second one for damages amounting to $10,000. The suits will be tried at the January term of court.

Both suits have been started to recover damages for injuries sustained in an automobile collision between Weinman's car and one in which Calvert and Schoope were riding on East Front street, Plainfield, October 20 last. Mrs. Weinman was driving the car at the time the accident accurred and the Union County officials were riding in an automobile rented from the Prince Street Garage in Elizabeth. Mr. Weinman has also been made defendant in a suit brought by the garage owners to recover $1,500, the amount of damage said to have been done to the hired machine.

Following the accident Schoope and Calvert were removed to Muhlenberg Hospital where they were confined as patients for several days. Calvert claims that he has been permanently scarred on the face and that he received injuries that kept him away from his duties for several weeks. The court crier was probably the more seriously injured of the two victims and claims that he has sustained a permanent internal injury.

MANY INDUSTRIAL CHANCES OFFERED

Address of George O. Smith Before American Engineers in Philadelphia.

(Extracts from address by Geo. Otis Smith, Director, United States Geological Survey, before American Institute Chemical Engineers, Philadelphia, Pa.)

Four constituents enter into the reaction that we term industry. Two of these, brain and brawn, are organic compounds and two are perhaps to be regarded as in-organic—money and material. None of these components is wanting here in the United States and in fact their abundance affords the best reason for an optimistic outlook upon the present industrial situation. Of these four constituents, labor and capital and brains are all more easily transported generally than the crude materials upon large tonnages of which the industry must depend. Thus, cheap coal attracts manufacturers just as cheap land attracts farmers.

With distribution of raw material is linked the influence of markets upon the location of industry. The development of transportation systems makes the problem of markets a most complex one. The industrial independence of the small community of a century ago has given way to the system under which your dinner table may represent the tribute from several continents. Even in a country so diversified as ours in its natural bounties domestic production of everything consumed is not dedesirable nor profitable. Exchange of commodities with foreign countries becomes necessary, so it follows that industrial independence is the goal toward which a nation should face, but not a goal which it should have either the intention or desire to attain.

To increase industrial prosperity this country needs to export finished rather than crude products and to import raw materials rather than manufactures. It is the product of American labor rather than the bounty of our natural resources that preferably should go into the world's markets. As the engineers of America study this matter of expansion of manufacturing, it becomes evident that the distribution of raw material and of power is the key to industrial opportunities.

Petroleum and natural gas in their distribution in some degree supplement coal. Thus, the largest oil field both in present production and probable reserve is in California, a State with only negligible coal resources. Taken together, these mineral fuels constitute a national asset comparable with the soil resources of this country, but the larger part of the value of the natural gas, petroleum, and coal to the nation is in their relation to manufactures.

The wide distribution of ores of the principal metals sufficiently rich and extensive to be mined in large quantities means that the metallurgical industry is important on both the Pacific and the Atlantic seaboard, in most of the Rocky Mountain States as well as in several of the Middle States. Even in the two metals which at once suggests to us centralization—copper and steel—there is widespread production. In the mining of copper last year 23 States contributed, and no less than 28 States furnished iron ore to the furnaces of the country.

The raw material resources of this country are so widely distributed that industry has been developed at this rapid pace at many points. The tendency is away from geographic centralization of industry rather than toward it. A few oppartunities for expansion need only to be suggested: the South with its happy combination of coal and iron-ore in the same districts makes pig-iron production possible at minimum cost; the West with its hydro-electric possibilities available as a source of relatively cheap power for chemical and metallurgical industries; the Rocky Mountain region with its vast unutilized sources of sulphuric acid and equally great unmined stores of phosphate rock.

The ingredients necessary for producing prosperity appear at hand. The new financial system already promises more mobile credits. A more sympathetic attitude of the public toward big industrial operations is indicated. The efficiency of American labor and American engineering was never questioned.

In any estimate of American ability to make the most of the present opportunities for industrial expansion, no better measure of the inventive genius of this country can perhaps be found in a moment's review of what is making the European war so terrible. Strictly neutral may we be, yet from the heights above to the depths below we find American inventions "at the front"—the aeroplane, the magazine rifle and machine gun, the barbed wire, and the submarine and its torpedo. Can not our nation lead as well in fashioning the tools of peace as in designing the machines of war?

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

A Jersey Watchman on the Towers of Morality.

Another sociological and moral viewer with alarm of the "immodesty" of woman's dress has climbed to the battlements of virtue and wound a shrill and tympanum tearing horn. Mr. Charles P. Taylor, president of the Newark Board of Education, has been studying the frocks of the petticoated school teachers of that town and other Jersey settlements, and his feelings are rent thereat. He is distressed by the "positively disgraceful"—how well the sterotyped vocabulary suits the stereoptyped will over "immodest" togs feminine—the "positively disgraceful" clothes of the schoolma'ams. He has studied them in the country, he has studied them in the town; and his report runs to one melancholy tune. If those erring women folks don't reform their fashions, "it will be necessary for school Boards to take the matter in their hands and prescribe a uniform for classroom wear."

Is the old saying too homely, "Teach your granny to suck eggs?" It bubbles up in the memory when men lay down the laws of garb to the superior sex. Regulate, pass a uniformity of school clothes act, mind somebody else's business, yield to the form and prescure of the time. Of course, school Boards will have to take up this high matter. To be fussy, to be futile, to bustle about like the devil in a gale of wind, blowing hard, accomplishing nothing; 'tis the complete duty and chief pleasure of a Board of Education.

Why can't the Hon. John Cotton Dana, that two-leged public library of Newark, take an hour off and tell the horrified President Taylor how stale the story of female 'immodesty" of gown is, what a long tedious line of querulous doctors and divines and satirists and misogynists has preceded him? Or Mr. Dana might print a selection of this literature of masculine busybodiness at his Elm Tree Press.

Men lecturing women on their dress are among the most ludicrous of the comic mouse-mountains in this vale of tears.—New York Sun.

MANY MEASURES BEFORE CONGRESS

President Conferring With Leaders as to Legislative Program.

Washington, Dec. 4—President Wilson is conferring with the leaders of Congress with reference to a legislative program for the third session of the 63rd Congress, beginning next Monday. So much time necessarily must be used in considering the appropriation bills that the general program must bo very limited. The administration apparently is determined that there shall be no extra session next summer, so the President must make very adroit selections if he is to get favored measures through without too great risk of compelling an extra session to finish with the supply bills.

Conservation will undoubtedly have an important place on Mr. Wilson's list. Two waterpower bills have pased the House and are favored by the President, having been improved, from the viewpoint of the conservationists, over the form in which they were introduced. The President may also urge a bill which extends the policy of leasing public lands, following the model of the Alaska leasing bill. This proposed measure will find opposition in the Senate.

The mystery attending the fate of the seamen's bill has not yet been solved. The President has continued noncommittal regarding this legislation, which has passed both houses in radically different forms, and is now awaiting a conference. This bill is one of the pets of union labor. According to its opponents, its provisions are wholly inconsistent with the business policy which must be followed by shipowners if they are to take full advantage of their privileges under the ship registry law. During the present period of transmition, it might embarrass the administration. Nevertheless the unions are likely to insist that this measure be enacted, despite the argument that it may handicap the growth of the American merchant marine.

Probably some of the Southern members will insist again upon the Henry-Smith bill providing for Government loans on cotton. They will at least support amendments to the Federal Reserve Act, which they overlooked in the last session, in their eagerness to force the Government into cotton speculation, and which, according to the Reserve Board, would have increased the lending power of the reserve banks having dealings with the South to the extent of $196,000,000.

Not the least important among the measures which Congress must consider soon is the railway mail pay bill. The President, by his silence, has practically approved the Moon bill, which is backed by Postmaster-General Burleson, and virtually turns the assistant postmasterships over to the spoilsmen. This bill also provides for a less rate of compensation to the railroads than provided by the Bourne bill, which has been worked out as a scientific measure. The railroads are enthusiastic over the Bourne bill, and the President may be forced into a definite position soon.

The Shackleford-Bryan good roads bill has passed the House and awaits action by the Senate. This is a gift to the States of $25,000,000. Another bill has been prepared, embodying a scientific plan of Federal aid to road-building. Here again the President must make a choice.

The House has also sent to the Senate two convict labor bills; one making goods of this kind carried in interstate commerce subject to the laws of the state of destination, and the other forbidding their importation from abroad. The Burnett immigration bill, with its literary test, is ready for action by the Senate.

The President is expected to renew his advocacy of the ship-purchase bill, which will meet with hard sledding in both branches. An important House bill seeks to place all water transportation under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Resale prices, patent legislation, the labeling of manufactured goods, with references to adulteration and misbranding, the licensing of warehouses, the admission of State banks to the Federal Reserve system—these are only a few of many important subjects for legislation which may be considered during the term of President Wilson, if not the coming session.

The contest over the rivers and harbors bill may be renewed, although it can be said that the spoilsmen are in a somewhat chastened mood. So far, President Wilson has not announced his attitude toward this measure. But, with the necessity of economy staring him in the face, it is expected he will ask for its close pruning.

EVERY RED CROSS SEAL SOLD AIDS SUFFERERS

Whether a Few Cents or a Few Dollars Are Spent It Helps a Great Fight.

Every Red Cross seal that is sold in Plainfield will do its share toward carrying into the life of some tuberculosis sufferer a gift of hope, relief, and perhaps of life itself. The Anti-Tuberculosis League, following the custom established some years ago, is making a strenuous effort to raise several hundred dollars in the sale of these holiday greeting stamps, and in doing the work they are making a fight for the health of the whole people. Red Cross seals give an opportunity for all to do their bit in helping the battle against the white plague. It does not matter whether a person purchases a single seal or a thousand. Eighty-five per cent. of the money so spent goes into the work of relieving distress right here in Plainfield. Even one seal will help.

The few cents or dollars put into these seals, according to the means of the purchasers, will truly express the spirit of the great season of hope. By buying seals the sufferers, the city and the purchaser are all aided. Put them on every letter you write from now until the first of January. It will show what splendid work is being done in this city to fight tuberculosis, and provide a simple and appropriate holiday greeting to the friend or business associate who receives the letter.

Seals are on sale at the City National Bank, State Trust Company, First National Bank, Estil's stationery store (Will H. Williams), Laing's book store, A. E. Force & Company, Plainfield Milk and Cream Company, Queen City Hotel, Randolph's drug store, Schwed Brothers, Woman's Exchange, Y. M. C. A., Charity Organization Society, by the public school and Sunday-school children. As the holidays approach there will be stands, in charge of a committee of young women, located at convenient places in the city.

SAYS INDICTMENT IS MERELY TECHNICALITY

Jackson E. Reynolds, Speaking for Central Railroad, Cites the Facts.

In response to a request from reporters regarding the indictment of the Central Railroad by the United States Grand Jury, the following statement has been made by Jackson E. Reynolds, the general attorney for the railroad company:

"So far as I understand the nature of the case it seeks to test in a criminal proceeding the propriety of a provision in this company's anthracite coal tariffs. That provision reads as follows:

"'In compliance with the Tenth Covenant of the lease from the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company under which the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey operates the Lehigh and Susquehanna Railroad, a lateral allowance is made out of herein-named rates to the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company on all anthracite coal originating on the latter's tracks in the Panther Creek, Nesquehoning and Hacklebarnie districts mined and shipped by it, when coming, via the Hauto, Nesquehoning and Mauch Chunk gateways.

"'The Covenant referred to is set forth in the lease of March 31, 1871, and recorded in Deed Book No. 262, Page 480, of Luzerne county, and Deed Book No. 43, Page 339, of Lackawanna county, Pennsylvania.'

"Ever since the amendment of the Federal statutes in 1906 requiring the railroads to publish the fact in their tariffs if any allowances were made to shippers, all of this company's anthracite coal tariffs have contained this notice to the public. During the eight intervening years since that first tariff publication thousands of these tariffs have been in the hands of the public, and, of course, all shippers of anthracite coal. There has never been the slightest concealment of the fact that such allowances were made in compliance with the lease referred to in the tariff.

"During this same period, and in compliance with the statutes, these tariffs have been filed repeatedly with the Interstate Commerce Commission, so that it also has been fully informed of the fact that such allowances were paid. Never during these eight years has the Interstate Commerce Commission rejected any of these tariffs as being in any manner improper in form or substance.

"It will be noted that the tariff refers to a lease of March 31, 1871, from the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company to The Central Railroad Company of New Jersey of a railroad called the Lehigh and Susquehanna Railroad. That is the railroad between the anthracite coal mines in Pennsylvania and the Jersey Central's rails at Phillipsburg, New Jersey, over which all the anthracite coal traffic of the Jersey Central is moved. As stated in all these tariffs the lease itself is of public record in the counties through which this railroad runs and in which the anthracite coal shippers along the road reside.

"When the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company leased this railroad to the Jersey Central one of the considerations for its so doing was the tenth covenant referred to in the tariffs. The interpretation put upon this covenant for generations has been that under it the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company was entitled to these so-called lateral allowances as lessor of the Lehigh and Susquehanna Railroad."

CUPID NOT HIT BY THE WAR TAX HERE

For Some Unknown Reason Local Marriage License Bureau is not Notified.

Prior to Uncle Sam's recent search for things to hang a war tax on, bashful swains and loyal wooers discussed the merits and demerits of "the high cost of loving;" now the popular topic has taken a sudden shift to "the high cost of marriage." Congress has picked out marriage licenses as a taxable "commodity" and has attached an extra fee of ten cents to the usual dollar handed to the clerk at the License Bureau. Fortunate bridegrooms, who elected to become benedicts before Europe went to war, are today congratulating themselves on the fact that they escaped the war tax. Time still remans, however, for Plainfield's prospective husbands to take out the necessary credentials without suffering the enactment of the surplus fee, for through some unaccountable event the local office has not as yet been notified of the latest step by Congress.

Despite the fact that the high cost of marrying took a boost in other municipalities, yesterday, the register at the local office stated this morning that "bargain prices" still prevail here and nothing will be done until some official notification comes to hand. It was also stated that no special rush had been noticed at the Marriage License Bureau since the news of the tax on Cupid had been heralded broadcast, but in view of the fact that the local license seekers will probably be affected by nightfall business may become more brisk this afternoon.

STATE MAY FIND JOBS.

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 3.—With the closing today of the private employment agencies, brought about by public vote on the initiative measure at the recent election, a movement has been started for the establishment of State employment agencies in the larger cities, similar to the State agencies in Massachusetts. The recommendation will be one of the features of the annual report of State Labor Commissioner Olson, and it is expected that the proposition will be brought before the session of the Legislature this winter.

Plainfield, N. J., Dec. 3, 1914.

TODAY'S PAPER.

In today's issue of the Daily Press, which will have a circulation of 10,000, the merchants of Plainfield present the greatest selling plan that has ever been tried in this city, or in this section of New Jersey. Through a co-operative, fare refunding plan, in which leading merchants of Plainfield participate, a week of special bargains and holiday sales, has been inaugurated. Beginning on Saturday, and lasting until December 12, the merchants have planned an unusual selling scheme.

In the past when there have been special sales in this city, aside from the Dollar Day sales, the direct appeal has been made especially to Plainfielders. Now, so that the people of surrounding towns may enjoy the offerings of local merchants in exactly the same measure as the people of the city, a fare-refunding plan has been devised, whereby our suburban friends who come here to shop, will be placed on an equal footing with the Plainfield public.

The Daily Press is circulating thousands of extra copies, going to all the towns within twenty miles of Plainfield, which have direct means of transportation, so that all may know about the liberal offer of the progressive Plainfield merchants. The Daily Press circulates regularly in practically all of the towns in the fare-refunding zone, but as a result of the extra circulation the greatest possibly publicity will be given the event.

The sale is most timely now. All the Plainfield stores are offering excellent displays of articles, including a fine line of goods suitable for holiday gifts. In order to make the plan attractive the stores are not only offering great bargains, but have added the car fare refund offer for those living outside of the city, which is fully explained elsewhere in today's paper. It is a great opportunity for those who have not heretofore made a practice of shopping in Plainfield to visit the city, at no expense for transportation, and become acquainted with the excellent stores. We are confident that many who pay a visit to Plainfield stores during the coming week will become regular shoppers, for they cannot fail to be well pleased with the roomy stores, elaborate display of goods, reasonable prices and courteous treatment that they will receive. Shopping in Plainfield will become a habit with scores who never bought here before.

THE GREAT PROBLEM.

That the condition regarding the unemployed is causing serious conditions in cities all over the country is shown by a glance at the exchanges which reach our desk. Every city is working out some plan to provide relief similar to that which has been started in this city, first by a citizen's committee, and later by that committee in conjunction with the Charity Organization Society Added to humanity's obligation to the suffering Belgians, the Americans are called upon to aid the worthy people of this country who are out of work, not through any fault of their own. The conditions right here in Plainfield are such as to call for every effort to relieve want and distress, the extent of which is only realized by those who have personally investigated.

The New York Tribune, in summing up the situation in that city, states facts which are equally applicable to every other city in the country, when it says:

If distress has not yet gone beyond the ability of the organized charities and the city's agencies to handle it, there is no time to lose in preparing whatever form of organization is necessary to meet the crisis which really cold weather and snow will bring.

Not in years has New York City faced such a situation as exists now because of a couple of years of business stagnation, emphasized by the war's reaction on this country. The Mayor and his advisers are wise not to try to gloss it over instead of endeavoring to meet it squarely.

New York has patriotism enough, and money enough, to care for its needy, but in times as bad as these nothing less than a complete disclosure of the extent of the need can be expected to bring the necessary means for relieving it. The proposed committee will be able to furnish the facts and handle the funds satisfactorily. It is to be hoped that its work will not end there. Unemployment hangs on from year to year. This committee will not be taking full advantage of its opportunities for service if it does not endeavor to bring about something resembling a permanent solution of this difficult problem.

The contributing editorial for Saturday, which was announced Tuesday to have been written by a well known Plainfielder will be on a live topic, by a live wire citizen. Since the announcement was made in Tuesday's paper, the writer has changed his subject, and what he has to say about one of the burning questions in this city will create much comment.

The local public school re-opened yesterday, after having been closed since Wednesday last, owing to the holiday. Having worked election day they took their vacation in a lump chunk last week.—Clinton correspondence in an exchange.

COYLE'S INJURY A BAD WRENCH BUT NO BREAK

Physicians attending William Coyle, the Holy Cross football player injured in the Thanksgiving Day contest with the Dunellen Monarchs, held a consultation yesterday afternoon as a means of determining the exact nature of his hurts. It was announced last night that no bones were broken although the knee joint has been seriously injured.

The limb will be packed in plaster cast where it will be kept for at least a month. The two bones joining the part above the knee with the part below that joint have been pulled apart and the knee-cap badly wrenched. It will be at least two months before Coyle will again be able to get around.

BARRIE IN AMERICA.

British Author Desires to See Maude Adams In His New Play.

Sir James Matthew Barrie, the celebrated British author, slipped into New York city the other day in his usual quiet way, but was caught by reporters and submitted to an interview in which he said:

"I merely thought I would slip into America and give a few persons a surprise. I intended to walk in on Miss Adams and see her in one of my plays. That is a treat I still have reserved. But publicity has prevented my doing this. I assure you this is the first time I have ever been interviewed. I may stay here a month.

"While I have no intention of lecturing on the war and presenting the British side of it, I naturally have my opinions on the subject.

"I believe it will be a long war. The British people did not appear to appreciate its significance until the first casualty list was published. Then they seemed to awake to a realization of its import. There was a great rush of young men to enlist, and it has kept up. The tale that the Irish have been lukewarm in volunteering is absurd. They were all armed and ready to fight anyhow, and they have responded generously to the call of the nation. There have been more enlistments in Ireland in proportion to population than there have been in England or Scotland."

The only other time that Sir James visited the United States was in 1896. On that visit he went to the Empire, in New York, to see Maude Adams in "Rosemary." The next morning he visited Mr. Frohman and offered to write a play for her within a year. The play was "The Little Minister." That was the only time he ever saw Miss Adams on the stage, though she has since acted all his plays. One of the objects of Barrie's second visit is to see Miss Adams in his new play, "The Legend of Leonora."

RUMOR OF SPICER STRIKE IS WITHOUT FOUNDATION

During the last few days rumors have been current of a strike among employes of the Spicer Universal Joint Company at its South Plainfield factory but an investigation today failed to reveal any such conditions prevailing in that concern. Monday morning several of the moulders' helpers, becoming dissatisfied with certain work allotted to them, quit the shop and this action probably gave rise to the rumor.

The places vacated by the disgruntled helpers were immediately filled by new men and it was not necessary to discontinue work in the moulding department as has been stated.

The jury which found the verdict of guilty against Lamar deliberated for only about 20 minutes.

BY MORRIS MILLER

If Lee Magee's contract with the St. Louis National league ball club is, as stated by his employers, one of the new documents, without flaw or loophoole, Magee's case will be used as a legal rock by organized ball. It seems certain that the Magee contract will be the test argument for the whole 1915 season—always provided, of course, that the Feds get that far, or even open their campaign. Very few attempts have so far been made to jump these contracts, which were drawn up for the express purpose of holding the players in tight but equitable terms. Whenever subjected to court inspection, these documents have been held perfectly valid, and the sad experience of Armando Marsans ought to have served as a lesson to the would-be floppers. The upholding of Magee's contract would mean the practical annihilation of the last Federal league hope, as their only chance to get star players is to break through the safeguards of the new agreements—hence it begins to look as if, probably without his ever having thought of it, Lee Magee is to be the big central figure of baseball litigation if he attempts to play with or manage the Brooklyn Federals.

Pat Moran, who has been named to replace Red Dooin as manager of the Philadelphia Nationals, is one of baseball's most interesting characters.

With that name it might be supposed that Moran would be just a jolly Mick from the city lots, with possibly a grammar school education. Moran looks Irish enough in the face, all right, but is a man of culture and attainments, and one of the recognized authorities upon the literature and poetry of ancient Ireland.

His knowledge of the dying Gaelic language is remarkable and his collection of old Irish songs and legends is one of considerable value. Moran was with the Boston Nationals some several seasons ago and was obtained by the Cubs to alternate with Kling. When he began to slow up he was transferred to the Phillies.

Both Manager Herzog and President Herrmann state Ivan Olson, former Nap, is to play regularly with the Reds in 1915. Now where will Ivan play? First base appears to be the only position open. That team has Heinie Groh for second base, Manager Herzog for short and either Bert Niehoff or Count Von Kolnitz for third base. Olson is less at home at first than at any other infield spot, but he is versatile enough to make good there just the same.

Davy Jones, former Tiger, who is now Federal leaguing with the Pittsburgs, says Benny Kauff is a second Ty Cobb in everything except speed, hitting and thinking. Otherwise the similarity is very striking. Jones has seen both men perform, and Kauff, in his opinion, ranks below Cobb, Speaker, Milan and even Crawford. Kauff, says Jones, is a major league outfielder all right, but not an extraordinary player. Jones says Kauff is a mechanical player—he prospers with prosperity and recedes with reverses.

A most inquisitive Indianapolis fan wants to know if the Federal league didn't promise all the players of its pennant-winning club $4,000 automobiles—and, if so, why the Indianapolis men haven't received them? Don't rush on. Don't be in such a fever. They'll get them, all delivered at the ballyard the day the Federals are admitted as contenders in the world's series.

The major league ball clubs may not feel keenly the stunted financial strength of the south next spring as an aftermath of the low price on cotton, but more than one of them will change their spring plans. Detroit, for one, will play fewer exhibition games than ever before. This means the club will start south about two weeks later than usual. No money is made on exhibition games in the south as a rule, but what is taken in lightens the burden, and is not to be sniffed at. Cincinnati is another club that plans a less extensive spring trip, while a general curtailment in games may be looked for.

BORO SCHOOLBOYS WON GREAT GAME

Kearny High School Quintet Vanquished on Its Own Court.

The North Plainfield High School basketball team won a well-earned victory when it took the laurels from the strong Kearny High School five, at that place yesterday, by a score of 21 to 18.

The game was an exciting one from start to finish and there was never a time that either team could feel that it had a comfortable lead on its opponents. In this game the borough quintet showed a marked improvement over their playing against the Alumni five last Friday night and, although the Kearny team was a fast one the local players fought to the finish and took the game that they justly deserved.

The Canadians were decidely at a disadvantage on account of the long cement floor on which they are not used to playing, but even with this handicap they finally managed to squeeze out a victory.

In the first half, Townley led in the scoring by caging three neat field goals, and his playing throughout the entire game was creditable to any winning combination. Altogether, the local team scored five field goals and two fouls in their half and, while their oponents scored the same number of goals and fouls the half ended 13 to 12 in favor of North Plainfield, as one point was awarded for overguarding.

In the second period the game was very close also, and the Kearney side certainly showed some remarkable passing and fine team work, but the local players managed to win out by scoring three field goals and two fouls as compared with its opponents' three field goals and no fouls.

Hebert and Townley played star games for the local quintet, Hebert holding his man scoreless. VanMater also played a good game at centre and, in fact, every man on the team deserves credit.

For the Kearny team Cook, Margetts and Parker played star games, Cook scoring the greatest number of points for his aggregation, by caging three field goals and two fouls. Parker starred in his fine passing and work at guard.

HOLY CROSS WILL PLAY IN NEWARK SATURDAY

For the first time in several weeks this city will be without a football attraction as the Holy Cross eleven, that has played to local crowds every Saturday since the season opened save one, will play its first out of town game Saturday. Their opponents will be the Franklins, of Newark and that game will be staged at that place.

The Franklins have already defeated the locals this season but that was before Holy Cross struck its present winning streak and the borough team hopes to make a better showing than in the first game with this aggregation. The first time these two teams met, which was the first game of the season for the locals, there was no score. A motor bus will carry the rooters to Newark to witness the game which is sure to be the best of the season.

PARK CLUB BOWLING.

BRUGGY WILL PLAY WITH BOSTON BRAVES NEXT YEAR

Frank Bruggy will wear a Boston Brave uniform next season according to a decision given out by the National Board of Arbitration of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, yesterday. Bruggy was a member of the Lawrence team of the New England League last season and was one of the best players on the team, his fine sticking and fielding being a big factor in the winning of the pennant by that club. At the end of the season it was announced that he had been captured by a Boston scout, but a later report had him signed up with the Rochester team of the International League.

Rochester has sold its claim to the services of Bruggy and he will be a member of the Boston squad next year. His playing in the minor league last year showed that he was out of his class and that he was good enough for the big leagues. Many scouts were after him at the close of the 1914 season and the National League champions were the ones to get his signature. Bruggy played baseball in this city for several years on the Plainfield team and was one of the best players this city has ever had.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SERVICE.

There will be an admission fee and prizes will be offered. Several teams have already entered the contest.

HOLY CROSS MAY PLAY GAME HERE SATURDAY

The Holy Cross football team will not play out of town this week, but Manager Doyle is trying to schedule a game for the Cricket Field. The Franklins cannot get their field Saturday and the game has been canceled.

A good game will probably be booked for local fans for that day and will be the last of the season. The game will probably start at 2:30 o'clock and further announcements will be made later.

LOCAL ELKS' TEAM.

Captain Nash, of the Elks senior bowling team, has picked the following to play against Hoboken tonight: Kiely, Blatz, Vail, Nash and Campbell. This is the same team that took two games from Paterson last week.

LEALS ANNEX FIRST CONTEST OF SEASON

Roselle High School Five Completely Outplayed in Second Half Yesterday.

After playing a listless game in the first half against the Roselle High School basketball team on the Y. M. C. A. court yesterday afternoon, the Leal School aggregation played their heads off in the second half and defeated their opponents by the score of 30 to 17. The first half was close from a scoring standpoint but the local forwards could not seem to put the ball into the basket although they had at least thirty shots. The game was full of fouling on both sides, but the many free throws from the fifteen foot mark did little good as very few were made in the initial period of play.

The Roselle players started the game with a rush and scored before their rivals had had a chance at a basket. Stewarts men then started a good code of signals working and the ball was in the possession of the home team most of the time after that and they had chances to run up a high score. Stewart, Dickerson and Schneider were the point getters for the Leal combination in the first half while Martin and Benedict each made two for Roselle. The half ended with the score tied, each team having 11 points. During the second half Captain Stewart paved the way to victory with five field goals that were shot from very difficult angles and Dickerson also did better in this half, getting a quartet of the two point variety. The signals of the private school team worked to perfection in this half and the visitors were completely lost. They only secured six points while Leals ran up 19. Dale and Harrington played well at guard for Leals. The score:

BOYS THOUGHT BOROUGH COP ACTED SUSPICIOUSLY

Testifying that they looked upon Marshal John Herrman, of the borough police force as a suspicious character, and appointed themselves special sleuths to watch his movements, Howard and Joseph Sachs, of Harrison avenue, failed to impress Justice of the Peace Thomas Snape, when they were arraigned before him to answer a larceny charge this morning, and were held in $100 bail to await the action of the Somerset county Grand Jury. According to the story told by Herrman the boys were arrested while attempting to steal a loaded gun from the garage in the rear of the home of Mrs. J. P. Truitt, known as "Tunlaw," on Greenbrook road.

Kerrman had his attention called to the boys by Special officer John Reinmann, who was doing relief duty in that vicinity at the time. The youths had completed the alleged depredation and were leaving the premises with the gun when Herrman came on the scene. They had emptied the shells out of the weapon when Herrman appeared and at the sight of the officer, it is said that they threw it in to the bushes.

EATING PASTY POI.

A Painful Experience With the Popular Food of Hawaii.

The national food of Hawaii is "poi." It is to them what rice is to the Chinese, frijoles to the Mexicans, blubber to the Eskimos. The first day I was there some friends of mine—or I had thought they were friends—inveigled me into eating some of it.

"It's made out of taro root," they explained. "They take an iron that looks like a pestle, put the roots on a bollowed out board about the size of a table leaf and pound it up. It is their staff of life. Have some."

With that the person with whom I had been friendly passed me a dish of poi. It looked like billboard paste—the same color, the same consistency and, from as near as I could politely get my nose, the same smell.

"They eat it with their forefingers," he explained, "and it is known as one finger or two finger poi according to how thick it is. This is two finger poi, so you will have to dip two fingers in and quickly put them well back into your mouth. Just go ahead and help yourself."

I wanted to make a bit surer what I was eating and started to take a tiny taste, but he saw the motion and a line of pain ran across his face that I should doubt the food he had set out for me. "We have plenty of it," he said cordially, holding out the bowl.

With that I thrust my two fingers in, stirred them around until the poi was clinging to them and, bending over, thrust them into my mouth—well back. Immediately I knew that I had made a mistake; the ropy stuff got on to my tongue and wouldn't come off. The moment it touched my tongue I knew that it not only looked like billboard paste and smelled like it, but that it tasted like a pot that had been left over from yesterday. For an hour I tried to worry it off my tongue and all afternoon I could taste it lurking in my mouth.—Homer Croy in Leslie's.

NOTHING IS SUDDEN.

Events Seem So Only Because We Do Not Foresee Them.

The mind is often said to be illuminated by a sudden idea or the will to come to a sudden resolution. The suddenness is not only apparent to the onlooker; it is felt by the subject himself, when light seems to flash into his mind or his will to determine itself on an instant. He may talk of inspiration, meaning the unrelated act of some power outside himself. Just so we talk of the suddenness of lightning, the suddenness of an earthquake. We imagine earthquakes and lightning flashes as unrelated, independent happenings, and forget that every earthquake and every flash of lightning is the manifestation of an immutable and slowly working law and could, had men but knowledge enough, have been foretold from the ages.

Things are sudden only because we do not foresee them, and their suddenness is no inherent quality in themselves; it is lent them by our ignorance. The striking of a match may be as sudden as a flash of lightning and the fall of a pin as sudden as a pistol shot, but in normal conditions they do not make us "jump," because the conditions are the state of our nerves and the relative force of the impact upon our senses. A camel falls suddenly under the last straw, but it is the previous slow piling of all the other straws that is the cause of his broken back. Nothing is, in reality, more sudden than anything else; it is from ourselves, from our lack of comprehension and preparation, that the lightning, the earthquake and the pistol shot borrow their suddenness.—London Times.

Jupiter In Mythology.

In Roman mythology Jupiter was the supreme deity, the head and front of the whole system, god of the air and king of the celestials. He was primarily a divinity of the sky and the originator of all atmospheric changes and weather conditions. His weapon was the thunderbolt, and one of his titles was Jupiter Tonans, thundering Jupiter. Heavy or continuous rain was attributed to Jupiter Pluvius, rainy or rain sending Jupiter. When the earth became parched with heat and was in sore need of rain Romans invoked the great God as "Jupiter Pluvius."

STORIES OF WAR IN EUROPE THAT ARE FILLED WITH HEART INTEREST

How an Unnamed Officer Stiffened Courage of His Men—Mother's Letter Breathes of Heroism.

Russians Continually Bringing "Captured Kaisers" Into Camp — Priest Says Mass In Trenches.

CORRESPONDENTS at the front or marooned in obscure places while the great European conflict rages manage daily to get through the wary censors some little grimly humorous or tragic side lights of the war.

How an unnamed lieutenant colonel in the French army stiffened the courage of his men and his own when they were about to charge the enemy for the first time is told in the Paris Figaro. The colonel, wounded, but convalescent, is described as relating the anecdote on the train as follows:

"It was in the course of one of the numerous battles on our right wing. For the first time my regiment was about to go under fire. The moment was decisive; the regiment had its battle formation, and now it was necessary, over open ground, to march straight and resolutely at the enemy. Their fire was hot and already had produced ravages in our ranks. It was scourging. I had taken my position at the head of the regiment and given the order forward, but, separated from their base, my men hesitated. In vain I repeated the command. Then, returning toward them, I said:

"'What! You flinch? All you will gain out of this turnabout is death on the spot without having been of any use. Attention! Take my arm one of you, and all of you hold arms, and arm in arm, gun in hand, we'll advance. You'll find that's not so bad.'

"My word, the idea decided them, and arm in arm we started forward. They soon got warmed up, and for a time I was nearly forced to hold them back. Oh, the brave fellows!"

A woman who was listening said:

"It was fortunate, colonel, that you yourself were not afraid."

"Not afraid!" exclaimed the colonel. "Oh, madam, if you knew what shivers went through me! But when I saw them hesitate I had to set an example. I was bluffing."

Letter For Every Soldier.

A well known member of the academy has written a "letter for the man who never gets one," to be distributed in the French trenches. In it he says:

"Apparently there are very few among our soldiers who never receive any letters. But if there is such a one it is to him that I address this letter.

"I see you from here, my dear young fellow. I see your disappointment and your sadness when the quartermaster appears in sight with a number of letters in his hand and calls out first this name and that and deals out to eager hands envelopes which contain the good wishes of the family and a mother's kisses. Every one is grave, and every one listens for his name to be called out. Nothing for you.

"You fight, however, just as well as your comrades. And while you only do as well as they do you really do something more. The other soldiers are fighting for the homes of their ancestors and for the defense of their property. You have neither home nor ancestors nor property, and you fight with as much courage as those who are getting letters by every post.

"Don't be ashamed because no one has written to you. Be proud. Others have been born in a family whose position is made. You will have the satisfaction and the pride of making your own. They have received; you will give, and your part is by far the best.

"Once more, my son, courage and good luck. And let me send you a kiss, I, who have no son, and you, who have no father. BRIEUX,

"French Academician."

"The Arm Doesn't Matter."

The Paris Matin gives details of the death in the Hospital de la Compassion at Compiegne of a son of Dr. von Puttkamer, former president of the reichstag. A short time before the German retreat from Compiegne a young noncommissioned officer of the Eighteenth dragoons was brought to the hospital desperately wounded by a 75 millimeter shell.

Both eyes had been destroyed, one arm had been torn away, and he had a terrible wound in the leg. From the number and attentiveness of the high officials at his bedside the French hospital attendants realized that he was a person of importance.

The young man retained consciousness, murmuring faintly, "The arm doesn't matter, but it is dreadful never to see again and not to be able to hunt or ride."

The Germans made preparations for an elaborate funeral when they realized that his death was imminent, but the proximity of the French compelled they to abandon their design. Von Puttkamer expired as the French entered Compiegne.

A Modern Cornelia.

The Paris Temps reprints from L'Information a letter from Mme. de S. of Paris, written on learning of the death of her son, seventeen years old, who volunteered despite ill health. The letter, which the Temps calls worthy of the Roman matron Cornelia, runs:

"I thank you for the delicacy with which the terrible news was broken to me. In my agony one consolation remains. For seventeen years I struggled for my son's life against many illnesses, only saving him from death by constant care. I am deeply proud to have succeeded in preserving him to die for his country."

Nearly Put One Over.

"The Germans are full of resources," writes an English correspondent, "and it is one of their favorite plans to lure the allied troops on to attack them by various devices, of which an indicated intention of surrendering is the most common. If this deception is successful a skillfully concealed machine gun turns a murderous fire upon those who have advanced either to attack or to accept surrender.

"The audacity of the enemy cannot better be illustrated than by a well authenticated statement of what took place last night in a trench held by a Gurkha regiment. A figure, silhouetted by the moonlight and wearing a complete Gurkha uniform, approached the end of the trench and delivered the message:

"'The Gurkhas are to move further up the trench. Another Gurkha contingent is advancing in support.'

"Puzzled by this announcement, the officer in command replied: 'Who are you? Where do you come from?' to which the only answer was, 'You are to move up and make room for other Gurkhas.'

"The English was good, but something excited the officer's suspicions.

"'Answer, and answer quickly,' he said. 'If you are a Gurkha by what boat did you cross?'

"This question, under the circumstances, was no easy one to answer, and the German (for such he was) turned and fled, but he had not gone five yards before he fell, riddled with bullets.

"If the officer had been deceived the trench, of course, would have swarmed with Germans almost before the Gurkhas had made room for them."

Fastidious Sandy.

News has come back to England of how the British soldiers taken prisoners are faring in Germany. There are 6,000 in a caserne at Doeberitz.

Among them are some highlanders. It's getting to be cold weather in Doeberitz, and a German officer, with the kindest of intentions, offered to provide them with trousers.

The Scots were indignant and rejected the gift.

"But why do you prefer petticoats?" the German asked of one of the highlanders.

"Because they never bag at the knees," replied Sandy.

"Is This the Kaiser?"

According to a dispatch from Petrograd to the London Daily News, the Russian soldiers pursuing the Germans in western Galicia are bringing "captured kaisers" into camp two or three times each day.

It is the belief of the czar's force that the war can be easily terminated by making a prisoner of Emperor William. For that reason nearly every German officer who wears a "kaiser" mustache and is caught by the Russians is taken to headquarters. "Is this he?" is the oft repeated query. The fact that the kaiser is still at liberty has not dampened the enthusiasm of the Russians.

Mass In the Trenches.

With their only candles the flames of bursting shells and their mighty hymns the roar of cannon, French artillerymen knelt in the trenches at Chalons, in the fiercest fighting along the Aisne, and worshiped at mass, said by a priest on an artillery caisson. When the priest had blessed his smoke and mud stained congregation he went back to tend the gun he had left to offer his prayers to God.

A description of this inspiring scene is contained in a letter received by Mr. Henri Didot at the French consulate in New York city from Baron de Coudenhove, a lieutenant in an artillery regiment.

When the letter was sent from the battlefield the officer, who until the outbreak of the war was consul at Guernsey, England, had been on the battlefield six days without sleep or relief, and of the sixty-three horses in his company only ten were left alive.

"I have seen the most sublime and touching spectacle of my life," he wrote. "Nothing can equal it for daring, for that esprit which makes the Frenchman great. It was last Sunday. Shells fell incessantly everywhere about us, ravaging our tired ranks. Suddenly on to a caisson an artilleryman—dirty, unkempt—climbed. He was a priest, and there on that caisson he celebrated holy mass, a step away from cannons that were being fired every moment. The shock jarred the caisson until it shivered.

"Ah, how sublime! About the cannons that kept growling always knelt these soldiers, rendering homage to God under the fire of shells. Some may have gone to God even as they knelt. I could not see from where I was. There the music was the roar of cannon, the candles the burst of flame.

"For six days we have been under fire at the camp of Chalons. All day the shells fall, and at night we fall asleep on the ground, which is saturated with the rains. We have little to eat. We have fought so hard that of the thirty-three horses in my squadron only ten are left. The horses are so tired that they fall and are unable to rise again."

Unique Dinner Party.

A unique dinner party is reported in a soldier's letter from the front.

At a point where the German and French lines approached to within a few hundred yards from each other, apparently to the west of Rheims, the fighting stopped at about nightfall, and the Germans were just going to their warm meal at the nearby field kitchen, when an officer was seen to mount the French entrenchment waving a flag of truce. A German officer went out to meet him. The Frenchman, who turned out to be the captain of a company, explained that his men were very hungry, having had nothing to eat for several days, and asked whether the Germans would not give them something.

"How many men have you?" he was asked. "About a hundred," was the answer. "All right; call out your men," said the German. The company thereupon laid aside their arms and came over to the Germans, where they sat down and ate their supper with their enemies. The captan is reported to have said that his men were so famished that they would not be able to continue fighting without something to eat.

That Finished 'Em.

A few of the many privileged persons who, obtaining passes through political influence, motor to the neighborhood of the battle line to view the fighting, to the great annoyance of the French general staff, received an effective rebuke a few days ago.

They had collected on a hill overlooking Soissons to watch the artillery duel that was going on across the river when a staff officer rode up and asked what they were doing there. All with one accord said they had come out to see whether they could be of any use in Red Cross work.

The staff officer at once sent them to the surgeon in command of the nearest field hospital with a message placing the whole party at his disposal. The surgeon rose to the occasion.

"It was most kind of you to come," he said. "You can be of the greatest service. Here are picks and spades. Will you kindly bury those dead horses?"

Not many of the horses were ever buried, but that corner of the field of battle was successfully cleared of spectators.

Improve Each Other's Aim.

An officer in a Bedfordshire regiment writes home:

"A battalion of the First division was intrenched within seventy yards of the Germans, and one witty fellow hoisted an improvised bullseye target above the trenches.

"The German snipers had single shots at it, and the hits were signaled up. There were great cheers from our fellows when they scored a bullseye.

"After a bit they put up a target, which our fellows potted at, and there were cheers and songs from both sides."

Bavarians Are Comedians.

The wild ways of the Bavarian soldiery provide the German army with most of its comedy. Intensely sentimental, at times insanely brave, at other times ingenuous as children and at all times effusive, they are at once the wonder and the delight of the more phlegmatic type of German.

Let some unheard of and, by all the rules of war, preposterous thing be accomplished in the way of a sortie or a hand to hand encounter, and the explanation is not unlikely to be, "It was those d——d Bavarians!"

The adjective denotes endearment.

Modern firearms irk these men of the south. Their idea of a fight is a free for all. Roll up your sleeves and wade in. Fight with your hands if you can, and draw your long hunting knife from your bootleg if you must. The knives are carried in a sheath which is fastened inside the right boot. Fair observers say that the French would rather face 500 Prussians in a bayonet charge than 150 Bavarians shouting, "Darauf!" ("At it!" or "Go to it!") and coming forward with their knives drawn. The hoarse chorus of "Darauf!" is said to be no contemptible factor in the grim effect the mountain men produce.

Officers Hail Their Men.

When a German officer slows up his auto in the roadside to pass a small detachment of troops moving on foot he is more apt than not to give the men a hail and ask them if all goes well with them. If it is a sentry the officer is passing as he crosses the bridge at the foot of a village street he will pause and say, "Are you comfortably quartered in this town?" The sentry beams and in a dozen words gives the attitude of the population toward the troops.

In respect to this interchange of greetings and these solicitous inquiries the rapport between officers and men in the German army seems singularly close. There is no familiarity, but there is understanding.

A group of German officers passing a detachment of Bavarians made the usual inquiries: "How goes it with you? How do you like active service?" "Oh, this is fine!" replied the sergeant. "Now an honest man can fight without a policeman in the square to stop him!"

CHAPTER XI.

The Day Before Christmas.

NEXT night they had the bracket lamp and the lamp on the shelf and the table hand lamp all burning. The little tree was gay with the white corn and the colored trifles. The kitchen seemed to be centering in the tree, as if the room had been concerned long enough with the doings of these grown folk and now were looking ahead to see who should come next. It was the high moment of immemorial expectancy, when those who are alive turn the head to see who shall come after.

"What you been making all day, daddy?" Ellen asked, tense at every sound from without.

Her father, neat in his best clothes, blew away a last plume of shaved wood and held out something.

"I just whittled out a kind of a clothespin man," he explained. "I made one for you once, and you liked it like everything. Mebbe a boy won't?" he added doubtfully.

"Oh, but a boy will!" Ellen cried and tied the doll above the blue paper soldier.

"Hadn't they ought to be here pretty soon?" Matthew asked nervously. "Where's mother?"

"She's watching from the front room window," Ellen answered.

Once more Helders came stamping on the kitchen porch, but this time there was a patter of other steps, and Ellen caught open the door before he summoned. Helders stepped into the room, and with him was a little boy.

"This one?" Ellen asked, her eyes alive with her eagerness.

But Helders shook his head.

"Mis' Bourne," he said, "I'm real dead sorry. They wa'n't but the one. Just the one we'd spoke for."

"One!" Ellen said. "You said orphan asylum."

"There's only the one," Helders repeated. "The others is little bits of babies or else spoke for like ours—long ago. It seems they do that way. But I want you should do something: I want you and Matthew should take this one. Mother and I—are older; we ain't set store so much."

Ellen shook her head and made him know, with what words she could find, that it could not be so. Then she knelt and touched at the coat of the child, a small frightened thing, with cap too large for him and one mitten lost. But he looked up brightly and his eyes stayed on the Christmas tree. Ellen said little things to him and went to take down for him some trifle from the tree.

"I'm just as much obliged," she said quietly to Helders. "I never thought of there not being enough. We'll wait."

Helders was fumbling for something.

"Here's your candles. I thought you might want them for somethin' else," he said, and turned to Matthew. "And here's your quarter. I didn't get the toy you mentioned. I thought you wouldn't want it without the little kid."

Matthew looked swiftly at Ellen. He had not told her that he had sent by Helders for a toy. And at that Ellen crossed abruptly to her husband, and she was standing there as they let Helders out with the little boy.

Ellen's father pounded his knee.

"But how long'll we have to wait? How long'll we have to wait?" he demanded shrilly. "King and country, why didn't somebody ask him that?"

Matthew tore open the door.

"Helders," he shouted, "how long did they say we'd have to wait?"

"Mebbe only a week or two, mebbe longer," Helders' voice came out of the dark. "They couldn't tell me."

Ellen's mother stood fastening up a fallen tinsel walnut.

"Let's leave the tree right where it is," she said. "Even with it here we won't have enough Christmas to hurt anything."

* * * * * * *

On that morning of the day before Christmas Mary Chavah woke early, while it was yet dark. With closed eyes she lay in the grip of a dream that was undissipated by her waking. In the dream she had seen a little town lying in a hollow, lighted and peopled, but without foundation.

"It isn't born yet," they told her who looked with her, "and the people are not yet born."

"Who is the mother?" she had asked, as if everything must be born of woman.

"You," they had answered.

On which the town had swelled and rounded and swung in a hollow of cloud, globed and shining, like the world.

"You," they had kept on saying.

The sense that she must bear and mother the thing had grasped her with all the sickening force of dream fear. And when the dream slipped into the remembrance of what the day would bring her the grotesque terror hardly lessened, and she woke to a sense of oppression and coming calamity such as not even her night of decision to take the child had brought to her, a weight as of physical faintness and sickness.

"I feel as if something was going to happen," she said over and over.

She was wholly ignorant that in that week just passed the word had been liberated and had run round Old Trail Town in the happiest open secrecy:

"Coming way from Idaho with a tag on Christmas eve. We thought if everybody could call that night—just run into Mary's, you know, like it was any other night and take in a little something to eat—no presents, you know—oh, of course no presents!—just supper in a basket. We'd all have to eat somewhere. It won't be any Christmas celebration, of course—oh, no, not with the paper signed and all!—but just for us to kind of meet and be there when he gets off the train from Idaho."

"Just like it was any other night." That was the part that abated suspicion. Indeed, that had been the very theory on which the nonobservance of Christmas had been based—the day was to be treated like any other day. And, obviously, on any other day such a simple plan as this for the welcoming of a little stranger from Idaho would have gone forward as a matter of course. Why deny him this merely because the night of his arrival chanced to be Christmas eve? When Christmas was to be treated exactly as any other day?

If in the heart of Mis' Abby Winslow, where the plan had originated, it had originated side by side with the thought that the point of the plan was the incidence of Christmas eve she kept her belief secret. The open argument was unassailable, and she contented herself with that. Even Simeon Buck, confronted with it, was silent.

"Goin' back on the paper, are you," he had at first said, "and hev a celebration?"

"Celebration of what?" Mis' Winslow demanded; "celebration of that little boy getting here all alone, 'way from Idaho. And we'd celebrate that any other night, wouldn't we? Of course we would. Our paper signing don't call for us to give everybody the cold shoulder as I know of, just because it's Christmas or Christmas eve, either."

"No," Simeon owned, "of course it don't. Of course it don't."

As for Abel Ames, he accepted the proposal with an alacrity which he was put to it to conceal.

"So do," he said heartily, "so do. I guess we can go ahead just like it was a plain day o' the week, can't we?"

"Hetty," he said to his wife, whom that noon he went through the house to the kitchen expressly to tell, "can you bake up a basket of stuff to take over to Mary Chavah's next Tuesday night?"

She looked up from the loaf she was cutting, the habitual wonder of her childish curved lashes accented by her sudden curving of eyebrows.

"Next Tuesday?" she said. "Why, that's Christmas eve!"

Abel explained, saying, "What of that?" and trying to speak indifferently but, in spite of himself, shining through.

"Well, that's kind of nice to do, ain't it?" she answered.

"My, yes," Abel said emphatically. "It's a thing to do—that's the thing to do."

It was Mis' Mortimer Bates, the nonconformist by nature, in whom doubts came nearest to expression.

"I don't know," she said; "it kind of does seem like hedging."

"They ain't anybody for it to seem to," Mis' Winslow contended reasonably, "but us. And we understand."

"We was going to do entirely without a Christmas this year. Entirely without," Mis' Bates rehearsed.

"Was we going to do entirely without every day, week day, year in and year out milk of human kindness?" Mis' Winslow demanded. "Well, then let's use a little of it, same as we would on a Monday wash day."

No voice was raised in real protest. None who had signed the paper and none who had not done so could take exception to this simple way of hospitality to the little stranger with a tag on. And it was the glory of the little town being a little town that they somehow let it be known that every one was expected to look in at Mary's that night. No one was uninvited. And this was like a part of the midwinter mystery expressing itself unbidden.

Mary alone was not told. She had consistently objected to the Christmas observances for so long that they feared the tyranny of her custom. "She might not let us do it," they said, "but if we all get there she can't help liking it. She would on any other day."

So she alone in Old Trail Town woke that morning before Christmas with no knowledge of this that was afoot. And yet the day was not like any other day, because she lay there dreading it more.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—How the Corn Got Shocked.

They Scuttled Off of Their Nests to See What Was the Matter.

"THE corn was waving in the night wind with rather a mournful cry. A colony of mice heard the sound and scuttled out of their nests to see what was the matter," said daddy, commencing his bedtime story.

"'We want to be shocked; we want to be shocked!' cried the corn in a great chorus.

"'Shocked!' said the little mice, one to another. 'What in the world does the corn mean?'

"Then all the pumpkin men got up and tangoed around through the corn.

"'If the corn wants to be shocked perhaps we can help!' they shouted, their fat yellow sides shaking as they bounced in and out and around the corn.

"The little mice sat around in a circle and clapped their tiny paws delightedly at the antics of the pumpkin men.

"Then a whole rabbit warren broke loose, and the rabbits came running to see why the corn cried.

"'The corn wants to be shocked,' explained the pumpkin men to the rabbits. 'Can you think of any way it can be done?'

"The rabbits gathered round in a circle, looking very wise indeed.

"'I have never done a shocking thing in all my life,' said a big rabbit, the spokesman of the rabbit warren. 'I really wouldn't know how to begin. Actually the only thing we can do is to hop, and that wouldn't be very shocking, would it?'

"The mice, the pumpkin men and the rabbits all agreed that there was nothing very shocking about hops.

"But still the corn kept on moaning and crying, 'We want to be shocked.'

"'Dear me, this makes me awfully nervous!' said a big gray rat that was sitting on the outer edge of the circle. 'Can't somebody do something?'

"Just then an owl that had been sitting up in the limb of a tree very quietly all this time listening pulled back the curtains which he had drawn across his eyes before he went to sleep and peered wisely down upon the assembled company.

"'Well, of all the silly things I've ever heard of!' he cried. 'Don't you know that the corn is ripe, and when it is ripe it always cries when it waves in the night winds? Tomorrow the men from the big farmhouse over yonder will come and cut the stalks and stand them together in piles or shocks.

"'A shocking thing, isn't it?' he cried. 'Now go away, every one of you. I want to sleep.'"

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

They were sitting in front of the cozy grate fire, by the bright library lamp. Mr. Barry was reading aloud, while his wife stitched diligently on a dress to which she was giving the finishing touches. When he finished a chapter, Mr. Barry closed the book on his finger and looked at his wife.

"What are you making?" he asked at last.

"Mrs. Sargent's dress. I am so anxious to finish it tonight before I go to bed," she replied.

"That is not the dress you were sewing on the first of the week, is it?" he asked.

"No, that was a blue serge for Mrs. Davis," and she smiled at his sudden interest.

"Are you going into the dress making business?" and Mr. Barry stooped over and took a fold of the goods in his fingers.

"Oh, no; of course not. These friends wanted their dresses very much. They had engaged Rose Davery and when she was taken sick and had to break all her engagements they came to me. I have had to hurry to get both of them done this week with all the rest there is to do," and she dropped some basting threads into the fire.

"If you could make two dresses a week I could stop work," said her husband.

She laughed as she looked up at him, but his face was sober.

"I wish you would not joke that way," she finally said.

He placed the book he was holding under his elbow and rested his head on his hand, looking fixedly at her.

"Did you ever know my mother's story?" he asked by way of reply.

"No, she was dead before I knew you," she replied, pulling bastings with the point of the scissors.

"My mother, before she married, was a very fine dress maker. She had a large business, and several girls worked for her. My father was an editor of a weekly paper in the town, but he was not fitted for that work. He did not have push enough to succeed in it. He failed and the failure affected his health. For a long time he was hardly able to leave his room.

"When the income stopped my mother was forced to do something. She asked some of her old patrons for work and they were only too glad to give it to her. Of course she expected the work was a temporary thing, but when my father got better he gradually became absorbed in study and research work, and was so entirely contented in it that he made no great effort to get in any business. At my mother's urgent request he tried several things in a half-hearted way, but soon gave them up.

"My mother accepted the inevitable, and reopened her shop. She did not spend much time there while I was a baby, but she planned everything and was the engine that kept things running. My father was so selfish that he was happy to leave every bit of the bread winning to her to do. I blush when I think of it, yet he was a lovable man. Mother was devoted to him to the last. Do you wonder I cannot bear to see you doing this work, dear?"

His wife threw the dress on the davenport and went and stood by his chair.

"I am glad you told me, Larry, dear. This is only an accommodation, anyway," she said, taking his face between her hands.

"I know," he answered, drawing her down on the arm of his chair. "But I wouldn't care to see you do any more."

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

With a company of minstrel favorites embracing such players as Arthur Rigby, Sam Lee, John P. Rogers, Tommy Hyde, James Mehan, William H. Thompson, Jim Doherty, Elden Durand, Leroy "Lasses" White, Will Cowley, Master Paul VanDyke and many others, George Evans will be seen at the Plainfield Theatre Monday night. A new program of up-to-date minstrelsy in an all new scenic frame and with an all new wardrobe embellishment will be offered. Of course, the singing corps will offer new songs and the big orchestra of the company, under the skillful baton of Eddie Cupero, will be found full and satisfying. These yearly productions of high-class minstrelsy which "Honey Boy" Evans has so masterly managed to produce, have been found really excellent in character and enjoyable to the lover of this time-honored amusement. The little minstrel star himself is always delightfully entertaining and the monologue moments with "Honey Boy" are a sure-fire case of unrestrained laughter. This year he is particularly happy with a big war trap and a sort of geographical lecture upon the war zone.

Household Hints

SYRUP ECONOMIES.

Now when it is time for pancakes and maple sirup is rather expensive, you will find the following a good substitute:

Let two cups sugar and one cup water come to a boil; when cool, add two teaspoons maple flavor. The maple flavor is brought in bottles same as any other extract.

When making apple pies put all parings and cores on to boil; when soft drain off the juice into kettle and squeeze the parings through a fine sieve; put juice and pulp from straining back to boil, ad sugar enough to make cirup for pancakes. Some like it better than store sirup.

THE TABLE

Squirrel Pie—Lay thin slices in bottom of pan, season with salt and pepper, a little parsley, teaspoon mixed herbs powdered, and one cup white sauce. Cut squirrels in pieces, season and arrange on bacon and herbs. Then put in layer of four hard-boiled eggs sliced and one cup white sauce. Cover all of it with pastry, make incisions in pastry, and brush top with beaten egg. Bake one hour, then pour one cup sauce in holes on top and serve hot.

Chicken and Dumplings — Stew chicken till tender with salt and a few celery leaves. For dumplings: Two measuring cups sifted flour, one level teaspoon salt, lard size of small walnut, two and one-half heaping teaspoons baking powder. Rub in lard and mix good, then add cold water to make stiff dough; cut in two-inch squares, put on top of chicken and boil fifteen minutes covered. Take out, thicken gravy and serve at once. Use a large kettle.

Hungarian Carrots—One quart carrots cut into thin strips and measured after cutting; half cup vinegar; three-fourths cup sugar; one tablespoon butter; one teaspoon salt, enough water to cover. Scrape carrots to remove peel. Cut them into two-inch lengths, then into thin slices lengthwise, then into strips. Measure and place in sauce pan; add salt, cover with hot water and boil until tender. Drain off water, add butter, vinegar and sugar and return to fire. Cook slowly until carrot strips are transparent; then remove from fire and serve as side dish with roast veal or as a salad. They are excellent.

Pudding With Vanilla Sauce — Moisten two and one-half cups bread crumbs with three-fourths cup milk, one cup brown sugar, one teaspoon salt, four tablespoons butter, four eggs. Then add one cup raisins cut. Add three-fourths spoon cinnamon and two teaspoons baking powder. Add one cup walnut meats last. Place in buttered baking dish and bake until dry and brown. Sauce: Melt two tablespoons butter, add flour (two tablespoons), stirring till well mixed, then add one-half cup brown sugar and one cup water, cook until clear, add one teaspoon vanilla; when done put on pudding.

Eggless Pumpkin Pies—Two pints thoroughly cooked pumpkin, half cup flour, one tablespoon corn starch, level teaspoon baking powder, one and one-half cups sugar, cinnamon and allspice, half teaspoon level; cloves and ginger, one-fourth teaspoon level; three and one-half pints milk. This makes four pies.

Eggless Fruit Cake—One cup sugar, half cup lard (part butter can be used), one cup chopped raisins, one cup sour milk, three cups sifted flour, one teaspoon each of cinnamon and cloves, one teaspoon soda dissolved in a little hot water; a little salt. Bake slowly. This also makes a nice pudding.

EXPECTATIONS

The kid that lives next door to me
Is talkin' mighty queer.
He says that Santa Claus won't be
A-comin' round this year.
He says we're poorer than we was
An' that's why he is sure
That Santa Claus won't come, because
He doesn't like the poor.

I guess I know we're poor, all right.
My dad ain't got no job,
An' all my mother does at night
Is lay awake an' sob.
But I should think old Santa'd know
That 'count o' this here war
Us kids that's boosted for him so
Would need him all the more.

He must be rich as rich can be,
For every Christmas day
The papers tells about how he Gives loads o' toys away.
I ain't expectin' him to bring
A very awful lot,
But, gee! I'd like some little thing
To show he ain't forgot!

NO BAN HAS BEEN PLACED ON THANKSGIVING BIRD.

Cattle Plague Precautions Held No Excuse For Raising Prices.

The rise in the price of poultry of all kinds reported in various states cannot, in the opinion of experts in the United States department of agriculture, in any way be attributed to the outbreak of the foot and mouth disease. This disease does not affect poultry, and the federal quarantines of various states, fourteen in all, lay no embargo on shipments of poultry. For instance, Rhode Island can still send out her Thanksgiving turkeys, although no cattle, sheep or swine can leave her territory.

It is true that when a case of foot and mouth disease is found on a farm that farm is absolutely quarantined by the state or local authorities. No produce of any sort can leave it, the owner is not even permitted to drive his horses on the public highway, and in some cases his children are not permitted to go to school.

Since the disease is readily communicated from farm to farm by cats, dogs, poultry and human beings the local authorities exercise their own discretion in the restrictions placed on shipments of produce from the area in the immediate vicinity of the infected farm. These areas are so limited in extent, however, that the amount of poultry that may thus be prevented from reaching the Thanksgiving market is an inappreciable percentage of the total supply.

Poultry from the uninfected areas in the various quarantined states can be moved freely without the least danger of spreading the disease or of injuring the health of the consumer, according to the authorities.

HOSPITAL IN MANSION.

Apartments of Dorchester House Occupied by Wounded Soldiers.

Presided over by Miss Muriel Wilson, society beauty, as nurse in charge, what is probably one of the most luxurious hospitals in the world has just been opened in London.

The new hospital is Dorchester house, in Park lane, the residence of the late Whitelaw Reid when he was United States ambassador to England. All the splendid apartments of the house are now occupied by wounded officers, and the great rooms where once the notables of the world were used to gather when Mr. Reid occupied the mansion are now filled with cots and beds and medicine tables and have become dormitories of a great war hospital.

The mansion is owned by Lieutenant Colonel Sir George Holford. He recently turned it over to the authorities as a hospital for wounded and convalescent officers. Sir Alfred Fripp, surgeon in ordinary to the king, is attending the wounded now there, while Miss Wilson, with a number of young society women as assistants, ministers to the comfort of the men. Eighteen officers are now billeted in bedrooms from which they can look out on Hyde park.

DOVES SPREAD CHOLERA.

"Bird of Peace," Accused by Veterinarian, Will Be Shot by Farmers.

All the time the farmers of Walnut township have been entertaining pigeons, even building houses for them and encouraging them to stay, they have been entertaining so many vipers in their bosoms.

For the dove, emblem of peace and gentleness, is responsible for a loss to the farmers of the vicinity estimated at thousands of dollars, according to Dr. A. B. Niven, veterinarian in charge of the federal hog cholera station at Crawfordsville, Ind.

Under direction of Dr. Niven all farmers in the township will arm themselves with shotguns, determined to exterminate every pigeon found. Niven says they carry the germs of hog cholera from farm to farm.

Baby Poisons Grandmother.

Poisonous tablets, evidently mistaken for candy, caused the deaths of Hazel Roche, three, and her grandmother, Mrs. Edward Miller, sixty-four years old, in their home in Dobsonville, Conn. The little girl found the tablets in a bottle. After swallowing a few she placed a number of them in her grandmother's cup of tea. Mrs. Miller drained the cup before she noticed an unusual taste. Both died before medical aid arrived.

HOW GOOD HOPE LOST SEA FIGHT

Admiralty's Account of Battle With German Squadron.

ATTACK BEGUN BY CRADOCK

Man Who Commanded Glasgow Off Chilean Coast Declares Range Was Too Great For Their Guns—Wounded Monmouth Soon Limped Away. Fire on Ships Lighted Sky.

The English admiralty has issued the report of Captain John Luce of the British light cruiser Glasgow on the battle with the German squadron off the Chilean coast.

The Glasgow, which left Coronel on the morning of the day of the battle, was advised by Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock, commander of the British squadron, that the enemy's ships were to the northward. Toward evening the Glasgow sighted smoke and reported to Rear Admiral Cradock.

The British fleet formed in line ahead, the Good Hope leading, with the Monmouth, Glasgow and Otranto following. The enemy had turned south and were also in single line ahead, the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau leading. Admiral Cradock signaled the Glasgow, "I am going to attack the enemy."

"The enemy was at that time 15,000 yards away," says the report, "and maintaining this range, at the same time 'jamming' the wireless signals. The sun was setting immediately behind the British ships, and while it remained above the horizon the British had the advantage in light, but the range was too great. When the sun had set and the visibility conditions were altered the British ships were silhouetted against the after glow, and the failing light made the enemy difficult to see.

Germans Opened Fire.

"The Germans opened fire at 7 o'clock at 12,000 yards, followed in quick succession by the British. The growing darkness and heavy spray of the head sea made firing difficult, particularly for the main deck guns of the Good Hope and Monmouth.

"The enemy, firing salvos, got the range quickly, and their third salvo caused an outbreak of fire on the forepart of both ships, which were constantly on fire until 7:45 in the evening. At 7:50 an immense explosion occurred on the Good Hope amidships, the flames reaching 200 feet high. Total destruction must have followed.

"It was now quite dark. Both sides continued firing at the flashes of the opposing guns. The Monmouth was badly down by the bow and turned away to get her stern to the sea, signaling the Glasgow to that effect.

Lose Sight of Enemy.

"At 8:30 the Glasgow signaled to the Monmouth, 'The enemy is following us,' but received no reply. Under the rising moon the enemy's ships could be seen approaching, and as the Glasgow could render the Monmouth no assistance she proceeded at full speed to avoid destruction. At 8:50 we lost sight of the enemy. At 9:30 we observed flashes of fire, which were doubtless the final attack on the Monmouth.

"Nothing could have been more admirable than the conduct of the officers and men throughout, although it was most trying to receive a great volume of fire without a chance of adequately returning it. All kept perfectly cool. There was no wild firing, and discipline was the same as at battle practice. When the target ceased to be visible the gun layers spontaneously ceased fire.

"The serious reverse sustained has entirely failed to impair the spirit of the officers and the ship's company, and it is our unanimous wish to meet the enemy again as soon as possible."

DYING GIRL SINGS HYMN.

Youth Who Shot Her Hears Her Song of Death.

The last moments of Jennie E. McLaughlin, a sixteen-year-old girl who was shot by her former sweetheart, furnished one of the most dramatic scenes that the nurses and physicians at a Philadelphia hospital ever witnessed.

A doctor told the patient that she could not live. Her mother, who had been at the bedside almost constantly, since the shooting, began to weep, but the young girl smiled and told her mother not to be unhappy.

"I am going to a better world," she said, smiling, "and I wish you were coming with me. I am not unhappy and I have nothing to tell. The only thing I want to do before I go is to sing my favorite hymn."

She then lay back on her pillow and started to sing "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Doctors, nurses and patients in the ward were silent as the girl sang the first two stanzas. In the middle of the third her voice became weak and then failed her. A few minutes later she was dead.

One of those who heard the death song was James Fraley, the youth who fired the fatal shot and then sent a bullet into his own stomach. He was lying in a critical condition in another ward.

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure, and Eat Less Meat.

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water, and above all take a spoonful of salts to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousand of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray. Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

HOW LONG WILL THE WAR LAST?

Protracted Struggle Predicted by Noted Persons.

MANY EXPRESS OPINIONS.

View of International Banker That Struggle Will Be Over In Six Months Not Shared by Soldiers, Statesmen and Other Bankers Generally—Long War, Says Lord Kitchener.

The question "How long will the war last?" propounded to eminent soldiers, statesmen and bankers in London, Paris, Washington and New York, brought the following replies:

By Lord Kitchener:

"It will be a long war."

By the czar of Russia through the London Daily Telegraph correspondent at Petrograd:

"There can be no peace negotiations before the enemy is completely crushed."

By Lord Northcliffe, publisher of the London Daily Mail and other leading publications:

"Expert opinion considers that the war will be over by next August, but I think it will drag on much longer. Modern warfare is siege warfare. And sieges in trenches apparently last much longer than sieges in fortresses, so that the driving back of the Germans into the trenches they have prepared on their own side of the Rhine must inevitably last an almost indefinite period."

By Lieutenant Colonel Rousset, prominent French military critic:

"It is utterly impossible to predict the limit of the war. Both sides are fighting a battle of trenches similar to that at Sebastopol, which it took two years to capture."

Germany Must Accept Terms.

By T. P. O'Connor, member of parliament and editor:

"My impression is that the war will last a good while yet. The only terms which the allies can accept will be terms which Germany is likely to refuse unless she is thoroughly beaten, and that will take some time."

By Josephus Daniels, secretary of the United States navy:

"I would not dare even to guess at it. No man in this country can know enough about the forces, their position and their capacity in Eur pe to make a prediction."

The consensus of opinion of military men both in the navy and in the army who have made a study of the war is that it will last through next year. Some high authorities among the twenty-five to whom the question was put say that it may go on for two years. One of the highest authorities in the navy department said:

"The answer to the question is made by Great Britain herself, who is calling for another 1,000,000 men for service. That means that Great Britain and the other allies know that if even they push Germany into her own territory Germany will then only have begun the long struggle against those who mean to conquer her. Just now there is scarcely any use to talk about the end of the war, when Germany is fighting beyond her own territories, with a navy yet untouched and a people at home ready to supply the sinews of war."

An international banker in New York said:

"The war will be over within six months."

Long, Bitter Contest.

Frank A. Vanderlip, head of the National City bank of New York, which has just loaned $10,000,000 to France, said:

"The stubborn resistance and the relatively small gains that have been made on either side since the retreat from before Paris indicate a long, hard fought contest. Indeed, it seems to come down to a question of resources in men and supplies."

By E. H. Gary, head of the United States Steel corporation:

"My guess at the beginning of the war was a continuance for eighteen months. I have seen no reason to change my opinion."

By George Sutherland, United States senator from Utah:

"I do not think the war will be ended in less than a year. If the allies succeed in throwing the Germans back within their own borders the Germans will be stronger there than on the offensive."

LASSOS BEAR IN YARD.

Remarkable Exploit of Michigan Citizen Who Rose With the Lark.

Henry Wilson of Iron Mountain, Mich., rising with the lark, was enabled literally to snare a big black bruin in his front yard. Wilson did not expect a bear hunt when he arose and was astounded when he stepped out of his front door to find bruin perched in a tree a few feet away. A menacing growl caused him to beat a retreat for purposes of reflection.

He returned with a noosed clothesline, which he threw at the animal in regular wild west fashion. After several attempts the noose settled over the bear's neck, and it was but a short time before Wilson had the animal neatly trussed up and later presented it to the city for the beginning of a zoo.

LATE XMAS SHOPPERS--NUFF SAID!

Trade In Plainfield and Grow With Us

The growth of a city depends largely on the amount of money spent within its borders. Are YOU buying in Plainfield? Are YOU selecting our own men to do your work instead of outsiders? Are YOU helping Plainfield to grow? Ask yourself this question. Are you?

Plainfield is one of the prettiest cities in New Jersey. She can point with pride to her magnificent High School, excellent graded schools, elegant homes and beautiful streets. What have you done? If you take Plainfield money and spend it in other cities, are you helping Plainfield to grow? Spend your money, home where you and your children are enjoying the splendor of our city. Do YOUR part for a better and bigger Plainfield.

Interesting to Men--But to Women

The question of cultivation of good taste in a home means the purchase of whatever improves the appearance, comfort and welfare of every one connected with it. The woman is the purchasing agent of the American home; keenly interested in high grade merchandise and table goodies; the kind presented by Plainfield merchants, backed by prompt courteous attention, a stock of large variety to select from, and prices that are no higher than the stores of other cities.

Trading in Plainfield is the easiest, safest, and most profitable, and when you purchase an article that is not entirely satisfactory you experience no difficulty in having it exchanged or your money refunded. On the other hand, can an article purchased in stores in these other cities afford you the same protection as our Plainfield merchants? Sometimes an article can be exchanged, but then it is necessary to have it travel 20 or 25 miles back to the store where you purchased it, and the second selection forwarded to you, and if you wern't fortunate enough to make a second selection on the day you did your shopping you are either obliged to make it from a catalog or take another trip yourself to straighten the matter out. Do your shopping in your home town and avoid any unnecessary risks or delays. Help your city to grow.

RAILROAD FARE TO BE REFUNDED

By the Plainfield Merchants to All Out-of-Town Customers in Addition to Special Bargains Galore.

For seven days, commencing Saturday, December 6, and ending Saturday, December 12, the people of this section of New Jersey will be given the greatest opportunity of their lives to lay in a supply of all kinds of seasonable merchandise at prices which cannot be surpassed or even duplicated in any town or city of the country. The occasion is to be known as "Special Bargain Week" or Kist's Big Co-operative Fare-Refunding Sale, and you can rest assured it will prove to be everything the name can possibly imply.

Practically every merchant in the city has made a reduction in prices on his line of goods for this sale, and those in need of anything from a dishpan to a complete outfit for a home, or from a pair of hose to a complete clothing outfit, shoes and all should avail themselves of this opportunity to lay in a supply of merchandise at unprecedented prices.

Not only are the merchants offering bargains in their goods, but in addition to this they will refund the fares to all out of town customers who buy anything to speak of at all. So it can readily be seen that it will be a great opportunity for the people of this section to save money on anything they may need for some time to come.

REASON FOR THE MOVEMENT

Many may wonder why the merchants of Plainfield have united in a movement of this kind, but the reason is simple when explained. The idea was first suggested and, it might be said, promoted by the Daily Press. Each and every merchant was requested to make some special inducements in the way of goods and prices for one week, commencing Saturday, December 5, and ending Saturday, December 12, and at the same time agree to refund the fares of all out-of-town customers on these days. The plan met the approval of practically every leading merchant in Plainfield, and as a result it will mean the biggest trading opportunity ever known in this section of the State.

Come on Saturday, the first day of the sale, and then go back home and tell your friends and neighbors of the many bargains and great advantages offered for trading in Plainfield during Kist's Big Co-operative Fare Refunding Sale.

Now is surely the time to do your trading. Read the announcements and look over the bargains offered by the merchants in this issue of the Daily Press.

CONSUMER'S BIG OPPORTUNITY

As Result of Co-Operative Plan Being Worked Out on a Large Scale by Plainfield Merchants

Sometimes real opportunities come the way of the ultimate consumer, and one of these times for the people of this section will be during Kist's Big Co-operative Fare Refunding Sale, when the merchants of Plainfield will offer special bargains in every line of merchandise.

By the plan as formerly announced in the Daily Press, more than a score of the leading merchants of the city are offering special inducements in the way of goods and prices to the buying public. It has, of course, created more or less competition among the merchants, but this is all the better for those who have to buy, as it will mean genuine bargains in every line of merchandise. Prices in many instances are much lower than have ever been made anywhere on standard brands of staple and seasonable goods.

Besides the special bargains to be offered by the merchants, railroad fares will be refunded to all out-of-town customers during this big Co-operative Sale. Under the plan, shoppers may distribute their patronage among as many stores as they desire, and then coming to the Daily Press office, will be presented with the cash total of their fare from their home to Plainfield and return. The only condition to receiving the return of the railroad fare is that the aggregate purchases reach a certain small total which will of course vary for the various number of miles traveled.

The big sale is an innovation for the City of Plainfield and is being promoted and arranged by the Daily Press in order to advertise Plainfield as the best trading point in this section of the State.

DON'T OVERLOOK A THING

You can get bargains on anything you want in Plainfield during this Big Co-operative Sale.

BE SURE YOU TRADE WITH THE MERCHANTS WHO HAVE AGREED TO REFUND YOUR FARE ACCORDING TO THE ABOVE SCHEDULE

How To Get Your Fare Back

Persons coming to Plainfield from any of the above places to trade during the co-operative sale will get their fares refunded providing their purchases amount to the sums in the schedule.

Refund slips will be furnished all merchants who have agreed to pay their portion of the fares of out-of-town customers during this sale, and in order to have your fare refunded you should obtain one of these slips of the first merchant from whom you make a purchase. The slip will contain a list of all the merchants who are participating in the big sale, with blank space for each to put down the amount of your purchase. This slip is retained by you and afterwards presented at each store at which you buy anything during the day and then before you leave for home the slip is taken the The Daily Press office, where your fare will be refunded in cash, providing your purchases during the day amount to the sum required according to the above schedule.

By this method it will be readily seen that you will not have to buy everything from one store, but on the contrary, you can patronize as many different stores as you like, and if your purchases amount to the required sum your fare will be refunded by presenting the slip at The Daily Press office any time before leaving for home.

Come By Auto, Team or Rail

Fares will be refunded to all persons who come from a distance equal to any of the towns in the above schedule whether by auto, team or rail. This will include farmers as well as persons living in towns. The price of a trolley or auto bus ticket (or railroad where there is no trolley) to and from any of these places will be refunded to all persons, whether farmers or townspeople, who drive to Plainfield during this big sale just as though they came on the trolley, auto bus or railroad. For instance, a person residing in Stirling, or a farmer who lives nearer that place than any other town from which fares are to be refunded, who drives to Plainfield to trade during the sale will get the price of an auto bus ticket, providing his purchases amount to the required sum.

Amounts equivalent to such fares, according to the distance, will also be refunded to all persons coming from or near any of the inland towns above, the same as if located on the lines. Come by team or rail and get your fare back or an amount equal to it. Read the schedules carefully and don't forget to ask the first merchant from whom you make a purchase for a refund slip so you can keep account of your purchases.

WE GIVE SURETY COUPONS

will open on Monday, December 28th, 1914, and will run for fifty weeks.

Members may be enrolled between December 28th, 1914, and January 9th, 1915.

This will be the Christmas Club's fourth year in Plainfield and with each year its popularity increases. Those who have never before been able to save money tell us that the Club has taught them this valuable lesson. "We would not know what to do without it"—is the comment heard on every side. The card system will be used in the new Club, each member receiving a card on which all payments will be punched and a duplicate of which will be retained in this office.

There Will Be Four Classes in the 1915 Club

as follows:

CLASS 5 —Pay 5c the first week, 10c the second, and increase your payment each week by 5c. The last payment in Class 5 will be $2.50 and the amount of the check will be $63.75, with interest at 2%.

CLASS 5-A—Pay $2.50 the first week, $2.45 the second and decrease your payment each succeeding week by 5c. The last payment in Class 5-A will be 5c and the amount of the check will be $63.75, with interest at 2%.

CLASS 100 —Pay $1.00 each week and at the close of the Club receive a check for $50.00 with interest at 2%.

CLASS 500 —Pay $5.00 each week and at the close of the Club receive a check for $250.00, with interest at 2%.

The New Feature of the 1915 Club

Class 100 has so far been the most popular but there has been a demand for a Class calling for larger weekly payments. To meet this demand Class 500 has been introduced. It will be especially appreciated by those who are saving for taxes, mortgage interest, and similar definite objects.

INTEGRITY is to BUSINESS what FIDELITY and HONOR are to SOCIETY.

INTEGRITY is more than honesty.

INTEGRITY includes the performance of those obligations which the laws of the State do not reach or cannot enforce.

INTEGRITY has peculiar reference to uprightness in dealings and the execution of trusts for others.

INTEGRITY in the DRUG BUSINESS means UNIMPAIRMENT, GENUINENESS, PURITY.

INTEGRITY in your DRUGGIST is a virtue to know and rely on.

TWELVE DRUGGISTS of Plainfield have associated themselves for the highest purpose of

--INTEGRITY--

TO GUARD THE PUBLIC AGAINST THE IMPAIRED, THE ILLEGITIMATE AND THE IMPURE AND TO ADVANCE THEIR KNOWLEDGE AND PRACTICE OF THE PROFESSION OF PHARMACY.

FLYER HIT TRUCK KILLING DRIVER

Norton W. Force Lost Life in Accident Near Manville Early This Morning.

AUTO IS DEMOLISHED

Owned by Zeek Baking Company and Was Hit by Lehigh Train Traveling Sixty Miles an Hour—Engaged to Dunellen Girl.

Traveling at a speed said to have been sixty miles an hour, an eastbound Lehigh Valley "special" crashed into a large delivery truck owned by the Zeek Baking Company, of this city, at the Manville crossing at 6 o'clock this morning, reducing the automobile to kindling wood and scrap iron, and instantly killing the driver, Norton Force, of 716 North avenue. The spot where the fatal accident occurred is an unprotected crossing and it is thought that the heavy vehicle, filled with bread and cake, was directly in the center of the tracks when the flyer bore down on it. Parts of the automobile were scattered in all directions and the body of the driver was terribly disfigured.

Force left the Plainfield bakery at 5 o'clock this morning enroute to East Millstone to make deliveries. He reached the Manville crossing about 6 o'clock, a time when the passenger train speeds through the level stretch of track at maximum speed. Although the view on both sides is a clear one the driver evidently neglected to take the usual precautions and probably never saw the oncoming train. At that time in the morning there is no flagman on duty at the crossing and there were no eye-witnesses of the crash.

The Zeek firm makes deliveries at regular intervals to that particular section and on many previous occasions Force had piloted the delivery truck over the same spot. He was thoroughly acquainted with the road and the fact that he had an unobstructed view of the tracks makes the circumstances unexplainable. The train was stopped as soon as the brakes could be applied but when the driver's body was untangled from the twisted mass that had been hurled many feet from the spot where the train and auto met, life was extinct.

The dead man had been in the employ of the local concern for over a year and was twenty-six years of age. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Force, of New Dover, and one brother. He boarded in this city. One particularly sad feature of the fatality comes in the fact that the young man was engaged to be married in the spring to Miss Matilda Block, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis L. Block, of Dunellen.

A cousin of the victim, Frank D. Force, of 619 East sixth street, is also employed as a driver for the Zeek firm. When seen by a Daily Press reporter this morning one of the members of the firm said that he was at a loss to account for the untimely accident and that a thorough investigation would be made into the conditions surrounding it. The body was removed to William Kitchen's undertaking parlors in East Millstone and was viewed by Dr. W. H. Long, of Somerville, the Somerset county coroner, and will be removed to the parents' home in New Dover for burial.

The engineer of the train asserts that the automobile showed no lights and was running thirty miles an hour. He says whistle and bell were sounded for the crossing.

FIND STARVING PIGS IN ABANDONED BARN

Mrs. Van Hoesen Investigating Inhuman Act of Potters' Crossing Man.

Investigation conducted by Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen, special agent for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in this section, has revealed a startling condition existing among a pen of pigs near Potter's Crossing, the neglected pen having been found to be a fit breeding place for the foot and mouth disease among cattle against which there is a country-wide campaign now in progress. In an abandoned barn just over the Middlesex County border line, the S. P. C. A. agent, came across six pigs, one boar, two sows and three little pigs, that had apparently been without food or water for a week or more. Conditions in the barn were such as are detrimental to the health of any animals used for food or breeding purposes and the animals had reached a stage where the skin on the backs and limbs hung loosely over the bones.

Colonel Edwards, of Newark, who is the State agent in this work, was notified by Mrs. Van Hoesen and she was given authority to conduct the investigation. Dr. Howard Winters, a veterinary, accompanied the agent to the scene and temporary provision was made for the "porkers" at the farms of Carman Terry. Starvation had caused the animals to become wild and vicious and the transfer had to be done with great precaution.

Information garnered by Mrs. Van Hoesen points the finger of suspicion for the inhuman act at one "Reilly," a "squatter," who is said to have shipped his belongings to Newark under mysterious circumstances. An effort will be made by the society to establish the identification of the person guilty of the desertion of the pigs and if apprehended he will probably be severely dealt with by the authorities.

Reilly was arested in Newark this noon on a State complaint charging him with cruelty to animals and arraigned before a Newark magistrate. He was adjudged guilty of the allegation and fined $25. Inasmuch as he did not have the wherewithal to pay the fine he was committed to the Essex county penitentiary to serve a jail sentence.

PLANS FOR BIG SUFFRAGE MEETING

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw to Be Heard at High School Monday Night.

"Be sure to hear Dr. Anna Shaw," was the message given yesterday by Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley in her talks with passersby on the streets of Plainfield. Mrs. Greeley was riding in an automobile bedecked with the familiar yellow banner and with all the signs and symbols of the latest suffrage victories. The suffrage map was in evidence, showing a solid west of equal suffrage.

Whenever the automobile paused for a moment, Mrs. Greeley seized the opportunity of telling to passersby in the street about the big meeting to be held Monday night in the Plainfield High School auditorium.

THINKS WAR WILL LAST LIFETIME

Janet Richards Says That She Does Not Believe That She Will Live to See End.

U. S. "SPUNKY NATION"

Sees Danger in Holy War in Case Mohammedans Have General Uprising—Ridicules German Crown Prince's Statement.

Expressing a hope that she would live to see the end of the war in Europe, but being by no means sure that she would, Miss Janet Richards, gave the third of her series of talks on current topics, at Hartridge Auditorium yesterday afternoon. She took a decidedly pessimistic view of the entire situation, and said that in her estimation it was becoming worse each day.

At the outset Miss Richards stated that she would take up the topics as outlined in the local papers on Wednesday night, and made it an occasion for urging her audience to read the local newspapers.

Her first topic was the Mexican situation She said that the changes are coming so rapidly in that country that she would not dwell much on the subject. She told of the array of presidents who have held office recently, and said that there was a new one almost every day, and it was hard to tell which was most deserving of the office. She declared that it was hard for her to understand why we were expressing so much sympathy for the Belgians, and so little for Mexicans, who were en-

FRACTURES THIGH IN FALL FROM POLE

Alfred Jensen is Seriously Injured in Accident at Dunellen.

Alfred Jensen, of 321 East Fifth street, a lineman employed by the New York Telephone Company, fell yesterday from the cross-arms of a telegraph pole standing in front of the residence of G. Elston Lowrie, on North avenue, Runellen, to the hard macadam roadway, fracturing his thigh. Jensen's companions hastened to his assistance and found him unconscious. He was taken into the Lowrie residence and Dr. Pittis, of this city, was immediately summoned. By the time Dr. Pittis had arrived Jensen had regained consciousness and after receiving immediate attention he was taken in an automobile to his home.

It is believed that the accident was caused by Jensen coming in contact with a portion of the electric light wire, the insulation of which had worn off.

ANOTHER $5 FOR THE BELGIAN RELIEF FUND

Another friend sent $5 to the Daily Press office, this morning, to be used for the local Belgian Relief Fund. The contributions which have been procured locally now amount to about $1,600, and the committee, through Miss Hartridge, the treasurer, or through the Daily Press, will be pleased to receive gifts for the cause. The effort to raise $1,000 in contributions of $100 each, each $100 being contingent upon the whole $1,000 being raised, has not changed during the past few days, but $300 having been subscribed. The local committee still hope to get the $1,000, and would be glad to have any person who wishes to contribute to the cause notify the Daily Press.

SUFFRAGE CAKE SALE.

These sales are held every Saturday and afford an excellent opportunity for persons to secure good cakes and pastries of various kinds at reasonable prices.

"THE TELEPHONE WAY."

Owing to the extreme length of the bill at Proctor's theatre due largely to the presentation of "The Resurrection," the special film, entitled "The Telephone Way" will be shown tomorrow and Monday. The "Telephone Way" is a sequel to "The Telephone Girl," which was displayed at Proctor's two weeks ago and which created a great impression.

BICYCLE RIDER IN HEAD-ON COLLISION

Colored Youth Hit by Automobile Owned by the City Street Department.

While riding a bicycle on West Front street, near Proctor's Theatre late yesterday afternoon, Courney Smith, a fifteen-year-old colored boy, road headlong into an automobile driven by Herman Kling, an employe of the city street department, by whom the machine is used. The youth appeared to be badly injured and he was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital where it was found that he had sustained an injury to the knee and minor hurts about the face and head. At that institution this morning it was stated that he was resting comfortably and his hurts are not of a serious nature.

In the opinion of those who witnessed the accident the automobile driver was not at fault inasmuch as he was traveling at a slow rate of speed and the boy appeared to run directly into the approaching car. Kling made a report of the affair to the police and was released pending the result of the youth's injuries.

SAURER MOTOR CO. HAS BANNER MONTH

Shipments of Trucks During November Exceeds All Previous Records.

Despite the general dullness that has characterized industrial conditions, recently, it was officially stated yesterday that the month of November was the best the Saurer Motor Truck Company has had since it located in Plainfield. The complete shipment of finished vehicles, most of them being of the five-ton type, was nearly double that of any previous thirty days. At the present time the working force numbers 300, a little below normal, but imperative orders frequently result in night work. While the company has no official knowledge of the fact, the belief exists that many Saurer trucks delivered in New York, are re-consigned to the European warring area for field work.

In the course of an interview, Superintendent Ayer spoke very optimistically of the outlook for 1915. A large number of orders have already been booked and the concern has a new model truck ready for the trade that is expected to lead the market. It is superior in many ways to all competitors in point of efficiency and carrying capacity and durability.

A. H. ALBERT LOSES MANY FINE CHICKENS

The destruction by fire of the chicken-coop on A. H. Albert's place in Fanwood township, this week, has aroused the neighborhood to a considerable extent, especially in view of the recent numerous raids made on chicken-coops in general throughout the township. That the fire was of incendiary origin seems to be the opinion of everyone. Many valuable chickens were destroyed in the fire, while a few escaped.

During the past few weeks many residents in the township have reported the loss of chickens, and despite the vigilance on the part of the people the theft of fowls continues every few nights. Mr. Albert is puzzled over the fire at his home and can hardly believe that there is anyone who has a grudge against him to the extent of trying to destroy his chickens.

CO. K'S PETITION HAS 1,000 NAMES

Freeholders Urged to Provide New Armory for Local Militiamen.

TO SEEK STATE AID

Settlement Made with Officials of Ousted "Small Board"—Sheriff Otto Asks for an Instructor for the County Prisoners.

Elizabeth, Dec. 4—A petition bearing the names of more than 1,000 residents of Plainfield and attesting to the worth of Company K of that city, as a military organization, was received by the Board of Freeholders at its meeting yesterday, urging the Board to take steps to provide a new armory for the company. In addition to this a special committee made a report stating that the present structure was inadequate for drilling purposes, that the lack of a proper building handicapped recruiting and that suitable sites for an armory could be secured at the present time at a lower figure than later. It was further stated in the report that the company stood high in the State militia and would be ready at all times to defend the flag or defend the city on riot duty. It was found, however, the report stated, that the initial step in the matter would have to be taken by the State Military Board.

The citizens' petition was received and referred to the special committee which later reported on the matter as above. The petition urged the Freeholders to bring the matter to a head.

IMPORTANT ARREST STIRS COMMUNITY

Netherwood Residents Rise in Revolt Against Italian Prisoner.

Carman Ritzo, a thirty-year-old Italian, who was arrested in the Netherwood section yesterday afternoon by Sergeant Maurice Higgins, of the local police department, is alleged to have committed offenses of a serious nature in that part of the city. The apprehension of Ritzo culminates a long period of police sleuthing and is considered an unusually important one.

Conditions surrounding the charges are being thoroughly investigated and several prominent citizens will probably combine to press the complaints against the foreigner. He is being held at police headquarters for arraignment tomorrow morning and will be examined again this afternoon.

Ritzo is the Italian who several weeks ago inserted an advertisement in the local papers for a wife, an incident which caused considerable comment at the time. Although the prisoner appeared to be well-balanced mentally when taken into custody it is thought that he may be the victim of spells of insanity which prompt him to commit some of the rash acts charged up to him.

COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS FUNDS GO TO C. A. RICE

Christmas is three weeks from today, and the committee will have to know very soon how much it will have to spend. Do your community giving early.

LOCAL MAN'S CAR HIT AGED WOMAN

Accident Occurred in Roselle Last Night and Victim is in Hospital.

Stepping directly in the path of a Hupmobile touring car owned and driven by Chester L. Harriman, of 409 Arlington avenue, this city, an aged woman, giving her name as Mrs. Catherine Emery, of 250 Third avenue East, was seriously injured last night by being struck by the left fore light and mud-guard of the machine. The accident occurred on Locust street, near Westfield avenue, Roselle.

The driver of the automobile stopped his machine and picking up the victim proceeded at all possible speed to the General Hospital in Elizabeth. At that institution an examination of the woman's hurts revealed a compound fracture of the right leg and her arms was broken in three places. The injuries, together with the shock, may result fatally.

Conditions surrounding the accident exonerate the local man from all blame inasmuch as he was traveling at a speed well within the limit and he was released by the police of Roselle pending the result of the woman's hurts. According to Mr. Harriman, and his statement has been corroborated by the woman from her bed in the hospital, the woman stepped from the sidewalk into the road and had just passed over the crest when the car hit her. The fact that the street is dimly lighted at the point prevented the autoist from seeing her until it was too late.

When the accident occurred the woman was carrying a large bag of potatoes and had it on her shoulder, thus shutting off a view of the oncoming machine. She was hurled some distance and for a time the driver was at a loss to know what the car had hit. After taking her to the hospital Mr. Harriman gave himself up to the police. Mr. Harriman is completely overcome by the occurrence and went to Roselle this morning to ascertain what could be done for the victim who is a woman of limited circumstances with a large family.

RENEW BATTLE ABOUT ALSACE

Greater Struggle Than Ever Before is Reported Underway on French Right.

Lord Kitchener Has Joined King George at Battle Front Along Yser, Where British Offer Stubborn Resistance to Germans.

Bernes, Dec. 4—A serious engagement began yesterday in Alsace. Many signs have pointed recently to a renewal of activity on the part of the French against Altkirch and Mulhausen, which has apparently culminated in a battle now in progress of greater magnitude than any that has yet been fought on the French right.

Paris, Dec. 4—The French war office gave out the following statement at 3 o'clock this afternoon:

"In Belgium there was rather lively intermittent cannonade between the railroad line running from Ypres to Roulers, on the highway from Becelaere to Passchendale, where the infantry of the enemy attempted without success to gain some ground. In Vernelles we continue to organize the positions captured by our troops.

"From the Somme to the Argonne calm has prevailed all along the front.

"In the Argonne region several attacks of the German infantry were repulsed by our troops, notably the attacks against the northwest corner of the forest of La Grurie.

"In Lorraine and in the Vosges there were some artillery engagements. In Alsace there is nothing to report."

The French Parliament has been called to meet in extraordinary session at Paris on December 22.

London, Dec. 4—General Kitchener is today with King George at the battle front along the Yser, where the British are offering stubborn re-

TROUBLESOME GIRL AGAIN IN POLICE CUSTODY HERE

Anna Backer, nineteen years old, who several weeks ago was banished from Plainfield by City Judge W. G. De Meza following her arrest on a disorderly charge, was picked up on West Front street by Patrolman John Henderschott last night. After being brought to police headquarters the girl was lodged in a cell and spent part of the night in weeping and pleading pitiously with Captain Flynn.

An investigation of the environment under which the girl has been living will be made by the police and in the meantime the girl is at liberty on a nominal bail bond. When last arraigned she was turned over to the Union County courts and Judge James J. Connolly suspended sentence on the condition that her father take her to his house in Kennebunkport, Me.

PASSING OF ONE OF THE CITY'S LANDMARKS

The removal of Mrs. John Tier and family from the Tier homestead on Bank place, to Westervelt avenue, December 15, and the removal on January 1 of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Tier, of East Front street, also to Westervelt avenue, will mark the first steps in the plan to make extensive improvements in the property which was recently acquired by Adolph Bohren, of Greenbrook road.

The Tier family has occupied the property on Bank place for nearly a half century, it being considered one of the city's landmarks. It was here that the late John Tier, Sr., first began the manufacture of ice cream and later on and for many years afterward he engaged in the ice business, cutting ice from Tier's Pond, which in the winter time was a popular place for skating and in the summer for boating parties. In recent years little ice has been cut because there has been little water in the pond. Mr. Bohren expects to make extensive improvements in the property.

THAT "SINGULAR BEING."

Edmund Gosse's Pen Portrait of the Poet Swinburne.

In the "Collected Essays of Edward Gosse" is an elaborate pen picture of Swinburne. "Of all the human beings whom I have known," he says, "I think that Algernon Swinburne was the most extraordinary." And here is the characteristic way in which he begins to sketch that "singular being:"

"He was short, with sloping shoulders, from which rose a long and slender neck, surmounted by a very large head. The cranium seemed to be out of all proportion to the rest of the structure. His spine was rigid, and, though he often bowed the heaviness of his head, "lasso papavero collo," he seemed never to bend his back. Except in consequence of a certain physical weakness, which probably may in more philosophical days come to be accounted for and palliated—except when suffering from this external cause, he seemed immune from all the maladies that pursue mankind.

"He did not know fatigue; his agility and brightness were almost mechanical. I never heard him complain of a headache or a toothache. He required very little sleep, and occasionally when I have parted from him in the evening after saying good night he has simply sat back in the deep sofa in his sitting room, his little feet close together, his arms against his side, folded in his frock coat like a grasshopper in its wing covers, and fallen asleep, apparently for the night, before I could blow out the candles and steal forth from the door.

"I am speaking, of course, of early days; it was thus about 1875 that I closely observed him. He was more a hypertrophied intelligence than a man. His vast brain seemed to weigh down and give solidity to a frame otherwise as light as thistledown, a body almost as immaterial as that of a fairy. In the streets he had the movements of a somnambulist, and often I have seen him passing like a ghost across the traffic of Holborn or threading the pressure of carts eastward in Gray's inn road without glancing to the left or the right, like something blown before a wind."

PUZZLES TO THE BLIND.

Lack of "Size Sense" Gives Them Odd Ideas About Animals.

The path of the teacher of the blind is beset with many difficulties, one of the greatest being the task of conveying to their mind some idea of the size, shape and features of birds and animals. In many cases, it is true, models are used, but owing to their small size they are, to say the least, of doubtful advantage.

The ignorance of blind children is great, often grotesque. A teacher of a class may find that a child does not know whether a sheep or a cow is the larger, or he may even find that a hare has wings. However carefully they are told that a small model of a cow is only one-fortieth the size of the real animal, more often than not they are unable to think of the animal as being any larger than the model and will stoop and describe something about the size of a kitten when asked to indicate the size of a cow. This arises from the fact that no standard of size, form and texture—beyond those which they set up through handling—can exist for those who have never had the use of their eyes.

Even those who have had sight are found to lose their standards unless they are renewed from time to time by actual contact. An instance of this was noticed not long ago when a boy of about twelve recovered his sight after an operation and for several days following went about in a state of surprise and fear, for almost everything which he had not been in the habit of touching frequently differed considerably in size from his recollections of seven years before. The size of his parents alarmed him very much, as he imagined they were much smaller.—Strand Magazine.

Montreal Churches.

Montreal is very religious. Men kneel on the steps outside the churches. With two galleries all around, Notre Dame will seat 10,000 people, and at times thousands stand. In the old church of Ronsecours lamps in the form of ships are hung. Some are ancient galleasses, some brigantines, some modern screw steamboats with proper boats hung to their davits.—New York World.

Experience.

"We learn by experience," said the ready made philosopher.

"That's true," remarked Mr. Growcher. "We get a lot of information from experience, but it doesn't seem to help. What's the good of knowing what the weather was day before yesterday?"—Washington Star.

Land Measure.

One acre contains 160 square rods, 4,840 square yards, 43,560 square feet. The side of a square must measure as follows to contain: Ten acres, 660 feet; one acre, 208.71; half acre, 147.58; third acre, 120.50; fourth acre, 104.38; eighth acre, 73.79.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-know authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Adv.

BORO BOARD OF TRADE BANQUET

Large Number of Citizens Enjoy Fourth Annual Spread of Organization.

DUSEL TOASTMASTER

Mayor E. B. Latham, Representatives of New Jersey Central and S. S. Swackhamer Among the Speakers.

An excellent dinner followed with several speeches, combined to make the fourth annual banquet of the Board of Trade, held at Stryker's garage, last night, one of the best in the history of the Board. Covers were laid for 132 guests and the menu was a fine one. The garage was attractively decorated for the affair with American flags, draped in festoons from the ceiling and completely covering the side walls.

Following the banquet the guests listened with interest and appreciation to the speakers who were introduced by Edward J. Dusel, president of the Board of Trade, who was the toastmaster.

The first speaker was Mayor E. B. Latham and he urged business men of the town to take an active part in the Board of Trade and not leave it to the commuting portion of the town's population to take the initiative in all matters for the advancement and growth of the borough. He also spoke briefly of the rapid strides to be made by the borough upon the completion of the sewers.

J. E. Meredith, general superintendent of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, spoke on the subject of "Transportation." He emphasized the importance of the mutuality existing between the railroad and the public and of the need of co-operation. He pointed out how it was to the interest of the railroad to stimulate the growth of the towns along its line in order that the business of the railroad might be stimulated, using this as a basis for an answer to the argument that the railroads do not co-operate with the municipalities.

Marcus A. Boeman, secretary of the New Jersey Chamber of Commerce, spoke on "What a Board of Trade Can Do." Mr. Beeman showed the value of the united effort which was obtained through the formation of such bodies and how much more could be accomplished through this character of organization than through individual effort.

C. H. Stein, division superintendent of the Central Railroad, was the next speaker. "The Railroad" was his subject and he asked for a better feeling on the part of the public towards the railroads and for the repeal of legislation which places great burdens upon common carriers without adding to their efficiency. He dwelt particularly upon the "Full Crew" bill and asked for aid in its repeal.

The last speaker was S. S. Swackhamer, of Plainfield, who stated that the greatest need of this country today in order to insure its further advancement was the possession by the people of clear and keen brains. Mr. Swackhamer decried the widespread of the saloon evil and added that only through its abolishment could this country hope to escape the dreadful penalty paid by Rome for its licenticusness and drunkenness.

The speeches were interspersed with funny stories by Mr. Bibber, of New York, who kept the guests in an uproar of laughter.

Mrs. Lewis Schneider, of Front street, who has been ill for the past two months with rheumatism, is improving steadily.

W. J. Hamilton, of Plainfield, a former resident of this place, was in the borough yesterday, on business connected with the various properties that he owns here.

Lewis D. Walker, Jr., has traded his old Ford touring car for a 1915 model.

Mrs. Edward Kelly, of Raritan, spent yesterday in the borough as the guest of Mrs. George Meyers, of Prospect avenue.

Leslie Latham, of Grove street, was a recent visitor, at Stamford, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. George Vail, of Dunellen avenue, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Vail, of Plainfield, recently.

Smalley Brothers, the North avenue hardware dealers, have traded their old Ford runabout for a 1915 model.

Kenneth Dealaman was a visitor in New York yesterday. He spent the morning in transacting some important business and in the afternoon he went up to Bronx Park and saw the sights there.

Mrs. Robert S. Craig, of Lincoln avenue, will entertain the Farther Lights, a missionary society of young people connected with the First Baptist church of New Market, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Nelson B. Giles, of Whittier avenue, entertained the members of the Friendship Circle yesterday afternoon.

Contractor and Mrs. Edward Daniels have returned from White House, where they spent a few days as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John DuMont.

Samuel B. Merrell, of Front street, is visiting relatives at Newark.

Edward Farrell shopped in New York yesterday.

The meeting of the Borough Council held on Wednesday evening was the last one before January 1. There will be only one new member, that of W. G. Britton, who succeeds Frank G. Urner, as A. I. Nichol will succeed himself. The present committees have finished their work for the year and leave things in excellent condition. The new Council will meet in the Fanwood firehouse at 12 o'clock on New Year's Day to elect officers and appoint committees.

The Borough Council has adopted a set of resolutions to be spread on the minute book and a copy to be sent to Frank G. Urner, the outgoing councilman of this year, extending the sympathies of that body in his recent bereavement.

Mr. and Mrs. James Johnston, of Troy, N. Y., are spending the winter with their daughter, Mrs. Horace Young, of Forest road.

The December meeting of the borough Board of Health, will be held in the Fanwood firehouse on Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

North avenue, between the borough line and the Westfield line, has been macadamized by the township. The improved section includes a low piece of ground through which the road runs and which was scarcely passable in the winter.

Walks have been laid around the borough hall and other repairs made to the building so that it is now in first-class condition.

Thomas Louden, of Martine avenue, is on a business trip to Philadelphia and Pennsylvania.

The members of the Sunday-schools in the local churches are beginning to make preparations for the Christmas exercises. The Episcopal church Sunday-school will give a cantata in the Fanwood firehouse sometime within the next two weeks the exact date to be decided later, while at the other churches the program of recitations, singing, and Santa Claus will be followed out.

Miss Helen Hoar, of Martine avenue, has gone to a New York hospital to have an operation.

The condition of William Wraight, of Woodland avenue, who was taken to Muhlenburg Hospital last week in a serious condition, is reported no better.

South Plainfield.

Last night saw the largest week-night crowd that has yet gathered to hear Evangelist Pugsley. In a sermon on "Sin," he sets forth in a plain manner what sin is and what it leads to. "Sin," said the evangelist, "is a debt, a burden, a thief, a sickness, a leprosy, a plague, a poison, a serpent, a sting; everything a man hates, it is; a load of curses and calamities beneath whose crushing and most intolerable pressure the whole creation groaneth.

"There are three classes of sinners. The ruling class; the business or middle class; the lowest class. These are all represented in the New Testament."

Continuing the evangelist said. "There ore four things sin does. 1. Sin blocks the way. It comes between God and man and chokes up the life. 2. Sin blisters the work. It interferes with others carrying out God's plan. 3. Sin bleeds the worker. It destroys his spirituality. 4. Sin blights the blessing. The blessing may be given but it is not the highest quality of blessing."

The services will be continued this evening at 7:30. Men's meeting in Washington Hall, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock for men only. No boys under 12 will be admitted. Evangelist Pugsley will speak on "Chickens Come Home to Roost."

TAXATION DISCUSSED BY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Tax ratings in Plainfield was the subject for considerable discussion at the monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce held in the Babcock building last night, the matter being inquired into from a number of different points of view. Those present were enthusiastic over the various developments brought out and it is possible that the body will institute a vigorous campaign against high taxation in this city. With a view to making a systematic investigation the following committee was appointed: Paul Burns, Winfield S. Angleman, P. J. McKenna and Newton B. Smalley, the president.

Plans were discussed for the annual meeting of the Chamber of the Chamber to be held the first Thursday in December at which time the yearly election of officers will take place. The matter of selecting a city manager was also discussed but nothing definite arrived at. Reports on the proposed garbage collecting system were made.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

The Parent-Teacher Association will hold a cake and candy sale tomorrow in the Somerset School. It will be held both in the morning and afternoon starting at nine o'clock. The receipts will be used for the benefit of those in the school who are in need of proper care.

The seniors held a class meeting this noon to decide on the arrangements to be made in regard to tickets and other necessities for their Christmas entertainment. Edson Day was appointed property manager, Roscoe Van Camp, stage manager, and Russell Lee, manager of the house.

Why do so many mothers take Wood Brook milk? Perhaps they have noticed the difference in the doctor's bills, if they are wise economists. But a mother's first thought is the children, and it does not take her long to discover that Wood Brook milk is health insurance for the children.

MANY PLANS ADOPTED TO SELL RED CROSS SEALS

"Selling Red Cross Seals is a job that requires all the ingenuity a man can devise," said George M. Holstein, of the local Anti-Tuberculosis League, who has the matter in charge this year. "How many different ways are they sold? Well, I'd have hard work to tell you all of them, but here are a few of the ways:

"Of course, we use the regular over-the-counter method, only we usually substitute at times for the polite clerk the still more courteous and often more enterprising society band, who serve as a volunteer. Scores of them are working in all of our large cities and towns four, five or six hours every day, and I can tell you it's no easy job. Then we use the mails, too, with every new wrinkle and device of the most up-to-date mail order house. In New York State over 7,000,000 seals were sold this way last year. Red Cross Seal tag fairs, parties and entertainments are all popular in different parts of the country.

"In Rochester they got as high as $40 at their auction, and I've heard that the Mayor, or even the Governor of a State, as did Governor Dix, have auctioned off: the first one for $100 or more.

"The boys and girls are our best salesmen. They hurry from door to door or 'hurry up' the passer-by to buy the cheery holiday stickers. In Harrisburg last year the policemen acted as sales and delivery men. Some of the most prominent stage people have helped, such as Melba, Schuman-Heink, Anna Held and scores of others.

"When it comes to publicity, we leave no stone unturned. Besides the newspapers, magazines, billboards and street cars, hundreds of special features are employed. For instance, this year over 6,000 colored lantern slides of the seal are being shown in motion picture houses all over the country, including Proctor's in this city. A special motion picture is also being used as an advertising feature in some places. Clocks, thermometers, ladders and other indicataors that tell how the sale is progressing are used in large cities. In Milwaukee last year a 'crusader,' with a Red Cross shield and banner, paraded the streets for a week before Christmas and attracted much attention. Every year new ideas for advertising are devised.

"The result of all this has been a steady increase in sales until last year we reached a total of nearly 45,000,000 seals in the country and over 50,000 in Plainfield."

COMPLETE PLANS FOR NEW YEAR'S EVE DANCE

The Allied Trades committee at its meeting, last night, completed arrangements for the reception and dance to be given in Sebring's Auditorium, New Year's Eve. There will be an elaborate program, together with dancing, a cabaret, and several New York artists have been engaged to give exhibitions of the latest dances. Halbfoster's orchestra of Elizabeth, will furnish the music.

The proceeds from the affair will go toward a fund to be used to carry out the Labor Day parade next year, the committee planning to make it one of the best ever held in the State.

There will be a rehearsal this afternoon in the High School gymnasium of the "Pied Piper." The children are doing exceptionally well at rehearsals and this pageant which will be presented Saturday, December 12th in the High School Auditorium promises to be a most excellent production. Tickets are on sale at Miller's drug store.

The weekly municipal dance will be held Saturday night at 8:15 in the Washington School.

A DESERVED LECTURE.

Republican State Chairman Newton A. K. Bugbee was given a dinner at Trenton Tuesday night, and he told members of the Legislature who were present some truths which made them writhe in their chairs. He handled the matter of wasteing State funds for unnecessary employees of the House and Senate with the utmost frankness.

He told the Legislators that perhaps it was not "good politics" to say it, but that a great mistake had been made by the Republican majority of the Legislature in preaching economy before election and then loading down the State pay-rolls with an abundance of floorkeepers, pages and other jobholders who will draw some of the sap from the State's financial tree.

"Of course, your worthy toastmaster has introduced me as the guest of honor," said Mr. Bugbee in beginning his remarkable address, "but the truth of the matter is that we had to have an excuse for having you all attend here tonight. They wanted a goat. I'm the goat. But I want to impress upon you that here in New Jersey our main argument has been economy. We went before the people and told them that if they entrusted to us the administration of the State's affairs we would give them an economical administration. I was a little disappointed on this particular score. I think that the members of the majority of the incoming Legislature did not set a very good example in the gospel of economy."

Mr. Bugbee referred to the score or more of useless officials who have been appointed to act as door-keepers, clerks, pages and in other capacities. The incoming legislature is no worse than its predecessors, but the members have lost a splendid opportunity to practice what they preach, by cutting down expenses. Time and time again men have been named because of their political services who have only gone to Trenton occassionally during the Legislative session, and yet have been paid fancy salaries, much larger than they could earn if they undertook any regular employment. It was not so long ago that a boiler-maker from Essex county was made a stenographer for political work done, and received $500 for the job. He hired a youth from a business college to do the work, and paid him $150, pocketing the difference, and rarely ever put in appearance at the capital. It is such things as this that Mr. Bugbee protests against, and in so doing he reflects the sentiment of the majority of the people.

Mayor-elect Leighton Calkins has written the contributed editorial for tomorrow's paper. His subject, that of the Tyler Liquor Zone, is one that commands the earnest attention of every citizen of Plainfield. He explains what the present policy in this city is, and sets at rest some wrong impressions that have been gained about town regarding the pending Graves amendment to the Tyler ordinance.

Last year the Community Christmas, as worked out by the Federation of Mens' Clubs, proved to be a most successful plan. It will be tried again this year, and with Plainfield's well known habit of doing things better each time they are repeated, the idea will undoubtedly be much more successful than the initial experiment.

They are considering the erection of a county tuberculosis hospital in Monmouth county, and as the Long Branch Record says, the arguments on the matter are all on one side—that favoring the project. After the experience in Union county with Bonnie Burn, there is not a resident who would want to see it done away with.

Edmund B. Osborne has written a letter to a number of newspapers recommending compulsory military training in the United States. If a plan could be devised which would not make our nation become a great war machine, such as is the case abroad, it would be an excellent one.

The weather man might put his time to much better advantage than turning out the unseasonable weather which we have had all this week. Where, oh, where, are those "good old fashioned winters?"

Talk may be cheap, as the old saying goes, but Congress evidently felt differently when they added a cent to every telephone message costing more than fifteen cents.

Although the Kaiser is reported to be at the front, it is noticed that he never gets near enough the firing line to be in danger of being shot.

The advertisements in last night's fare-refunding edition of the Press proved that it will pay to trade in Plainfield .

ABRAHAM LINCOLN CHAPTER TO GIVE A BANQUET

Abraham Lincoln Chapter, No. 122, I. C. S. Fraternity, of Plainfield, decided at its meeting, last night, to give a banquet on the evening of Lincoln's Birthday. President A. V. Searing appointed Raymond Aldrich, chairman; Harry W. Swivel, Clarence E. Varian, John R. Barnes and F. Robert Shaw a committee to arrange the details. The executive committee will meet Thursday night, December 10.

George W. Cravens, of Westfield, visited the local chapter, last night, and after making an address was elected an honorary member. It is expected that Supreme Registrar W. S. Gould, of Scranton, will visit the chapter in January.

This year it is proposed to have a "giving Christmas" in the school and it will be assisted largely through the Charity Organization Society in carrying out the plans. The Christian Endeavor Society will observe its twenty-third anniversary on Sabbath morning, December 12, when it will have charge of the church service. The secretary will present a report and Rev. Edgar D. VanHorn, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, New York city, will make an address.

SUCCESSFUL SALE HELD BY LADIES' AID SOCIETY

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Monroe Avenue church held a very successful sale in the church parlors yesterday afternoon and night. The society realized about $80 which will go for the support of that organization. During the evening a talking machine company demonstrated its new diamond point machines and the guests enjoyed a fine program of music. Mrs. Frederic Hubach, president of the society was the chairman in charge and she was ably assisted by several large committees. The chairmenof the committee follow: Mrs. John Praed and Mrs. C. B. Lawson, kitchen, Mrs. W. Hueme, coffee; Mrs. Hofer, ice cream; Mrs. Edward Beekman, candy; domestic table, Mrs. J. B. Erwin; useful articles, Mrs. Elizabeth LaRue; homemade bakery, Mrs. Theodore Van Pelt.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

TWIN BED LAUGHS.

The continued prosperity of "Twin Beds" at the Fulton Theatre, New York, appears to be due largely to the fact that it is one of those plays—rare now-a-days—which people see and enjoy a second and a third time. "You laugh until you think there isn't another laugh in you," said one playgoer the other day. "And then you go again and laugh twice as hard as the first time." No better endorsement of "Twin Beds" could be desired.

Roi Cooper Megrue's "Under Cover" has a record of over six hundred performances by three companies playing in New York, Chicago and Boston.

"THE MIRACLE MAN."

Structurally perfect and acted by an admirable cast who give a flawless visualization of its several characters, "The Miracle Man," at the Astor Theatre, continues to attract large audiences who find in George M. Cohan's dramatization of the Frank L. Packard novel of the same name, a unique theme with a powerful appeal for good. "The Miracle Man" is a rare play and one that will live in the theatre long after contemporary products of the present day are forgotten.

"ON TRIAL."

Splendidly acted and containing a thrilling dramatic plot, "On Trial," at the Candler Theatre, is proving to be the most sensational success of many seasons. A special company organized to present "On Trial" at Geo. M. Cohan's Grand Opera House, in Chicago, is now in rehearsal. The play will be presented there for a run beginning with the New YeYar.

STRAND PICTURES.

The initial screen performances of "The Ghost Breaker," Paul Dickey and Charles W. Goddard's sensational dramatic success will take place tomorrow at the Strand Theatre. H. B. Warner, who enacted the stellar role in the original production last year at the Lyceum Theatre will be seen in the same role in the screen version which was produced by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. Mr. Warner has been given a well balanced cast including Rita Stanwood, Theodore Roberts, Betty Johnson, Jede Mullally, Horace B. Carpenter, Jeanne McPherson, Mabel Van Buren, Billy Elmer, Dick LaStrange, Fred Montague, Lucien Littlefield, J. N. Burton and J. W. Johnson.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

Brim full of humor and visualized by a superlatively fine company of farceurs, "It Pays to Advertise," the farce now at the Geo. M. Cohan theatre, is fulfilling its laughing mission by attracting huge audiences to that playhouse, where it is destined to have a long and prosperous run. Few plays recently seen in New York are contributing to its gaiety with greater certainty than "It Pays to Advertise" with its laughable plot that concerns the son of a wealthy sire who, deciding to enter upon a commercial career, selects the soap industry in which his father is also engaged, and starts in to 'buck the trust." How, assisted by his fiancee and a publicity promoting press agent who believes in the power of suggestion and the psychology of print, he becomes a power in the business world, is all told in three humorous acts filled with hearty laughs.

We have arranged with one of the largest Importers of Oriental Rugs in this country for a "One Day" demonstration and sale of genuine "Royal Bengal Rugs."

The Photograph produced herewith shows how one of the famous Rugs was tested on Fifth Avenue, New York City. More than 200,000 people walked on this Rug in two weeks, yet it shows no sign of wear.

This Rug is now on the sidewalk in front of our store and a man dressed in Oriental costume will keep count of the number of people walking on it.

When you see these Rugs, you will wonder how a rug of such luxurious Oriental beauty in which heavy rugged quality is combined with rich, soft, refined color tones, could be offered at the heretofore unheard-of low price of $69.00. The size is approximately 12x9 feet.

This is an opportunity to secure a most unusual Rug, one that you can feel proud to possess.

"BROWN OF HARVARD" TO BE PRESENTED HERE

A dramatic club was organized last night at the High School auditorium under the supervision of the Public Recreation committee. The club has decided to present "Brown of Harvard," some selections of the cast being made last night. A business meeting was held at which Burnett Doan was elected president, Miss Mildred Brownlee, vice-president, Phillip Schuyler, secretary and treasurer.

A committee was appointed with William Anderson as chairman, Jack Britton and Miss Carolyn Slanson to draw up a constitution and select a name for the club.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF ISAAC T. MOORE HELD

The funeral of Isaac T. Moore, of South Stirling, was held at his late home at 10 o'clock, yesterday morning, and was largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Mr. Bennett, of Basking Ridge, officiated, making the address and offering prayer. There were many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends. The burial was in Evergreen cemetery, Basking Ridge.

Mr. Moore was a contracting mason for many years and was widely known throughout this section. His death followed a long iliness from a complication of diseases.

CHILDREN TO PRESENT "THE PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN"

A great deal of enthusiasm has been aroused among the school children in the coming production of the "Pied Piper of Hamelin." There are to be about one hundred in the cast. Miss Katherine Holt is to portray the part of the "Pied Piper." Miss Dorothy Roberts will be the "Mayor of Hamelin Town." Elsie Zepp, Cornelia Smith, Eva Chamberlain and Jocelyn Nolting are to be Town Councilors. James Brownlee, George Enk, Charles Kampf, Ralph Fitch, Samuel Augenblick, Robert Mundy, Miss Eunice Banks, Aleta McDowell, Ethel Hazell, Laura Taylor, Violet Johnson and Marjorie Grannatt are to be citizens. Dances by the maidens will be given by Dorothy Barwise, Eva Ball, Ruth Buxton, Marjory Dufford, Dorothy Walsh, Myrtle Townley and Grace McDowell.

The children who present a pretty scene on the village green and are later enticed away by the "Pied Piper" will be fourth and seventh grade girls.

BELMONT REPORTS ON WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

New York, Dec. 4.—The convention of the National Civic Federation was opened today at the Hotel Astor, by President Seth Low, who delivered his annual address.

August Belmont, chairman of the workmen's compensation department of the National Civic Federation, in presenting his annual report announced that there are now 24 States having workmen's compensation laws in operation. The latest report upon the operation of the Federal workments compensation law for government employes, which went into effect on May 1908, shows that during the five years in which it has been in operation 14,963 claims were filed and 14,046 allowed, of which 137 were for actual accidents. The total compensation paid for all accidents was $1,800,000 of which more than $732,000 went to the 6,315 employes of the Isthmian Canal Commission.

A BRILLIANT PIANIST.

Arthur B. Hagne, the piano soloist who is to appear at the concert in the Congregational church, tonight, has had an interesting career. He was graduated from the Yale School of Music, Class '13. While there he won a number of musical prizes, was soloist for the Yale orchestra and organist for one of the large churches in New Haven. When elected a member of the Organist's Guild of America, he was the youngest in the organization. He is now taking a post-graduate course at Yale.

MANY LODGERS CARED FOR.

SETTLES FOR ACCIDENT.

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant, this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding it a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the store that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods and you will be building business for yourself.

BY MORRIS MILLER

Now that Packey McFarland is in good standing again in the boxing world, he has announced that he will resume his old vocation. The boxing commission of Wisconsin suspended Packey for a year because of an unsatisfactory bout which he had in Wilwaukee with Jack Britton. The trouble was that a member of the commission did not believe that Packey tried his hardest to knock out Britton. A few days ago the ban was lifted from Packey and he is now free to make matches in any city which permits boxing bouts. In some cities, under the control of boxing commissions, Packey was debarred from boxing because of a reciprocal understanding regarding suspension with the boxing commission of Wisconsin. It is likely that McFarland and Freddy Welsh, the holder of the lightweight title, will meet in a special ten round bout in Madison Square Garden late in February or early in March. The date of the battle will depend largely upon McFarland and he will name it so that he may be able to train hard for the bout. Jimmy Johnston, the matchmaker of the Garden, has made McFarland and Welsh a big offer for a match.

If Arthur Wilson is taken back by the Giants, the joke, in one way, will be on McGraw. According to most critics who have seen all parties concerned in action, Wilson, when given a chance to work regularly, is better than the catchers McGraw preferred to him when John J. had Arthur on the bench. If Wilson becomes the regular Giant catcher, he will have a perfect right to grin every time he dons the mask, and to remark: "Well, John, you couldn't see me when you saw me every day, and you only saw me when you couldn't see me at all."

Manager John J. McGraw of the New York Giants is working on details of a tour of South America, which he intends to take with Charles A. Comiskey of the White Sox after the close of the 1915 baseball season. McGraw's team will be practically the same as his next year's nine.

The fight game is not so flourishing in Pittsburg since the city administration placed a few restrictions on the sport. Promoters claim they are unable to stage any really big shows.

Robert Zuppke, who developed the champion Illinois eleven of the Western conference, never played the gridiron game. The University of Illinois drafted Zuppke from Oak Park. He first attracted attention as a high school football coach at Muskegon and later went to Oak Park, Chicago, where his team proved victorious against many of the best of the "prep" teams of the middle west. Zuppke played basket ball and specialized in open football.

Ray Morgan may find it no easy matter to hold the second base position next season, for Douglas Neff, the former Virginia college player, is to be tried in that position. Neff, who has really never had a chance with the Griffmen because of illness, ought to be in perfect condition next spring to go through a grueling training period. As a college player Neff differed from most of that class because he was a natural hitter. There was not a single year that Neff played with Virginia that he did not lead the team in hitting. Neff is fast and a superb fielder, and he may prove the surprise of the Nationals' training camp next year.

With the twenty-round bouts permitted, and with a prospect of winter racing renewed, the sporting pendulum swings back to New Orleans. Boxing has been permitted in the Crescent City for some time, but only in limited bouts, while now the long route, over which championships are generally settled, will be allowed.

With San Francisco closed to the fighters, the southern city will be about the only place of importance where long fights can be held, and naturally it will draw all the great title events.

No mixed battling will be allowed. That is, white boxers will not be permitted to meet colored men. One of the things that closed the town to fighters in the old days was the Dixon-Skelly meeting, when the little black boy beat the white youngster.

HOPE CHAPEL BASKETEERS TO PLAY ELIZABETH HOPES

The Hope Chapel basketball team will meet the Hope team of Elizabeth, on the local court tomorrow night and a good game is expected as both teams are playing mid-season ball. The Elizabeth five has played more games so far than the local aggregation but Captain Heron will have his best team working.

To date the Fourth street team has won two and lost two, all games being played on their home court.

Y. M. C. A. VS. SUMMIT NEXT BATTLE ON BILL

Another good attraction is on the card for the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow night when the Summit Y. M. C. five will meet the association quintet. This will be the sixth game of the season for the local aggregation while the Summitites have played a few more and are in fine condition.

This is an annual contest between these two teams, the Summit club coming to this city every year for the past three. Last season the locals got away with the verdict and the visitors will be looking for revenge. The game will start promptly at 8.15 o'clock and there will be a preliminary.

The Plainfield Eagles' bowling team lost its third straight match in the F. O. E. Bowling League, last night, to the Newark leaders. The locals could not get their stride on the strange alleys and, although they only lost the initial roll by 19 points, they lost by big margins in the last two. The locals have now lost nine games in succession, two matches to Somerville and the one last night to Newark. Previous to the last match Plainfield was in a triple tie for third place, but now that tie is a wreck and the Queen City pinners enjoy an undisputed hold on last place with six games won and nine lost.

Two new men played for Plainfield and they were Luthman and Radin, the later getting high score of the night, which was 202. Luthman led off for the locals with a 148, but Reilly of the home team chalked up a 159. The game tonight between the P. H. S. Alumni and the North Plainfield High School girls, which is to be played on the Saengerbund Hall court, will be preceded by a preliminary game between the Somerset Field Club and Hope Chapel Boys Club. Dancing will follow the games.

N. P. H. S. FIVE OPENS HOME SEASON TOMORROW

The North Plainfield High School basketball team will play its first regular game on the home court, Saengerbund Hall, tomorrow afternoon, when the Bernardsville High School five will appear here.

Last year the borough team defeated the Bernardsville aggregation, and if they play as good a game tomorrow as they did against Kearney, Wednesday, it certainly looks as if they will repeat.

LOCAL ELKS TAKE THE ODD GAME

Defeat Hoboken Two Out of Three in League Tourney Contest.

Plainfield Senior Elk bowlers took the odd game from Hoboken on the local alleys last night. The match was well contested and interesting throughout, the local "Bills" taking the last two after dropping the initial roll. Captain Nash had his regular men in action, but shifted the positions. Nash went up to the lead-off position from fourth place and Blatz took his place, Campbell remaining at anchor.

The local pinners started poorly. Nash leading off with a 170 and Kiely following with 164. Hampdin and Miller, of the visitors, practically cinched the game with 212 and 201 scores respectively. Campbell, rolling last for Plainfield, scored the highest for his team, getting a 199, but the visitors finished over fifty points ahead of their opponents. Vail, Blatz and Campbell won the second game with scores of 202, 193 and 205, while the Hoboken high score was 181. The second game tied up the match with one game for each team, the scores of the roll being 895 to 847.

Captain Nash started his team on to victory in the third and deciding game with a 234, which was high score of the night, and the visitors could not overcome this big lead. The first pinner's score of the Hoboken team was 180.

sistance to the terrific German attacks commanded by the crown prince. King Albert is also with the Belgian force which is operating with the British between Arras and the sea coast.

The ferocity of the fighting along this section of the battle line is believed to be a last desperate effort by the Germans to cross the Yser before going into winter quarters.

The result of this battle is of great importance to both allies and Germans, and both sides have been bringing up reinforcements during the past few days. Lord Kitchener is assisting Field Marshal Sir John French, as the brunt of the battle is being borne by the British.

It is reported that a considerable portion of Lord Kitchener's army of 1,250,000 has reached the firing line, bringing the total allied force between Ypres and Ostend to 700,000. The Germans are said to have more than 600,000 Germans along the same line.

The main point of the latest attack was north of Ypres and toward Dixmude, where the Germans, under cover of darkness and in the early morning hours, twice crossed the flooded sections of the Yser on broad rafts. The desperate efforts failed when the allies discovered the move just before daylight, and concentrated their artillery fire on the hundreds of rafts with terrible effect.

The Germans persisted in their attack until noon, at which time they had suffered great losses of men and machine guns. Each raft held about sixty men and one or two machine guns. The report states that almost as many Germans were drowned as were killed and wounded.

The French have captured Burnhaupt, Alsace, which is eleven miles from Muelhausen.

A Morning Post Petrograd despatch says: 'The news that the Russian troops have taken Wielozka, which is only three miles from the outer fortifications of Gracow, seems to indicate that there is something wrong with the defenses of the fortress, as Wielozka should be well within the range of the minor armaments of a first-class fort.

"Forty prisoners, among others taken by Cossacks at Czenstochowa, were found to be women in soldier's uniform."

Berlin, Dec. 4 (wireless)—According to news given out by the press bureau the Germans have taken measures to prevent famine among the inhabitants of the parts of Russian Poland occupied by the German forces.

A Russian military newspaper states that the Russian officers killed, wounded or made prisoners now totals 33,000.

London, Dec. 4 (Central News Cable)—The Australian and New Zealand contingents have disembarked in Egypt to assist in the defense of that country, says an official statement given out by the news bureau. The territorial contingents will complete their training in Egypt and when that is completed will continue on their way to the front on the continent to join the other British troops

A despatch from Cairo says tha reconnaissances have failed to discover any hostile bodies in the vicinity of the Suez Canal. The Arab force previously reported near Katies evidently has retired, the message says.

A news agency despatch from Rome states that at the opening of the Italian Parliament, Premier Salandra stated that there was no new factor in the situation in the course of development at present which would prompt Italy to alter her policy of neutrality.

NEW PASTOR WILL PREACH IN ALL SOULS' CHURCH

Rev. John Baltzly, the new pastor who has been called by the congregation of the all Souls' Unitarian church, will occupy the pulpit of that church at the services next Sunday. He will only be here for this week but will take up his new position about the first of January.

Rev. Blatzly is at present connected with a church in Hudson, Mass., but has accepted the call of the local people. The Unitarian church has been without a pastor since last February.

BRYAN MUM ON THE SUBMARINE QUESTION

Washington, Dec. 4—Secretary Bryan today firmly and finally refused to make any statement or comment on the inquiries being made by the Government into the contracts alleged to have been taken by a large steel corporation for the construction of parts of submarine for Great Britain. The silence, it was said, would be maintained until the inquiry is completed.

Charles M. Schwab, president of the company, who was interrogated by Mr. Bryan, yesterday, is still in the city. He may see the Secretary of State again tomorrow.

WILSON TO PRESS SHIP PURCHASE BILL PASSAGE

Washington, Dec. 4—Fearing that the coming short session of Congress might be prolonged through the introduction of measures calculated to bring on lengthy debate, Chairman Fitzgerald and Representatives Shirley, of Kentucky, and Johnson, of South Carolina, members of the House appropriations committee, appealed to President Wilson today to keep off the Congressional program everything that possibly could be avoided in the way of legislation. The President told his callers that he did not contemplate the introduction of any new legislation that would cause Congress embarrassment. It is known, however, that the White House is preparing to press consideration of the Ship Purchase Bill.

BOARD REFUSES BIG REDUCTION IN TAXES

William Palmer Smith's Appeal Rejected After Much Consideration.

DR. J. H. WOODWARD READS INTERESTING PAPER

"Conditions in which general physicians and surgeons and ophthalmologists should co-operate," was the subject of an interesting paper presented by Dr. J. H. Woodward, of New York, at the bi-monthly meeting of the Plainfield Medical Association held at the "Homestead," on Washington avenue, last night. The paper which was full of suggestions was followed by an informal discussion.

Preceding the paper, the physicians enjoyed an excellent dinner served by Mrs. Henry Johnson. Dr. Edward Krans, president of the association, presided at the meeting. There were about a dozen physicians present.

TOWNSEND RUSHMORE IS NAMED AS A RECEIVER

New York, Dec. 4—Judge Hough, in the United States District Court, today, adjudicated the Hartley Silk Manufacturing Company, of 377 Fourth avenue, a bankrupt on the petition of Brown Brothers & Company, and Kidder, Peabody & Company, both creditors for over $40,000, and Elver Godone and Charles DeBost, representing various smaller creditors. Whitridge, Butler and Rice appeared for the petitioners, and William A. Gennert for the Hartley Company did not oppose the petition. Judge Hough appointed Townsend Rushmore, Benjamin Dobson and Samuel Simpson receivers.

ENTERTAINED READERS.

DEAN MATHEWS VISITING DIOCESE

Bishop-elect Comes East to Arrange for Official Residence.

Trenton, Dec. 3.—Dean Paul Matthews, bishop-elect of this Protestant Episcopal diocese, has arrived in Trenton from his home in Faribault, Minn., to make arrangements for taking up his residence here following his consecration as bishop.

During his stay, he will visit Princeton and Burlington and likely other cities in the diocese.

Dean Matthews is accompanied by Mrs. Matthews, and Tuesday he met the clergymen of this city and their wives at the home of Ven R. Bowden Shepherd, archdeacon of the diocese.

Dean Matthews says that his present plans are to take up his residence here the latter part of January. He will make his home in the Episcopal residence on Greenwood avenue.

Before he is consecrated the Bishops and the standing committees of the different dioceses must give their sufficient assent, but this is usually a mere formality and there is little doubt Dean Matthews will be named. The consecration will probably occur the latter part of January.

Upon leaving here Dean Matthews will return to Faribault, where he is dean of the Cathedral of Our Merciful Saviour.

Dr. Eugene Carpenter, of Oneida N. Y., returned home today after a visit with Dr. and Mrs. M. L. Clawson, of Park avenue.

COMPANY K'S PETITION

W. R. Codington, the Board voted unanimously to pay Abe J. David, John P. Owens, Henry Kreh, Jr., estate of LeRoy D. Gibby and James McNamara, for services rendered as officials of the ousted Small Board of Freeholders. David and Kreh will get $225 each; the Gibby estate $100; Owens $75, and McNamara $25. Several other officials were denied pay because it was claimed they performed no service. Freeholder Hennesy took exception to this stand and a motion which he introduced later, providing for another hearing for them, was carried unanimously.

Sheriff Otto told the Board he would like a small appropriation to engage an instructor for the county jail prisoners. He added that instruction for them would be a benefit to the moral, physical and mental condition of the jail inmates, while the cost would be small. He praised the conduct of the jail. Several Freeholders spoke in favor of his plan and a committee was appointed to look into the matter.

William F. Marsh, who was elected Freeholder from Elizabeth, on the Republican ticket, qualified and took his seat yesterday, under advice of County Attorney Codington. Robert L. Rogers, of Scotch Plains, said he had not received his bounty for killing a gray fox and will be paid. A special committee was appointed to confer with a similar committee from the Somerset County Board on the bridge over Green brook, Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holtman, of West Third street, are entertaining the latter's parents from Greenway, N. Y.

Mrs. H. C. Martin, of Buffalo, N. Y., is spending two weeks at the home of her sister, Mrs. Edmund Waldorf, of Crescent avenue.

WOMAN IN INDUSTRY.

Here are some words of Justice Brewer in the now well-known case of Muller vs. Oregon, in which the Oregon eight-hour law was sustained, that should be constantly kept in mind by diocesan commissions as justification, if further justification were needed, of active work in behalf of legislation to protect women from the ravages of modern industry:

"That woman's physical structure and the performance of maternal functions place her at a disadvantage in the struggle for subsistence is obvious . . . As minors, though not to the same extent, she has been looked upon in the courts as needing especial care that her rights be preserved.

"Though limitations upon personal and contractural rights may be removed by legislation, there is that in her disposition and habits of life which will operate against a full assertion of those rights. She will still be where some legislation to protect her seems necessary to secure a real equality of right.

"Differentiated by these matters from the other sex, she is properly placed in a class by herself, and legislation designed for her protection may be sustained even when like legislation is not necessary for men and could not be sustained. . . . This difference justifies a difference in legislation and upholds that which is designed to compensate for some of the burdens which rest upon her."—The Living Church.

Andrew Morris, of West Sixth street, left yesterday for Elyria, O., where he has secured an excellent position with a large manufacturing firm.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Those who enjoy some good old-fashioned blackface comedy with its accompanying laughs got their fill of this amusement at Proctor's theatre yesterday afternoon and evening when Ben Avery, the original "Rastus" made his first appearance on the week-end vaudeville bill. Avery appears in a skit entitled "Making the Movies" with four assistants and his troupe of laugh provokers kept the audiences in continuous rounds of applause from curtain to curtain.

"Hunting in the Wilds of Africa with Teddy Roosevelt," is the title of a playlet produced by Arthur Husin and Company and this also savors of wit and originality. Gail Stewart renders several pleasing vocal selections. Some catchy songs and piano selections are produced by Skedden and Pike and the Markee Brothers have an act where instrumental music is a pleasing feature.

The great plot drama 'The Resurrection," with Blanche Walsh playing in the leading role was shown for the first time yesterday and made a big hit. It will be repeated again this afternoon and tonight. The final episode in "The Perils of Pauline" is scheduled for next Wednesday when Miss Pearl White, Pathe's feature star, will visit the theatre in person and give a short monologue telling of her hair-breadth adventures while posing for the "Pauline" pictures.

ALL WOMEN'S PARTS TAKEN BY MEN

"Leading Ladies" in Yale Association Plays Have Set a High Standard.

One of the most interesting aspects of the work done by the Yale Dramatic Association, which comes to the Plainfield theatre Thursday night, December 31, in a repertoire of three one act plays, is its tradition that all women's parts must be taken by men. This rule has never been broken even in the most elaborate and serious plays, and the result has been interesting.

Instead of making the heroines of their plays awkward and ridiculous, the Yale "leading ladies" have uniformly succeeded in making audiences forget the discrepancy between feminine appearance and bass voices, and have set a high standard of feminine interpretation. Yale actresses have taken with success such difficult roles as Maid Marian in "Robin Hood" and Judith Anderson in "The Devil's Disciple."

There will be many opportunities for effective work of this kind in the bill now being rehearsed by the Yale players for their holiday tour. The plays to be given are: "St. Bartholomew's Eve," a one-act romance; "Behind the Beyond," a dramatic adaption from Stephen Leacock; and a one-act tragedy which has not yet been selected.

She had cleared out her little sleeping room as she had cleared the lower floor. The chamber, with its white plastered walls and boards nearly bare and narrow white bed, had the look of a cell in the first light struggling through the single snow framed window. Here since her childhood she had lain nightly; here she had brought her thought of Adam Blood and had seen the thought die and had watched with it; here she had lain on the nights after her parents had died; here she had rested, body sick with fatigue, in the years that she had toiled to keep her home. In all that time there had gone on within her many kinds of death. She had arrived somehow at a dumb feeling that these dyings were gradually uncovering herself from somewhere within; rather uncovering some self whose existence she only dimly guessed. "They's two of me," she had thought more often of late, "and we don't meet—we don't mept." She lived among her neighbors without hate, without malice; for years she had "meant nothing but love," and this not negatively. The rebellion against Christmas was against only the falsity of its meaningless observance. The rebellion against taking the child, though somewhat grounded in her distrust of her own fitness, was really the last vestige of a self that had clung to her in bitterness not toward Adam, but toward Lily. Ever since she had known that the child was coming she had felt a kind of spiritual exhaustion, sharpened by the strange sense of oppression that hung upon her like an illness.

"I feel as if something was going to happen," she kept saying.

In a little while she leaned toward the window at her bed's head and looked down the hill toward Jenny's. Her heart throbbed when she saw a light there. Of late when she had waked in the night she had always looked, but always until now the little house had been wrapped in the darkness. Because of that light she could not sleep again, and so presently she rose and in the sharp chill of the room bathed and dressed, though what had once been her savage satisfaction in braving the cold had long since become mere undramatic ability to endure it without thinking. With Mary life and all its constructive rites had won what the sacrificial has never been able to achieve—the soul of the casual of, so to say, second nature, which is last nature and nature triumphant.

Her Heart Throbbed When She Saw a Light There.

While she was at breakfast Mis' Abby Winslow came in.

"Mercy!" Mis' Winslow said. "Is it breakfast early? I've been up hours, frosting the cakes."

"What cakes?" Mary asked idly.

Mis' Winslow flushed duily. "I ain't baked anything much in weeks before," she answered ambiguously and hurried from the subject.

"The little fellow's coming in on the local, is he?" she said. "You ain't heard anything different?"

"Nothing different," Mary replied. "Yes, of course he's coming. They left there Saturday or I'd have heard. The man he's with is going to get home tonight for Christmas with his folks in the city."

"Going down to meet him, of course, ain't you?" Mis' Winslow pursued easily.

"Why, yes," said Mary.

"Well," Mis' Winslow mounted her preparation, "I was thinking it would be kind of dark for you to bring him in here all alone. Don't you want I should come over and keep up the lights and be here when you get here?"

She watched Mary in open anxiety. If she were to refuse it would go rather awkwardly. To her delight Mary welcomed with real relief the suggestion.

"I'd be ever so much obliged," she said. "I thought of asking somebody. I'll have a little supper set out for him before I leave."

"Yes, of course," Mis' Winslow said, eyes down. "I'll be over about 7," she added. "If the train's on time you will be back here around half past. The children want to go down with you. They can be at Mis' Moran's when you go by. You'll walk up from the depot, won't you? You do," she said persuasively. "The little fellow'll be glad to stretch his legs, and it'll give the children a chance to get acquainted."

"I might as well," Mary assented listlessly. "There's no need to hurry home as I know of except keeping you waiting."

"Oh, I don't mind!" Mis' Winslow told her. "Better come around through town too. It's some farther, but he'll like the lights. What's the little chap's name?" she asked. "I dunno's I've heard you say."

Mary flushed faintly. "Do you know," she said, "I don't know his name. I can't remember that Lily ever told me. They always called him just Yes, because he learned to say that first."

"'Yes!'" repeated Mis' Winslow blankly. "Why, it don't sound to me real human."

CHAPTER XII.

Arrival.

LATER in the day Mis' Mortimer Bates and Mis' Moran came in to see Mary. Both were hurried and tired, and occasionally one of them lapsed into some mental calculation. "We must remember something for the middle of the table," Mis' Bates observed to Mis' Moran under cover of Mary's putting wood in the stove. And when Mary related the breaking of the bracket lamp the two other women telegraphed to each other a glance of memorandum.

"Don't it seem funny to you to have Christmas coming on tomorrow and no flurry about it?" Mary asked.

"No flurry!" Mis' Bates burst out. "Oh, well," she amended, "of course this Christmas does feel a little funny to all of us! Don't you think so, Mis' Moran?"

"I donno," said Mary thoughtfully, "but what, when folks stop chasing after Christmas and driving it before them, Christmas may turn around and come to find them."

"Mebbe so," Mis' Moran said, with bright eyes; "mebbe so. Oh, Mary," she added, "ain't it nice he's coming?"

Mary looked at them, frowning a little. "It seemed like the thing had to happen," she said. "It'll fit itself in."

Before dark she took a last look about the child's room. The owl paper, the puppy wash basin, the huge calendar with its picture of a stag, the shelves for whatever things of his own he had, all pleased her anew. She had laid on his table her grandfather's Bible with pictures of Asiatic places. Below his mirror hung his father's photograph, that young face, with the unspeakable wistfulness of youth, looking somewhere outside the picture. It made her think of the passionate expectation in the face of the picture that Jenny had brought.

"Young folks in pictures always look like they was setting store by something that ain't true yet," Mary thought. "It makes you kind of feel you have to pitch in and make whatever it is come true a little."

It was when Mis' Winslow came back toward 7 o'clock that there was news of Jenny. Mary had been twice to her door in the course of the day and had come away feeling in her inquiry strangely outside the moment and alien to its incidence, as if she were somehow less alive than those in Jenny's house.

"Jenny's got a little girl," Mis' Winslow said.

Mary stood staring at her. It seemed impossible. It was like seeing the hands of time move, like becoming momentarily conscious of the swing and rush of the earth, like perceiving the sweep of the stream of stars in which our system moves. She was startled and abashed that the news so seized upon her. Little that had ever happened to herself seemed so poignant, so warmed its place in sensation. While Mis' Winslow's mind marked time on details of time and pounds, as is the way with us immortals when another joins our ranks, Mary was receiving more consciousness. There are times when this gift is laid on swiftly, as with hands, instead of coming when none knows. Rather than with the child whom she was to meet, her thought was with Jenny as she left Mis' Winslow in the doorway and went down the street.

"Expect you back in about half an hour if the train's on time," Mis' Winslow called.

Mary nodded and turned into the great cathedral aisle that was Old Trail street, now arched and whitened, spectral in the dark, silver with starlight.

The night before Christmas! And in not one home was there any preparation for tomorrow, Mary thought, unless one or two lawless ones had broken bounds and contrived something from a little remembrance for somebody to a suet pudding. It was strange, she owned. No trees being trimmed, no churches lighted for practice and the shops closed as on any other night. Only the postoffice had light—she went in to look in her box. Affer was there at the telegraph window, and he accosted her.

"Little boy's comin' tonight, is he?" he said, as one of the sponsors for that arrival.

"I'm on my way to the train now," Mary answered, and noted the Christmas notice with its soiled and dog eared list still hanging on the wall. "It was a good move," she insisted to herself as she went out into the empty street again.

"You got a merry Christmas without no odds of the paper or me either," Affer called after her, but she did not answer save with her "Thank you, Mr. Affer."

"Why do they all pretend to think it's so fine for me?" she wondered. "To cheer me up, I guess," she thought grimly.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — The Big Picture Talks to the Little Picture.

He Was Hanging Upon That Grayish Olive Green Wall.

"'I AM getting all the attention at this exhibition,' proudly spoke up Mr. Big Picture at the Museum of Fine Arts.

"'Oh, well,' said timid Miss Little Picture. 'I may not attract quite so much attention, but I would be a much nicer ornament.'

"'Why, some one will buy me long, long before any one knows of your existence,' boasted Mr. Big Picture. 'Look at my coloring; look at my action. Why, where you only whisper to be noticed I shout, and, I tell you, shouting is what gets you ahead in the world.'

"'Really?' questioned Miss Little Picture. 'Then I am sure I shall never get very far, because, you see, I am not one of the shouting sort.'

"And Miss Little Picture spoke truly, kiddies, because she was small compared with the big smashing canvas beside which she had been hung in the museum and very delicate and quiet and dainty in her coloring, and her tones, as Mr. Big Picture said, were only whispers.

"While they were talking some visitors entered the gallery, and, as usual, they paused before Mr. Big Picture.

"'Oh, what a wonderful picture!' cried one of the ladies.

"'Yes, indeed!' said a gentleman. 'I'd like to own that picture. Let's go and see the artist about it.'

"So they went away. 'There, what did I tell you' said Mr. Big Picture. 'When they came past I shouted my very loudest, and now, you see, I may get myself sold.'

"And, sure enough, when the art exhibition was over Mr. Big Picture was carried away in a big limousine.

"Then he was taken into a beautiful room with a background of neutral grays and olive greens and with lovely oriental rugs on the floor.

"The wrappings were removed from Mr. Big Picture, a stepladder was brought, and he was hung up on that grayish olive green wall.

"'Oh, my; oh, my; oh, my,' cried the lady who had so admired Mr. Big Picture in the art museum; 'that picture fairly yells at you! Why, I couldn't live in the same room with it. I'd go wild. Take it down; take it away.'

"So they took Mr. Big Picture down and went back to the museum and brought Miss Little Picture and hung her against the walls of that gray and olive green papered room.

"'Oh' cried the lady, 'how beautiful! Why, that picture just whispers, and that moonrise against that wonderful rosy afterglow will be so restful to live with.'"

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Come in, Mrs. Wiegand. It has been a long time since I saw you. Aren't you cold? Sit here by the grate," and Mrs. Perley conducted her visitor to a comfortable chair.

"Now tell me all about yourself," she said as they sat down.

A faded, gray haired woman was Mrs. Wiegand. Though she showed signs of poverty, it was the cheerful, self-respecting poverty of a strong soul buffeting against adversity.

"Where are you living now?" Mrs. Perley asked as her visitor drew off her woolen gloves to warm her hands by the cheerful blaze.

"I'm at the same place. I have had that room in the lodging house for over a year. Two different women have run it in that time. Just now I am in the house alone, and have been for five weeks, so I have no rent to pay. The owner is glad to have it occupied on account of the insurance. The colored cook at the Jasper house next door gave me a box of candle ends, yellow and white, and I light as many as a dozen and place them all around the room. It is so pleasant. I call it 'The House of a Thousand Candles,'" and she laughed cheerily.

"Who attends to the furnace?" asked Mrs. Perley.

"Oh, the house is not heated since the last landlady moved. She gave me the furniture in my room, so that is mine and I am very comfortable," and she glowed with pride.

"But it is cold weather," objected Mrs. Perley. "You will take cold."

"No, I won't take cold; I am used to many things. Last winter I tramped through snow two feet deep in North Dakota when the thermometer was 30 degrees below zero. One can get used to anything. See my new coat? My nephew in California sent me $10 for a Thanksgiving present," and she stood up, the better to display her treasure.

"Lay it off or you will feel the cold more when you go out," and Mrs. Perley took the coat and hung it on the rack.

"Have you sold many books?" she asked as she returned.

"Well, not so many, but I keep going. Last Saturday I had only five cents, and although my check from the company comes every week I was afraid it might fail and leave me without money over Sunday, so I concluded to go without coffee for breakfast. I had some crackers in my room. I did not take a street car, either, but walked to the district I was canvassing.

"The first house I went to such a dear woman came to the door. She invited me in and showed me her baby. Such a dear baby! Mine died twenty-eight years ago. Oh! if he had lived I would not be tramping around this way," and she furtively wiped a tear. "Do you know," she continued, brightening, "that dear woman bought a book and paid for it in advance. It wasn't alone the money, though I needed that, but her kindness was like warm sunshine. It's wonderful how I'm provided for," and she leaned back restfully in her chair.

"I hope you went and got a good, hot meal," said Mrs. Perley, a lump rising in her throat.

"Of course I did, and Monday the check came from the company. Well, I must be going along. I was passing and thought I would come in and rest a bit. It always cheers me up to talk with friends," and she began drawing on her gloves.

"It is nearly noon, and you must stay and have luncheon with me," said Mrs. Perley, going over to her and taking her hat and gloves.

"Oh, thank you! What a treat that will be," and she beamed into her friend's face.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

To prevent pie crusts from being wet and soggy, bake in pan with sieve bottom. This will also prevent air from getting under bottom, raising up center and dropping down around edge, the shells which are used for filled pies.

A leaky bucket or lantern may be mended with paint and cloth. Apply a coat of paint to a small spot on outside of bucket, covering the surface for an inch or more around the hole; put a piece o strong muslin over the hole, press cloth firmly into the coat of fresh paint, apply a second coat of paint to cover the cloth, let paint dry thoroughly and the bucket will not leak again in that spot.

New Use for Old Chenille Curtains—Ravel, cutting the warp each inch or two; wind four strands on a ball, so, when weaving, the four strands will be used as one of rags, using fine dark-colored warp. With a little skill in arranging colors, a fine Smyrna rug can be made.

To Clean White Fur—Buy ten cents' worth of plaster of paris and sprinkle the article to be cleaned lightly with it, rubbing with a soft brush. Repeat if necessary. This will clean much better than cornmeal and can be done in a few minutes. It will also clean white plush or beaver hats.

THE TABLE.

Lemon Sirup—Required: Three lemons, two pounds white sugar, two ounces citric acid. Mix two pounds white sugar, two ounces citric acid, add strained juice of three lemons, and one and one-half pints boiling water. Stir till sugar and acid are thoroughly dissolved; bottle and cork tightly. One tablespoonful to a glass of water or soda water.

Bread Dumplings—One cup grated bread, one cup chopped suet, half teaspoon baking powder, two-thirds cup sugar, two eggs, one cup milk and even teaspoon salt. Sift baking powder and flour together, add beaten eggs, bread crumbs, and sugar, suet and milk; form into smooth batter. Drop this by spoonfuls into boiling milk (about a pint) and when cooled pour over them the remaining milk.

Cherry Dumplings—One cup sweet milk, two teaspoons baking powder, pinch of salt, flour enough to make a very stiff batter. Have one quart canned cherries boiling, drop into boiling fruit the batter, one spoonful at a time; cover and boil ten minutes or till done. Any tart fruit can be used.

Sweet Potato a la Provinee—Slice raw sweet potatoes thin and lay in a dish with bits of butter; sprinkle with salt and pepper, pour over milk to cover. Wet bread crumbs in cream, add a beaten egg, pour over top. Set in oven and bake until done.

Chocolate Tea Cake (cheap but delicious; bake in loaf)—One cup sugar, one-half cup lard; cream together and add one egg beaten light, two cups thick sour milk, two and one-half cups flour; sift in flour two heaping teaspoons cocoa, one teaspoon soda, one teaspon cornstarch and one-half teaspoon salt. This is fine for kiddies' lunch also.

Fruit Pudding—Place sliced fruit (fresh, canned or dried) in an oiled baking dish. Cover fruit with a biscuit mixture, made by using two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, six tablespoons butter and one cup milk or water. Bake until fruit is tender and batter firm and brown—usually from 15 to 30 minutes. With a fork break it into pieces for serving, then serve with cream or fruit sauce. Plain cream may be sweetened with vanilla and whipped. Fruit sauce: This sauce can be made by mixing cornstarch, sugar and a little flour. Add to this about a cup of boiling water. Flavor with any fruit juice. If a strong fruit flavoring is desired, substitute for part of the water the juice of the fruit.

THINK WAR WILL LAST

during the same hardships, but supposed that there is a phychological reason for it.

Miss Richards, taking up the European war, first discussed the recent naval conflict between the German and English fleets off the coast of Chile. She said that if the battle took place within the three mile limit, it was an indication that the twenty-one Republics in the Pan-American Union should unite and see to it that nothing more of the kind is permitted to occur. She said that while each of these countries had small navies, if they combined they could thoroughly enforce neutrality in the waters surrounding them. She said that while the United States navy is not powerful, other nations have a great deal of respect for it, for they consider this a "spunky nation."

Miss Richards touched lightly on the Japanese question, saying that she had read that the Japanese people consider that the United States has become very antagonistic to them. She told of the Japanese exclusion methods adopted by California.

Referring to the Monroe doctrine, she gave a short history of it, and said that Great Britain had violated it several times in the past. The question has now arisen how to protect Canada with regard to the Monroe Doctrine, and referred to the recent speech of former President Taft, which has caused comment in all parts of the world, in which Mr. Taft said that if the Germans simply occupied Canada it would be all right, but if they tried to change it to a Republic, he considered that it would be violating the doctrine. He thinks, however, that there would be a perfect legal right to collect an indemnity.

Pointing out on a large map the countries inhabited by Mahommedans, Miss Richards told of danger of a Holy War, such as is threatened by Turkey. She said it gave Turkey an opportunity to regain all the territory which she has lost in recent wars, and that if there ever was a general uprising by the Mohammedans it would be a very serious matter for England especially, because of her holdings in Africa.

Miss Richards ridiculed the interview, given out by the Crown Prince a few days ago, and published in this country, in which he disclaimed responsibility for the war, and blamed it on the other nations participating. She said that through the most authentic channels she had learned at Washington that the Crown Prince was really responsible for the whole trouble, and that the Kaiser was sincere in not wanting war.

Miss Richards also spoke briefly regarding the establishment by President Wilson of an Industrial Commission, which is trying to bring about peace in the Colorado strike troubles.

The speaker urged that the women's clubs of Plainfield as well as those present, join in the country-wide "peace movement" started by similar clubs throughout the United States, thereby lending their support to the praise-worthy effort of ending hostilities in foreign countries. She strongly favored the plan that before war was ever declared again that the question be submitted to a vote of the men and women of the affected countries.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

George Evans has composed several new songs for his new program of minstrelsy which will be introduced at the Plainfield Theatre, Monday night. It is a well-known fact that the little minstrel star has been the author of a score or more of songs, both words and music, which have attained enviable proportions on the books of publishing houses. "In the Good Old Summer Time" being one of the largest sellers ever known. Another of Evans' profitable compositions was the one which gave him his popular sobriquet of "Honey Boy," the song "I'll Be True to My Honey Boy." He is also the author of the final skit each year and for his new program he has supplied "The Blackville Bull Fighters," a satire with a Mexican flavor. The locale is a Texas town in the Rio Grande border. Evans plays the role of "Sassafrass Doolittle," the toreador.

Under the auspices of the Volunteer Bible class of the Park Avenue Baptist church, a Christmas sale is being held at 216 Park avenue. Those who will assist include Mrs. August N. Laggren, Mrs. Chester Gaskill, Mrs. James S. Pray, Mrs. William Wright, Mrs. John Groendyke, president of the class, and they will all have many assistants.

The Daily Press will be glad to have its attention called to any misleading or untrue statement, if such should appear at any time in an advertisement in its columns.

Readers are requested to assist in protecting themselves and legitimate advertisers.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The monthly vesper service will be held Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will be the speaker, and Mrs. Edith Frank, of the First Baptist church choir, will sing.

A silver tea will be held next Thursday from 4 to 7:30. The public is invited to attend. The object of the offering is to increase the fund for the Panama-Pacific Exposition contest in which the local association is entered.

The members of the gymnasium classes are invited to a "gym" party to be held at 8 o'clock Friday, December 11.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

Rehearsals for the senior play, "A Box of Monkeys," to be given at the Christmas entertainment, are being held every day this week. The coach, Miss Ray, and the members of the cast are working hard to make this play a success and rehearsals are being held every afternoon, as there is only a short time now before the play is to be given. As the preparation of this play was only started a week ago it will certainly be a big effort and a lot of time spent in order to get the play in shape by the time for the Christmas entertainment.

The junior class rings which arrived a few days ago have all been distributed to the owners. The rings are engraved with the school initials and the date 1916 on a small shield which sets obliquely upon the front of the rings. The initials of the owners are engraved on the inside and the whole thing presents a very pleasing appearance.

Manager VanMater has practically completed his basketball schedule for the coming season and it will be ready for announcement soon.

The Sigma Gamma Kappa will hold their first sewing meeting for the relief of the Belgian and other war sufferers this afternoon in the Y. W. C. A. These meeting will be held regularly every two weeks.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Curtis Dall, who has been absent from school for the past six weeks because of illness, returned today to resume his studies.

Warren Mumford, who dislocated his shoulder in the Alumni game, has returned to school.

The members of the football team will have their pictures taken on the front steps of the school today.

Miss Sminck has chosen the following first team from the squad of girls that reported for practise: Forwards, the Misses Dorothy Crane, Ruth Morris and Helen Peacock, centers, Florence Ryder, Jennie Bremble; side center, Sadie Rothberg; guards, Margaret Eaton and Irma Good. The second team will be composed of the Misses Mary Simonds and Ruth Morris, forwards; C. Bremble and Mary Lansdale, centers; Elsa Palmer and Elizabeth Mumford, side centers; Marrion Lockwood and Gertrude Head, guards.

The Junior class held a meeting yesterday and voted to follow the usual custom and give the seniors a "feed" after the Christmas exercises.

The Senior and Junior classes have made an agreement to refrain from "rough-house" and disorder while putting up the Christmas decorations. The night before the exercises the seniors will play the juniors a game of basketball, have a "roughhouse" in the gym. and follow this by a senior-junior dance.

At a meeting of the council held it was decided to present the school with a picture. The treasurers of the four classes were appointed as a committee to take charge of collecting the money. It was also decided to have members of the school nominated and elected to present and receive the picture.

3COOP, THE CUB REPORTER — TOO BIG A FISH FOR THE GENERAL TO EAT — BY "HOP"

NOTES FROM LABOR FIELD

The Census Bureau reports that the curse of child labor is rapidly lessening in the United States.

Police Commissioner Woods, of New York, lays the blame for many thefts to present unemployment.

It will cost the voters $229,834 to elect 15 judges in Chicago next June. But then, Chicago judges are so different.

Improvement in the demand for skilled labor is reported from all sections of the country. A big boom is on in all industries.

The International Union of Elevator Conductors won its 11-year fight at the Philadelphia convention, under severe handicaps.

Illness among workers annually involves a loss of $750,000,000 in the United States, says a surgeon in the Federal health service.

Illinois officials are putting a stop to the employment of Italian boys under 16 years of age in railway construction in that State.

The California courts have declared uncanstitutional the law providing for payment of wages, because it also provided imprisonment for debt.

The California labor men have petitioned Governor Johnson for the pardon of Blackie Ford and Herman Suhr, convicted after a riot on a hop ranch.

Chicago is pushing vigorously its campaign to aid women to find jobs. The officials are swamped, and have warned girls to shun Chicago for the present.

The literacy test law for immigrants will be strongly urged in Congress, as a check on the hordes of Europeans who are expected to seek homes in America.

As expected, the employers of Minnesota are fighting the decree of the Minimum Wage Commission that women and minors are worth from $8 to $9 a week as a minimum wage.

Reports on the candymakers in Massachusetts says that half the girls get under $5 a week; nearly one-quarter earn less than $4, and only 16 per cent. as high as $7.

Early inquiry into wage conditions in Milwaukee is promised. Caroll G. Pearse will be chairman of the board. Three of the first eleven men named are known to be friendly to labor. The board will have fifteen members.

"The labor of a human being is not a commodity or an article of commerce," that auspicious sentence in Section 7 of the Federal anti-trust bill, is said to have been originated by Senator Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa.

Warrenville.

Mrs. Thomas Parkerson, of Ravenswood, L. I., has been visiting friends here.

David Faulkner, of Long Island, has sold his farm of twenty acres adjoining the Wilson farm to the Kline Realty Company.

William G. Cooper is unloading a carload of slag for Harry Woods, of Coontown. Mr. Woods expects to use it in a dairy barn.

Charles Wettman, of Mt. Bethel, is breaking ground for a large new chicken-house to be built by Rudolph Steffens.

Peter Thorp, of Hill Top Farm, has sold his butcher business in Jersey City and expects to go into the chicken business.

Mrs. David Flammer, of Plainfield, and Mrs. George Mobus, of Watchung, have been visiting Mrs. Peter Williams, of Mountain Boulevard.

John Miller, of Coontown, who has been confined to his home by a severe cold, is able to be out again.

Miss Margaret Nash, of Brooklyn, will spend the week-end with friends at Hill Top Farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Williams have returned to their home in New York after looking at several farms in this vicinity.

MILLIONAIRE LEARNS A TRADE.

Cannon City, Colo., Dec. 4—From a life of luxury in the Brown Palace Hotel in Denver, Harold Frank Henwood, slayer of Sylvester VonPhul, of St. Louis, has stepped into the life of a felon with felons as companions, and to work of a common laborer. He is at work in the blacksmith shop of the Colorado State Prison. Beginning as an apprentice, he will gradually acquire the trade—a trade which the courts say he is never to acquire outside of prison walls.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE IS SURE TO COME

So Declares Mrs. Helen Hoyt Greeley Addressing Jr. O. U. A. M.

IS JUST AND AMERICAN

State Banking Commissioner George M. LaMonte Also Appeals to Organization to Support Wide-Spreading Movement.

The question of woman suffrage was presented at an open meeting of Benevolent Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., last night, by George M. LaMonte, State Commissioner of Banking and Insurance, and Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley, well becoming well known in Plainfield, her able presentation of the case for a just suffrage. There was a large atendance of members and friends, who evidenced much interest in the arguments offered by the speakers.

Alfred A. Tranchand, past councilor of Benevolent Council, presided and introduced the speakers. He clearly declared himself a suffragist, but aside from his own conviction he declared the question to be one of such general interest that it ought certainly to be considered by the Junior Order—an order which endeavored always to consider matters of importance to the public.

Mr. LaMonte expressed great satisfaction in being able to speak to the members of the Jr. O. U. A. M., a body so alive to the needs of the American nation, so deeply interested in education and other matters that touched the lives of the people. Mr. LaMonte said that as head of the Board of Education in Bound Brook he had received a beautiful flag and flag post from their order. He then asked the men to think out the subject of woman suffrage with him and to try to find any reason, prejudices laid aside, why women should not vote.

Mrs. Greeley was then introduced and made a scholarly and spirited address. She built up the idea that the world is advancing toward a social spirit. Not social in the sense of tea parties nor even of Junior Orders and Masonic orders where people meeting for talk and the display of personal adornment. Just here she described with alarming accuracy the gorgeous apparel of the Masons; men and women enjoyed these things she said and they were right enough, but they were not what she alluded to when she spoke of the social spirit—that great spirit of altruism or the care for others that was spreading over the earth.

She worked up to a conclusion that a modern altruistic world needed women and she appealed to the Jr. O. U. A. M. to aid in enfranchising women. The enfranchisement of women, Mrs. Greeley concluded, is for the general welfare, is just, is American, is Democratic and is sure to come.

COLLEGE CLUB TO GIVE FAIRY PLAY

Afternoon and Evening Performances at Hartridge Auditorium December 9.

Fairies for children and satire for grown-ups. This is what the College Club, of Plainfield, has in store for its friends on Wednesday, December 9, at the Hartridge Auditorium, when "The Rose and the Ring," dramtized from the pantomime of William Makepeace Thackeray, will be presented in the afternoon at 3 o'clock for the children and in the evening at 8:15 o'clock for older people. An excellent idea of "The Rose and the Ring," is given in the prelude by the author himself as follows:

"Our juvenile audience was amused by the adventures of Giglio and Bulbo, Rosalba and Angelica. I am bound to say the fate of the Hall Porter created a considerable sensation; and the wrath of Countess Gruffanuff was received with extreme pleasure. And you older folks—a little joking and dancing and fooling will do even you no harm."

The play is for the benefit of the scholarship fund, the club being engaged in helping worthy young women through college. Tickets for the affair may be secured from members or at the door. The program follows:

Characters of the play in the order of their entrance: Fairy Blackstick, who is responsible for every thing; Princess Angelica, daughter of King Valoroso; Glumboso, Prime Minister of Paflagonia; Countess Gruffanuf and governess to Angelica; Lorenzo, artist and secret emissary of Prince Bulbo; King Valoroso XXIV of Paflagonia, who stole the crown from his infant nephew, Giglio; the Queen (Mrs. V") his wife; Prince Giglio, rightful heir to the throne of Paflagonia; Jack, a page; Capt. Hedsoff, all that the name implies; Prince Bulbo, son and heir of King Padella of Crim Tartary; (Padella murdered King Cavolfiore of Crim Tartary and stole the crown from his infant daughter, Rosalla.) Betsinda, apparently a chambermaid Greenio Spinachi, an observing youngster; Marquis of Spinachi, a Crim Taratar nobleman, exiled for his devotion to the unfortunate King Cavolfiore; Hangman, right on his job; Archbishop, hand for weddings or funerals; the army of Paflagonia, an example of militarism; Smith, Jones, students at the university; Maids of Honour, Co-eds; Jekins Gruffanuf, once porter to Valoroso, but changed into a door-knocker for his impudence to Fairy Blackstick.

REV. DR. HERMAN L. MARTIN INSTALLED

New Minister of Temple Sholem is Introduced to Congregation.

Rev. Dr. Herman L. Martin, the minister-elect, of Temple Sholem, was formerly installed at the service held at the house of worship on Grove street, last night. There was a large attendance of members and their friends the seating capacity being taxed beyond the limit. William Newcorn, president of the religious body, was in charge of the service, introducing Dr. Martin. He recalled the fact that he had served a New York church for many years and he expressed the confidence and hope that his ministry in Plainfield would be blessed.

Mr. Newcorn outlined the work of the temple since its organization, and spoke hopefully of the future. Dr. Martin was then introduced and preached a strong sermon, basing his remarks on the Bible incident of where Esau sold his birthright for a mess of pottage.

There was special music by a choir comprising Mrs. Adolph Tepper, Miss Rae Prager, Miss Sadie Muskowitz, Miss Dorothy Augenblich and Miss Sadie Rothberg, there being solo numbers by Mrs. Tepper and Miss Prager, the latter presiding at the organ. Other music features were solos by G. M. C. Smith, 'cellist and Theodore Gottschalk, violinist, who also accompanied the choir in the rendition of numbers.

Dr. Martin preached at this morning service at the temple. He plans to introduce a junior service for Saturday morning and organize a junior choir.

GENEROUS RESPONSE MADE TO APPEAL

Many Gifts Are Being Received for the "Community Christmas" Plan.

The announcement that the Community Christmas committee would receive donations for its work of bringing good cheer to the forgotten and friendless of Plainfield and North Plainfield has started a stream of contributions which, it is hoped will continue to flow until the praise-worthy project is financed. The gifts are in sums of from $1 to $25. The total to date being $218. Last year about $800 was received for this purpose, and it is believed that the hard conditions existing will make the need even greater than it was then.

The following persons and organizations have thus far contributed: R. A. Claybrook, Mrs. Dexter Tiffany from charity fund, Probasco Bible class of First Baptist Bible School, Men's Bible class of First Baptist School, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. P. Veysey, S. T. Carter, Jr., F. W. Iredell, F. A. Weeks, G. H. Bachelor, Dr. F. A. Claussen, Mrs. W. H. Murray, a friend, Anonymous, C. A. Rice, Arthur M. Harris. All checks should be made payable to the treasurer, Charles A. Rice, 636 West Seventh street.

PLANNING FOR BIG SUFFRAGE MEETING

Dr. Anna H. Shaw, it is Believed, Will Draw Capacity Audience.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, considered greatest of suffrage orators, will speak in the Plainfield High School, Monday night at 8 o'clock. She has been speaking in many parts of New Jersey to crowded houses.

Rev. Dr. Anna H. Shaw at Plainfield High School, Monday Night.

Last night she spoke in Cranford and among those on the platform was State Senator Carlton B. Pierce, who has come out for suffrage. The meeting here Monday night is likely to be a memorable one. Members of the Junior Suffrage League are to act as ushers. So large an audience is expected that the young women are asked to meet Mrs. A. B. Jones and Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley at 2:45 o'clock Monday afternoon to take a lesson in distributing a crowd of people quickly and quietly. If Dr. Shaw is as witty as she has been elsewhere it has been suggested that special cars will be needed to convey the audience to their homes again. The questions at the close of the meeting has invariably proved of peculiar interest with Dr. Shaw's wide experience to draw upon for replies.

CIVIL ASSOCIATION MEETING.

The executime committee of the West End Civic Association will meet Monday evening at the residence of A. R. Parkhurst, Jr., 500 Grant avenue and the regular meeting of the association will be held at the Washington school, Friday evening, December 11 at 8:15 o'clock.

All applicants for relief or employment must apply at the office.

None but actual residents of Plainfield need apply. It is no use for people to come here from outside when our own needs are straining all our resources.

Neither work nor relief will be given without the fullest investigation and as far as possible in such a way as to help the applicant to help himself.

Every effort will be made to prevent men now employed from losing their positions. No attempt will be made to fix wages. The efforts of the employment committee will be cencentrated on the task of bringing employer and unemployed together.

The committees are organizing and the work is well under way.

Checks should be sent to

PYTHIANS ENTERTAIN A LARGE GATHERING

Members and Friends Guests of Perseverance Lodge Re-union.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, acted as host for 300 members and friends, last night, when it held an old-time reunion in the form of an entertainment and supper. The gathering that filled the castle hall in the Babcock building to its capacity, included many brothers from far and near, who had made a special effort to be present. In the regular lodge meeting preceding the open session, during which grand lodge officers were voted for, a general hand-shaking bee was enjoyed.

Visiting delegations were also in attendance from Somerville, Bound Brook, Elizabeth and other places.

The gathering was welcomed in an address by Past Grand Chancellor John M. Ulrich, after which the following program was rendered, in charge of John C. Bicknell, chairman of the entertainment committee. Selections by the Dutch Arms Band; address, "Pythiaism," Past Grand Chancellor William D. Quick, of Somerville; banjo selection, songs and monologues by "Joe" Crawford, the blackface comedian; address, "My Trip to Florida," by Brother Herrmann Moosebrugger, of Somerville; and vocal solos, "O Perfect Day," "The Preacher and the Bear," by Past Chancellor William N. Runyon. The last named received a royal welcome and his songs with personal piano acompaniment made a decided hit.

At the conclusion of the exercises, adjournment was made to the banquet hall where an appetizing supper was served. While the inner man was being cared for the Dutch Arms Band rendered a musical program and it was after midnight before the festivities were brought to a finish.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of John C. Bicknell, chairman; Ephraim Compton, W. J. Trembath and Harry L. Keen.

STATE DEPARTMENT WANTS BORO FINES

Sum Collected From Motor Law Violators Turned Over to Wrong Individual.

Owing to a misunderstanding on the part of Recorder Fred Hand, of the borough, the fines collected from violators of the motor vehicles' act who have been arraigned before him since his incumbency, have been turned over to the borough treasurer instead of to the Superintendent of Motor Vehicles' Lippincott and the North Plainfield Council, at its monthly meeting last night, was compelled to return these items to the State. Action on this question was taken by the council and Borough Treasurer George F. Brown was instructed to pay a total of $55 to the State department.

Expenses incurred by the various North Plainfield departments during the month were announced last night as follows: Street department, $279-69; police, $463.20; fire, $291.44 Bills totaling $1,774.06 were ordered paid. The council authorized the transfer of $254 from the contingency fund to the Muhlenberg Hospital fund, and $150 from the same source to the street fund.

An ordinance establishing a four foot building line on all thoroughfares with the exception of Somerset street was passed on the third reading and the borough clerk was instructed to advertise it. The following building permits were granted: F. O. Dunning, Sr., 42 Mountain avenue, for an addition to his home; Mrs. Lipsett, 32 Myrtle avenue, for a garage and Henry DeMott, of Somerset street, to construct a cement block building.

GIGANTIC VICTORY FOR THE RUSSIAN ARMY IN LODZ BATTLE IS REPORTED FROM PETROGRAD

MOST DESPERATE STRUGGLE OF WHOLE CAMPAIGN SAID TO HAVE FINALLY RESULTED IN COMPLETE ROUT FOR KAISER'S ARMY.

130,000 PRISONERS TAKEN BY CZAR'S TROOPS

German Crown Prince is Reported to Have Returned to Belgium, Where Plans Are Being Made to Cross Yser River—If Failure is Encountered Germans Will Proceed to Winter Quarters.

Petrograd, Dec. 5 (Central News Cable)—The Bouse Gazette states that the battle which has been raging around Lodz has ended in a gigantic success for the Russian army. Great numbers of German prisoners and numerous guns have been brought into Lodz daily.

The Gazette further states that all the banks and manufacturers in the city have resumed business. Despatches received here state that the battle fought between November 30 and December 2 were the most desparate of the whole campaign, particularly in the neighborhood of Lask and Sieradz, which culminated in the Russians capturing Shortzoff, situated to the south of Lask. During the same period fierce fighting took place in Galicia, the Russian troops succeeding in taking 1,015 prisoners and eight guns besides a large quantity of wagons laden with equipment.

Ten thousand prisoners were brought to the fortress at Kieff on Wednesday, bringing the total number of captured Germans and Austrians who have passed through Kieff since the commencement of the war to 130,000.

The most tragic moment of the fighting about Lodz thus far, it is reported here, occured between Tuszyn and Brzeziny, southeast of Lodz. Heavy German forces which had penetrated to Tuszyn were surrounded and obliged to fight their way to Brzeziny to unite with the main body.

The Russians charged desperately, but the Germans cut a passage, at the point of the bayonet, for a distance of fifteen miles.

This battle is called the bloodiest and most pitiless fight of the war. Ninety per cent. of the German officers were put out of action and many regiments had less than one hundred men left. The fighting lasted thirty-six hours.

The Germans fell in rows, but their comrades pushed forward over the bodies and hurled themselves against the Russians.

The Bourse Gazette reckons that the loss of the Austrians in prisoners is equal to their number of dead and wounded, and places the fighting strength of Austria now at two-thirds of what it was at the beginning of the war. It cites the smaller percentage of Austrian artillery falling into Russian hands and says this is because, since the second Austrian retreat from Poland, the Austrian artillery is always withdrawn from the field before the final issue of the battle.

The critic also points out the large proportion of officers, including colonels and lieutenant-colonels, among the prisoners, as indicating the demoralzation of the Austrian army and the loss of the fighting spirit. The last 50,000 Austrian prisoners included 600 commissioned officers.

London, Dec. 5 (Central News Cable)—The strong French offensive along the entire right from Verdun to Alsace has developed in the past three days until it has become an engagement of greater importance than the battle in Flanders, because of the greater possibility of a decided success. The advance of the French upon Altkirch, which was reported on Thursday, came soon after the bombardment of Arnaville and was followed by an advance of infantry in the general direction of Metz. It is believed that some of the movement of German troops in Belgium which has been reported from Holland recently, has been in the direction of Alsace instead of to Poland, as the resistance with which the Germans are meeting the French advances proves that they have made preparations to oppose any offensive action there. A despatch from Basle, Switzerland, received by way of Paris, states that the Germans are flooding territory in the vicinity of Strassburg as though in preparation for a defense of that city.

Lisbon, Dec. 5—The discussion of Portugal's position in the war is believed to have been responsible for the cabinet crisis this morning, when the entire ministry turned in its resignations to Premier Machado.

Paris, Dec. 5—Progress by the allies is stated to have taken place in the official statement issued by the French war office at 3 o'clock this afternoon. It says:

"To the north of the Lys we have realized appreciable progress. Our infantry, attacking at dawn, took with a single charge two lines of trenches. The gain was 500 metres. A portion of the hamlet of Wiedendreft, one kilometre northeast of Langemare, remains in our hands. Before Poesele, half way between Dixmude and Ypres, we have taken, on the right bank of the canal, a road house, over which there has been sharp fighting for a month. The enemy has tried, without success, by a violent attack of heavy artillery, to force us to evacuate the ground we have won.

"In the region of Arras and the Crampagne district, there have been intermittent cannonades here and there. Rheims has been bombarded with particular intensity. For our part we have destroyed with our works.

"In the Argonne region the fighting is very hot all the time. We have have repulsed all counter attacks.

"In Lorraine and Alsace there is nothing important to report."

Amsterdam, Dec. 5 (Central News Cable)—The German crown prince is again in Belgium, according to the correspondent of the Tijo, at Ses Van Gent, who sends a despatch declaring that a rumor is current among the German soldiers that they will within a few days attempt to cross the River Yser in full force with the crown prince leading. If they fail they expect to proceed immediately to winter quarters.

The Germans continue to fortify the districts along the north coast of Belgium acoording to a despatch to the Telegraaf from its correspondent at Sluis. Heavy guns have been posted at Moerkerke. Troops are entrenched along the banks of the canals and guns placed along the entire seacoast from Mariakerke to Knocke.

Berne, Switzerland, via Paris, Dec. 5, 3:15 a. m.—The sound of heavy cannonading in upper Alsace has been heard as far as Basel and other localities near the Swiss frontier. The main struggle between the French and Germans, according to reports reaching the Swiss frontier, is around Altkirch and Damerkirch.

The inmates of a large madhouse near Seunheim, more than 400 in number, were so frightened by the roaring of the guns that they became frantic and tried to break out of the asylum. The German autuhorities were obliged to convey all of them to Mulhausen.

A newspaper despatch states that the Germans are mounting guns before the city hall and church in Colmar, with the object of forcing the French to bombard the town in the hope that the population will be thus turned against the French.

London, Dec. 5—Signs are not lacking that he allied forces in Belgium and France are on the even of a strong offensive engagement, if it has not already begun.

Berlin announces the allies have been making repeated attacks on the German lines in Flanders, but have been repulsed.

The present activity of the German artillery may be a prelude to another formidable onslaught on the allies' line. This line is believed by both British and French experts, however, to have been made impregnable since the last German effort.

Should the German assault meet the same fate as have previous attempts to reach the channel, observers here expect it will be followed by a general advance by the allies.

It seems to be proved that in recent artillery duels the allies have established the supremacy of their heavy guns over the artillery of the Germans. This has been emphasized in recent despatches of General Joffre, as given out from Paris.

SIX-CENT VERDICT FOR A DUNELLEN PLAINTIFF

Charles Dietz, Jr., of West Dunellen, appearing as plaintiff in a suit to recover the value of three chickens and remuneration for the defamation of his character by one Cornelius P. Swantz, was awarded a six cent verdict by a jury in Dunellen last night after the trouble had been aired before Justice of the Peace Rene P. F. Von Minden. Robert Newton Crane, of this city, represented the defendant and William W. Giddes, of Dunellen, acted as counsel for the plaintiff.

Swantz said that he had six valuable chickens stolen from him on the night of October 13 and according to testimony offered last night he suspected Dietz as the thief. With the object of getting back his fowls he proceeded to the neighbor's henroop armed with a lantern the next night but was unable to single out the missing fowls. The next Saturday afternoon, however, he is said to have again visited the coop and selected three chickens that he claimed belonged to him. The evidence offered was of a contradictory nature and the verdict was expected.

HEALTH BOARD & CHICKEN POX

The Board of Health has gone on record as being decidedly opposed to allowing pupils with chicken pox to attend the schools of the borough. This action was taken on account of the Board of Education at its recent monthly meeting rescinding a policy prohibiting pupils with chicken pox from attending the schools of the borough on the ground that there was no quarantine by the Board of Health on chicken pox.

Her Dainty Speech.

There was one young woman in the box party at the theater who took no part in the noisy clatter and giggle. With her gaze fixed upon the stage she watched the progress of the play, indifferent to the gayety around her except that her delicate, aristocratic, finely chiseled features bore a look of weariness and a scornful smile curled her lips. At last, however, she turned her head slowly and looked at the other members of the party. Then she spoke to the elderly matron sitting by her side. "That chicken in the blue kimono," she said, "thinks she is the whole custard!"—Argonaut.

Linen of Bohemia.

One of the oldest and most important industries of northern Bohemia is that of linen weaving, which furnishes employment under favorable conditions to fully 25,000 people, who are so skilled and clever in the production of fine linens that these goods are favorably known and find a ready market in all parts of the world.

Chloroform.

Chloroform was the result of ages of experiment in an effort to do away with the pain of surgical operations. Opium and many other drugs had been tried with more or less success. In executions by crucifixion vinegar and gall or myrrh were given to the victim to stupefy him.

Not Deceived.

"Never in my life have I deceived my wife."

"Same here. Mine only pretends to believe the yarns I tell."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

He Loved Nature.

Ruskin's injunction to his servants. "Call me from my study whenever there is a beautiful sunset or any unusual appearance in the sky or landscape."

PAINT THE SCREW HOLES.

Then You Can Use Them Over and Over Again Without Trouble.

Many persons experience considerable difficulty in getting screws to hold in screen doors and other movable conveniences which are put up and taken down frequently and which are held in place by screws. The holes occupied by the screws become worn, and the screws are often quite loose, causing doors to sag and be otherwise out of proper order.

Bits of paper, strings and small pieces of wood are used to partially fill up the holes so as to cause the screws to be tight, but these work out and cause great annoyance, and a better method is greatly desired.

A coat of paint on the inside of the screw holes is the most satisfactory remedy for such an annoyance.

When screws are removed paint the holes with a small pencil brush or a bit of cloth twisted and dipped in the paint. When the paint fills the creases made by the threads on the screw and thoroughly dries the screw will fit tightly the next time it is thrust into the cavity. The painting should be done each time the screws are removed, and it will protect the wood as well as make the holes ready for the readjustment of the door or other object which has to be changed quite often.—Philadelphia North American.

First Thanksgiving.

The first Thanksgiving was conducted by an English minister named Wolfall in 1578, on the shores of New foundland. The first celebration in the present territory of the United States was held in the Popham colony at Sagadahoc, on the coast of Maine, in 1607. The first regular appointment of a Thanksgiving day was by Governor Bradford, the first governor of Massachusetts bay.

Peter the Great's "Window."

The city of St. Petersburg (renamed Petrograd by the czar) was founded by Peter the Great in the year 1703. He called it the "window through which he could look out upon Europe."

ACID IN STOMACH SOURS THE FOOD

Says Excess of Hydrochloric Acid is Cause of Indigestion.

A well-known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion is nearly always due to acidity—acid stomach—and not, as most folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hyrdochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation, then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas, or have heartburn, flatulence, waterbrash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50c bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and so evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and skin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful— all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.—Adv.

A TRIP INTO SPACE.

With a Peep at the Milky Way and its Fiery Spiral Nebula.

If you could stand still and let the world glide from under you the most impressive characteristic of space would be its emptiness, its awful black silence, of which man knows about as much as the deep sea fish do of their ocean. As the sun went sailing away its planets would close in one by one until apparently consumed by the solar rays. Before you had passed through the orbit of Neptune the sun would look no larger than an arc light. Fainter and fainter, deprived bit by bit of its dominance, it would finally fade into a pitiful spark. In spite of your tensest efforts to keep that glinting point clear of its fellows, it would at last melt into the multitude of soft lights that make up the Milky way, and henceforth, seek as you might, you could never distinguish your sun again. Lost in the Milky way, it would be as futile to try to find it as to find a certain grain of dust which you had noticed settling on a country road.

Then drifting spitelike out into inky nothingness you would be surrounded by myriads of brilliant lights. Soon they would impress you with this startling fact: The universe of stars is arranged like a mighty world. The Milky way encircles the skies very much as the equator does this earth, and since life is most abundant in the south so the stars grow thickest about the Milky way. Let the eye travel away toward the imaginary north and south poles, and not only do the stars thin out, but entirely new forms of star life make their appearance.

Through the telescope they are nothing more than filmy patches of light; to the cameras and spectroscopes of observatories they become the most amazing and frightful spectacles of all nature. They show themselves then to be stupendous whirlpools of fire, inconceivable in magnitude, thousands of "light years" away (light traveling 185,000 miles a second), where whole systems of suns are being slowly evolved. We call them "spiral nebula," but to describe them we need the tongue of God himself. They seem to be measureless caldrons, where his hand stirs cosmic dust until new suns rise and float off in flaming bubbles. They are so unthinkably gigantic that there is no perceptible motion to them. Already the cameras have recorded several hundred thousand in every stage of condensation, presenting an undeniable challenge, perhaps an answer, to those who would solve the riddle of the universe.—Maxwell Parry in Chicago Herald.

Ships and Waves.

When the waves of the ocean are one-half the length of the ship and one-twentieth of the length in height the stress upon the ship itself is very little increased above that in smooth water. But when the waves are of the same length as the ship or one and one-half times its length the stresses are considerable higher than when the ship is in smooth water; hence, in view of the fact that waves are seldom over 500 feet long, the maximum bending moments which come upon a ship 900 feet long are much less than those which come upon one 500 feet long.—Chicago News.

Improving the Milk's Quality.

A certain Glasgow milkman was suspected of using the pump handle rather too much before starting out with his milk delivery. The other day as he was standing serving customers in a busy side street a man passing nudged him and whispered, "Look out; the sanitary inspector is coming round the corner." Turning off the crank, he rushed for his cream barrel and, filling a huge can from it, opened the milk cask and emptied it in. The "sanitary" did not come, but the wife of the "tipster" got a splendid supply of rich creamy milk that morning.—London Tatler.

Giving Proper Credit.

Two Philadelphians were talking of the fortunes of a third denizen of that city when one said:

"His first lucky strike was in eggs. He bought 10,000 dozen at a low figure, put them in cold storage and sold them at a profit of more than 300 per cent. That was the cornerstone of his great fortune."

"Ah!" exclaimed the other. "Then the hens laid it!"—Harper's Magazine.

Both Together.

Little Mary had been sent to the store by her mother to get some fly paper. She was a long time in returning, and the mother began to get anxious. Going to the door, she spied the little girl coming up the street, and called to her, "Mary, have you got the flypaper?"

"No, mother," replied Mary; "it's got me; but we're coming together."—Lippincott's.

The Why of the Tip.

The reason why the tipping system will never be abolished is that the attitude of the average patron of the restaurant toward the high mighty waiter is that of Alice, who wept with delight when Ben Bolt gave her a smile and trembled with fear at his frown.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Good One.

"What test would you apply to men seeking positions as waiters?"

"I would select those of fetching ways."—Baltimore American.

Goldsmith's Combination.

Goldsmith did all his own writing. A voluminous author was one day expatiating on the advantages of employing an amanuensis and thus saving time and the trouble of writing. "How do you manage it?" said Goldsmith. "Why, I walk about the room and dictate to a clever man, who puts down very correctly all that I tell him, so that I have nothing to do, more than just to look over the manuscript and then send it to the press." Goldsmith was delighted with the information and desired his friend to send the amanuensis the next morning. The scribe accordingly waited upon the doctor, with the implements of pens, ink and paper placed in order before him, ready to catch the oracle. Goldsmith paced the room with great solemnity several times for some time, but after racking his brains to no purpose he put his hand into his pocket and, presenting the amanuensis with a guinea, said: "It won't do, my friend. I find that my head and hand must go together."

Power.

You want power? Well, the desire is legitimate and its realization possible. But what kind of power? Physical? Then stop fretting, take exercise, avoid excesses, form regular habits, eat nourishing food and sleep long and soundly. That means a sound body.

Mental power? All right. Use your brain. Think. Think systematically. Think persistently. Think below the surface. Grapple with the great thoughts which others have put into books. That will give fiber and grip to your mental life.

Or is it moral power that you are after? Very good. It may be had. Think pure thoughts. Look at lofty ideals. Live right. Crucify self. Loathe all vileness. Develop the good Samaritan side of your life. That will promote a high morality.—Bishop Joseph F. Berry.

Monster Fog Horns.

One of the monster foghorns in the United States lighthouse service is capable of emitting a sound that can be heard twenty-five or thirty miles at sea. It looks like half of a submarine boat, and a man of ordinary stature can easily step into it. These monster foghorns are worked by compressed air furnished by an engine of from twenty to twenty-five horsepower. It would be something miraculous could lung power be generated on the foghorn scale. For instance, the siren is blown periodically every seventy, eighty or ninety seconds or so, the actual blast lasting about two or three seconds. That means that while the compressed air is making mournful cadences something like 500 horsepower is being expended in the production of the sound.—Boston Herald.

Stung.

He was evidently a very angry man, and an acquaintance hastened to express his sympathy.

When the angry man became coherent he said: "I was coming home in a car and noticed a half dollar piece on the floor. No one claimed it. I talked it over with the conductor, and we took a quarter each."

"Well," said the sympathizer, "half a loaf, you know, is better than no bread."

"Certainly," said the angry man. "But I find now that I'm a quarter short."

The Word "Doll."

The word "doll" may be taken as meaning the same thing as "idol"—that is, an image—generally speaking, an image of the human form. The French word "poupee" and the German "poupa" were derived from the Latin "pupa," the word used for a chrysalis (insect stage), the earlier kinds of dolls being remarkably like the pupae of insects. Our word puppet is derived also from the same root.

Bessie's Task.

"Mamma," said little Bessie at table one noon, "I'm to write something to read in school, but I've forgotten what teacher called it."

"An essay perhaps," suggested Bessie's father.

"An oration," offered the little maid's high school brother teasingly.

"No," said Bessie, suddenly brightening. "I remember now what it is—it's an imposition."

One Better.

"Willie, is your father a very rich man?"

"No, Sallie. But he is a professor, so I can be educated for nothing."

"Oh, that's nothing! My father is a minister, and I can be good for nothing."—Harvard Lampoon.

Just So.

"Where are you going with those garden implements?"

"I don't want 'em any more. Shall try to pawn 'em."

"I see. Going to hang up the shovel and the hoe."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Needs Four More.

"That Miss Gabbeigh is a two faced creature."

"Well, she does enough talking to keep six ordinary faces busy."—Boston Transcript.

Done Properly.

"How is it you were so long over your work today?" she asked.

"Sure, ma'am," replied the servant, "you were watching me most of the time."—Judge.

Small thanks to the man for keeping his hands clean who would not touch the work but with gloves on.—Carlyle.

MANY DRUM CORPS AT T. A. B. FESTIVAL

Elaborate Program Under the Auspices of Local Organization Last Night.

Fife and drum corps from Elizabeth, Newark, Rahway and other neighboring towns were guests of the T. A. B. Fife and Drum Corps' annual ball in Sebring's auditorium last night, the event being the largest and most elaborate ever conducted under the auspices of the organization. Competition drills were indulged in for which handsome prizes were awarded, the Plainfield players taking an active part in this portion of the program. Those in the exhibition drill contest were the Liberty and Hexhammer, of Newark; Royal and Nonpareil, of Elizabeth; Citizens and American, of Rahway, and the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, of this city.

One of the prominent features of the event was the appearance of James L. Hasmann, of Newark, drum major of the famous Black Prince Fife and Drum Corps, and champion baton swinger and fire twirler of the Eastern States. He gave a skillful demonstration of the art last night.

NOVEL METHOD OF MEETING COMPETITION

Some of the merchants of Dunellen resorted to strategy yesterday in an effort to meet some of the prices of a concern which opened a branch store at that time. The company was selling seven cakes of a certain kind of soap for 25 cents and boxes of crackers at 4 cents. These prices were lower than some of the merchants were able to purchase the goods for. So one of the merchants hit upon the idea of sending boys to the company's new store and buying the goods.

Another merchant being "put wise" also followed suit. A quantity of the crackers and soap was thus being transferred from the shelves of the company's store before the manager learned of the plan and stopped the sale of goods to his competitors.

WAR NEWS

MISSION BAND MEETING.

The Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church met at the home of Mrs. George Mantz on Union street, yesterday afternoon. Following the devotional exercises the program committee took charge the general subject being "Thanksgiving." The pledges were received for the support of Dr. Paul W. Harrison in Arabia, and an interesting letter from him was read. He stated that since going to Arabia he had performed 500 operation, two-thirds of which were for eye trouble. Mrs. A. B. Cole, president of the society, was in charge of the meeting.

YOUNG FRIEND'S MEETING.

Richard D. Williams read an interesting paper on "Spirituality in the Business World," at the monthly meeting of the Young Friends' Association in the meeting-house on Watchung avenue, last night. This is the same paper he presented at the recent Young Friends' Conference, at Newton, Pa. Other reports were presented, followed by a social hour and refreshments.

"THE LIFE EVERLASTING."

The quartet choir of the First Methodist church will sing the first in a series of musical services at the service on Sunday evening. The cantata "The Life Everlasting" by Matthews will be the special feature of the program. The assisting soloist will be Miss Fay Maupin, violinist of New York. The public is invited to attend this service.

RITZO IDENTIFIED AS MAN WANTED ON CHARGE

Seven women identified carman Ritzo, the prisoner arrested by Sergeant Maurice Higgins Thursday afternoon, as the man who has been annoying young girls in the Netherwood section during the past two weeks and the man will be arraigned for trial before Judge DeMeza in the city court late this afternoon.

Ritzo is charged with a serious offense and has been confined in a cell since his apprehension. Some feeling has been aroused among prominent Plainfielders and it is probable that several will give testimony at the hearing.

WANT POLICE STATION OPEN DAY AND NIGHT

Agitation has been renewed with the idea of having the North Plainfield police station open all day and night with some one in charge at all hours. This would necessitate a slight increase in the force, but the necessity of having that place open all the time is admitted. The appointment of one or two new men would enable the borough to do this.

There are times when persons in the borough want to get in touch with the police and the best and quickest way to this is to telephone or call at the station, at times during the day the door of the stationhouse is locked and no officer around, all the men on duty being in other parts of the borough.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The boys' basketball suits arrived yesterday afternoon. The suits consist of seven jerseys and seven pairs of pants. The shoes will be ordered later. The jerseys are white with red and blue borders. The pants are blue with red stripes down the sides similar to those used by the University of Pennsylvania.

At a meeting of the Boys' Athletic Association yesterday it was decided to give the members of the football team, who earned their insignias, mackinaws as a reward for their work on the gridiron this season.

The boys of the sophomore class held a meeting yesterday afternoon and elected William Daniells captain of the class basketball team, and Everett Case manager of the team.

Manager Randolph Stelle, of the baseball team, has arranged the dates for the games with North Plainfield. The first game will be played on Hyde Oval on May 15. The second game will be played on Parker Field on June 5, and the third will be played on June 12 on one or the other of the two fields.

Manager Peyton Schenck has scheduled a dual meet with the Y. M. C. A. to be held on Friday evening, Dec. 18. The meet will probably be held in the Y. M. C. A. Schenck is also endeavoring to arrange a meet with the bank clerks.

TAKEN TO COUNTY JAIL.

Unable to secure bondsmen to go the $100 bail placed on them by Justice Snape in the borough court Howard and Joseph Sachs, of Harrison, who were charged with attempted robbery, were taken to the county jail at Somerville yesterday afternoon. The brothers were arrested by Marshall Hermann in the garage of Mrs. J. P. Truitt, of Greenbrook road Tuesday night.

FUNERAL OF MRS. SMITH.

The funeral services of Mrs. Katherine Smith, who died at her home at South Plainfield Thursday morning were held from the late residence this afternoon. The services were in charge of Rev. J. J. Allen, pastor of the South Plainfield Baptist church and interment was made in Middlesex Hillside cemetery.

Fifty members of the Sunday school of the First M. E. church have signified a desire to unite with the church as the result of the special evangelistic services held there recently.

THE TYLER ZONE AND THE GRAVES AMENDMENT.

The Tyler Zone ordinance was passed September 5, 1905. It made no pretense of limiting the number of saloons to be licensed. It merely prohibited saloons outside a certain territory which roughly we may call the down-town business section, except the Watson and Clark saloons (then outside said territory) on application of the then proprietors. If the proposed amendment is adopted these two licenses may be continued in the names of others than the proprietors in 1905; but need not be so continued if at any time the Council finds the conduct of either objectionable, or the neighborhood prejudiced.

Bernard Clark was the original holder of the license. He transferred it to Frank and John Clark in July, 1905, while the Zone ordinance was under consideration. In February, 1912, the license was granted to John Clark on his sole application; which may not have been a strict observance of the Zone ordinance. He died last spring, and the purpose of the Graves amendment is to enable the place to be continued by his brother-in-law. The adoption of the amendment will not, however, make it in the least more difficult for councils to refuse to license the Clark or Watson places than heretofore. The Council in its discretion may refuse to grant any licenses in Plainfield. We really have a very practical kind of local option in Plainfield because there is absolutely nothing which stands in the way of committing every candidate for the Council to either prohibition or the present Plainfield policy. There is nothing to prevent running prohibitionists for the Council and the election of six would make Plainfield a prohibition city.

Opposition to the proposed amendment so far as it is opposition to maintaining a saloon at the Clark locality is unjustifiable because it confuses the issue. Not at any time since the Zone ordinance was passed has any Council been under the least obligation to renew the Clark license, if a saloon at that place is undesirable. If the people of the neighborhood do not want a saloon there or if its location near a church is a sufficient cause for its removal, it should have been removed long ago and there has been nothing in the Zone ordinance nor is there in the suggested amendment to prevent its removal. There may be a question whether a saloon in that locality is justifiable, but it was licensed by the very Council which passed the Zone ordinance and has been regularly licensed by every Council since then and in each year unanimously except in 1908 when the vote was eight against two.

On the other hand, opposition to the Graves amendment on the ground that it will enlarge the Zone is to invert the facts, because without the amendment the Zone will be narrowed. The Zone, practically speaking, was defined by the ordinance to be the down-town business section plus the Watson and Clark places, although it is true that the two exceptions were not intended to remain exceptions forever. The amendment in effect merely prevents a further restriction of the Zone as we have had it for many years—a restriction which the Council enacting the Tyler ordinance could not agree upon, but did provide (as a way out of their own difficulties) should become self-operative at some very indefinite later date whether the Council then in office was in favor of it or not. The Graves amendment merely means that the 1914 Council is no more in favor of further Zone restrictions than was the Council of 1905.

It is no more vital to the interests of Plainfield to outlaw the Watson and Clark places now than it was in 1905; in fact less so, because there was then no ordinance restricting the number of saloons in the city. Today there are but eight and can be no more than one for every 2,500 of population. Many people seem to think the Zone ordinance has something to do with keeping down the number of saloons, whereas if we had no better protection than that which it affords we might today license forty-one under the state limitation of no more than one for every 500 of population.

I am in favor of the Graves amendment because I am not in favor of trying to impose further restrictions, believing that the attempt to do so will defeat its own purpose and imperil the Plainfield policy. I am able to understand the position of those prohibitionists who think it is morally wrong to compromise in any way on the liquor question; and who opposed the new ordinance last June fixing a maximum limit of one saloon for every 2,500 of inhabitants because that ordinance is admittedly a compromise. My view is that the Plainfield policy which was made both sure and automatic by the new ordinance is better calculated than prohibition to result in respect for the law and a substantial observance of it; and I am therefore against anything which would tend to imperil that policy. To me there seems to be a larger question involved than one of Zone boundaries; and in the interest of the city as a whole it would seem more vital to safeguard the policy than to secure interim benefits by further restricting the zone area and incidentally driving one more saloon out of business. I fear the reaction which some day may sweep away the effective barriers we have raised against the conditions which prevail in less favored communities. We have a mixed population, with people of many nationalities and widely divergent opinions. If we are to compromise at all, surely we cannot hope to hold others to a treaty while seeking constantly ourselves to change it in our favor.

I am aware that many will not agree with this reasoning, regarding it better in the long run to continue the agitation for prohibition even though in the meantime conditions in Plainfield might become much worse than they are today. But while I respect the views of others who may be right while I may be wrong, still I have so far been unable to alter my opinion. I admit there is an argument the other way; namely, that the Graves amendment while not enlarging the Tyler Zone, strictly speaking, does enlarge a theoretical zone defined by a previous Council for a future day, which day has arrived, and that it is therefore taking a backward step not to carry out the suggestions of that Council. But the deterrent effect of a zone has been overestimated because there is little if any danger of saloons being licensed in residential or other neighborhoods where not wanted. On the other hand an increase in the number of saloons has been prevented only by the narrowest of margins and with far more difficulty than people realize, the vote being very close every year, and the Zone ordinance has been of no value whatever in this fight for the maintenance of the Plainfield policy. The Graves amendment will protect the compromise and therefore the policy. The Clark license like any other in the city can and should be taken away on a showing that a saloon in that neighborhood is detrimental to the interests of the city. Those who oppose a saloon there should concentrate on that issue. If the saloon is to go, it should not be for one reason under cloak of another. There will be no impairment by the Graves amendment of the Zone as originally defined and as we have it today.

No. 0 Price $1.00

A splendid outfit for a young boy. No skill is required to buid the models. Forty models are described in the instructions, good sound working ones such as TRUCKS, SIGNALS, POTTER'S WHEEL, DRILLING MACHINE, GANGWAYS, AEROPLANE, WINDMILL, etc., etc. We do not care to include such simple models as chairs, stools, tables, music stands, etc., as these are unsuitable for intelligent boys. Such models as these can of course be made with Meccano without end, if desired. Full instructions with each outfit.

The Photograph produced herewith shows how one of the famous Rugs was tested on Fifth Avenue, New York City. More than 200,000 people walked on this Rug in two weeks, yet it shows no sign of wear.

This Rug is now on the sidewalk in front of our store and a man dressed in Oriental costume will keep count of the number of people walking on it.

When you see these Rugs, you will wonder how a rug of such luxurious Oriental beauty in which heavy rugged quality is combined with rich, soft, refined color tones, could be offered at the heretofore unheard-of low price of $69.00. The size is approximately 12x9 feet.

This is an opportunity to secure a most unusual Rug, one that you can feel proud to possess.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by Plainfield Branch New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

An Open Question—Tradition as a Guide.

The church has not decided. There are many in the church who are for and against. While I am perfectly safe in saying that today, as yet, the prevailing majority of Catholic teachers, Catholic theologians and philosophers, deny the political equality of woman and man, still there are some Catholic writers who will admit this claim or this demand. One thing is certain, that as long as the question is not decided, it would not be wise or prudent for any Catholic to vote for political equality, and, therefore, to vote for the full and absolute right of suffrage for women. I will say at once, however, and this I consider quite important, that while we may not admit full political equality or the full right of suffrage for woman, as it is usually demanded in our days, still there may be no objection to granting to women a certain modified suffrage, a limited or restricted suffrage. For instance, every one can understand that it will make a mighty difference and implies a tremendous difference whether a woman be elected to the School Board of a city or a county, or whether she be elected to Congress or to the State Legislature. You can see the difference. We can see and understand that a woman may be quite capable, and may be quite perfectly fitted to take her place and do very good and splendid work as a member of a School Board, when we would not for a moment want her to represent the people in Washington or at Madison. Why? For the simple reason that one corresponds to woman's nature; the other does not. One demands the co-operation of woman, whereas the other one does not. One fits her vocation; the other does not. Why the one? Because woman is a natural educator. Already in the family, where the very first education of the children must take place, it is the mother who does the work, not the husband, nor the father. Man is by nature fitted for severe and higher educational work; woman understands far better the nature of children than man does. Why? For the very reason again that this is the work pointed out for her in the family, while the man has other duties and other pusuits to follow.

Reasonableness of Modified Suffrage.

There is no reason, then, why under certain conditions this field of educational work which begins in the family might not be extended for woman, and that woman could thus be elected to educational municipal bodies. These do not of themselves imply the supreme control or administration of public affairs. It is simply a help in the general administration of affairs.

So again in municipal charity work if you have, for instance, a Charities Board. I mean an official board appointed by the city or the town, there is no reason why women may not be elected. And if they themselves can be elected to and placed in these positions, why not allow them to vote for the selection of those who constitute these official bodies? So I say, we may, on perfectly safe grounds, permit a certain modified, restricted right of suffrage; call it, if you wish, a limited political right of woman. But full political equality and full or unrestricted political suffrage for women I do not believe can be safely permitted on either philosophic or theological grounds.

God and Not Men Defines Social Relations.

I said there is no direct or explicit statement in Bible or dogma on woman suffrage. But there is quite enough in both from which important conclusions can be drawn, which must guide us on this question. True, it defines the social relation of man and woman within a very, very small circle. But reflect, this social relation has been determined not by human law or custom, but by Divine authority and decree; it defines the nature of a social circle which is the fundamental and essential element, the formative germ of society. All society, the whole human race, is based on the family and the family is the determining factor of what society is to be and will be. It has rightly been said by a clear-thinking man who was not a Catholic: "If you want to judge of the character and the morality of a nation, look to their families and see what are the prevailing principles regarding the family in the nation; then you know what the nation is." Perfectly correct.

Governing the Church.

Again, take the other factor in society, the church. In the church of God woman is absolutely excluded from all participation in the control and administration of affairs; why in fact not only woman, but the layman as well. The Divine constitution and organization given to the Catholic church places the whole authority and the whole control and administration absolutely and exclusively into the hands of the Pope and bishops. Not even the clergy have of themselves, of their own position, any right of administration or control in the church; they have it only as far as given them by those appointed by the Holy Ghost to rule the church of God.

Need of Reflection and Study.

I mention these things in order to call attention, as I said before, to the necessity of looking at this question carefully, and of trying to study it thoroughly before you launch out into any political agitation to settle it. At the same time you will understand and see from what I said, how important the question is. You can understand why I said I consider this question—the question of woman's rights—far more important than any other of our present modern social questions. And inasmuch as endeavors are made to bring these theories and these doctrines of teachings regarding woman's political equality and woman's full political suffrage before the people for legislation, it becomes the duty of Catholic men, after having studied the question, to take their part towards its right solution according to their conscientious convictions.

Political Equality a Danger to Family and State.

I have given a great deal of attention to this question, have studied it for several years back, and studied it very attentively; and my firm belief is that woman suffrage, generally granted, or woman's political rights, or of what they call "the demand of the modern woman's movement," will do the greatest harm to the family and the State. It cannot endanger the church, because the church is guarded by the Power of God. But the State is not, nor is the family. And for that reason, I say, let us be careful even though we fully recognize the personal and individual equality of woman, recognize her important, as great a work in God's divine plan for the temporal and external welfare of the human race. While her work is as necessary different from the question of her political position in the State. I feel it is one of the most important questions before us and I feel that Catholic men particularly and above all others must take the right stand; that the great conservative principles of the Catholic church must be carried out in this great agitation of today, if we want to do our duty toward the State and towards the family and towards ourselves.

BY MORRIS MILLER

With the death of Jack Sheridan, the aging of Bob Emslie and the uncertainty as to the return of Hank O'Day to the staff, the standard of big league umpiring has fallen away. Evans in the American and Klem in the National are about the best now working, and are up to the old mark in ability, discernment and judgment. Silk O'Loughlin, it is said, isn't as active or as brilliant as of yore, and the newer generation of umpires must have a lot of training before they will equal the old fellows.

Curious idea, religiously adhered to by nearly all managers: If an infielder doesn't hit, keep him in the game as long as possible; if an outfielder doesn't bat, to the bench and a new boy just as soon as possible. The idea, apparently, is that an infielder is a cog of a steady machine, has so many more critical chances than an outfielder, and must be humored and tolerated to the last. Yet a muff by an outfielder, or a grounder that gets by him, means much more than a muff or fumble, as a rule, upon the infield, and surely there are plenty of chances offered to the rangers of the rhubarbs! Therefore, in all logic and sense, why shouldn't a weak-hitting infielder get the hook, and why shouldn't a weak-hitting outfielder stick around if he can go and get the flies?

Bill Sweeney, the pride of Newport, Ky., is all through as a Cub, according to statements from Chicago. The second baseman slowed up so much, both on the bases and in field play, that he made a sad-looking record last summer, and Roger Bresnahan—so say the Chicago papers—has about decided to try Arthur Phelan as the regular second sacker. Not many fans will believe that Bill Sweeney has slowed up for keeps, or gone back to any permanent extent. He is still young, of faultless habits, and has simply had one of the light-hitting seasons that occasionally strike any player. In all probability, he will be as good in 1915 as he was in 1912, when he was a conspicuous figure. The game can not afford to lose players of Sweeney's character and integrity merely on a guess that they have lost their skill.

Both Harvard and Yale will have to build up new football teams next season. Harvard will lose nearly all of its regular players by graduation, and four of the Yale regulars who played against Harvard this year will be missing next year. Harvard will lose Brickley, Hardwick, Logan, Francke, T. J. Coolidge, Trumbull and Pennock. Yale will lose Captain Talbott, Brann, Stillman and Ainsworth. The following Yale substitutes also will graduate: Pumpelly, Cornell, Oakes, Macleish and Carter.

"The Federal league has done us all the harm it can, and I do not think any one in baseball need worry about that organization—except the men who backed it last season," recently declared President Ban Johnson of the American league. "Even if they were able to dig up the means to finance another season, which is extremely doubtful in these tight times, I do not believe any one connected with it has any desire to start another season with the certainty of having to stand even greater losses than this year."

Football has claimed thirteen victime this season, but only one death is attributed to a college. In this instance the player who died after a scrimmage was found to be a victim of organic heart trouble. Most of the deaths were due to games played on high school or prairie gridirons. In every case the victim was twenty years or under and the cause in several instances is believed to be lack of physical condition for such a strenuous sport. Injuries have been as frequent as in other seasons, but in no case has death been preceded by a long siege of pain.

Good Game Played on Saengerbund Hall Court Last Night.

The North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team defeated the Plainfield High School girls' Alumni quintet on Saengerbund Hall court last night by the score of 24 to 17. The city graduates played well in the first period and managed to keep the score to a tie but the boroughites ran away from them in the final period and made an even dozen points while their opponents could get only two field goals and one foul. The game was hard fought throughout and Miss Lillian Spencer was forced to do the bulk of the scoring because the P. H. S. guards "smothered" Miss Marjorie Burtis during the whole game.

The borough team started off well and made the first score. The visitors retaliated with a field goal and then the score went back and forth until the half ended with the count 12 to 12. Miss Helen Brynarski, captain and center of the Alumni, made a beautiful field goal from center in this half and repeated this feat in the second, scoring four points in all. Miss Spencer led the attack in the last half and, with Miss Burtis' six fouls, the home team drew away from its opponents. With only two minutes to play one of the players was hurt and when play was resumed, the borough players scored another goal before time was called. Miss Spencer caged six field goals while Miss Burtis managed to secure three of the two point variety and six free throws. For the Plainfield Alumni team, the Misses Stewart, Mehl and Brynarski did the scoring. The score:

Y. M. C. A. WILL HOLD INDOOR MEET JAN. 12

Physical Director Meermans Expects to Make This An Annual Feature.

The first annual handicap indoor athletic meet under the auspices of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. will be held on January 12 at 8 o'clock. Physical Director Robert Meermans has arranged for five events, four of which are handicap and the fifth will be open to all competitors. Prizes will be given to the first three men to place in each event and the three totaling the most number of points will receive medals. The ribbons will probably be blue for first, red for second and yellow for third place.

The five events that have been announced are the running broad jump, running high jump, 8 pound shot put, standing broad jump and the 9 potato race. The last named event will be open to all. Entries will close with the physical director on January 11, one day before the meet. There will undoubtedly be much interest taken in this meet as there has been no indoor feature of this kind in Plainfield for several years. When the old Sunday-school Athletic League was organized these indoor meets were extremely popular and there was always keen competition. Entries blanks are out and all who wish to enter can procure them at the association building. There will be a fee of five cents attached to each entry to help defray the expenses of the meet.

Newark bowlers, present champions in the Elks' League, lost some ground last night, when they dropped two games out of three in a match on the Rahway Elks' alleys. There was some good pinning and some decidedly ordinary rolling. In the first game the home five was there with 855 and won by thirty-two pins. Newark came back in good style with a total of 931, while Rahway stopped at 812, but matters were reversed in the final and deciding game, when the Rahway five scored 912 and the visitors only totaled 814. Alec Hinton led the Newark team with 214, while Albright rolled 234 for Rahway and Koops was there for 210. The scores:

N. P. H. S. GIRLS GAVE RIVAL FORCES THE "ONCE OVER"

Several of the members of the North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team witnessed the game between the Kearny and Westfield High School girls teams at Westfield yesterday afternoon. The Kearny sextet won the game by the score of 29 to 12. Westfield has always been a bitter rival of the borough girls and generally takes both games that are played every season. The North Plainfield girls, after seeing the game yesterday, think their chances against the Westfield aggregation this year the best ever as they defeated the Kearny girls by the score of 33 to 11 on Saengerbund Hall court recently.

The Westfield girls have been strong contenders for the Union County title for the past few years but their exhibition shows they have lost several good players and will have a hard proposition retaining their title.

SOUTH ORANGE WON FROM LOCAL GIRLS

Plainfield High School Sextet Trimmed in Opener.

The Plainfield High School girls' basketball team opened its interscholastic schedule, yesterday afternoon, in the High School gym, and after a hard and fast game lost out in the last few minutes of play by the score of 15 to 10. South Orange proved to be equally as strong as the local quintet in the first period and even a little stronger in the last few minutes of play. South Orange had a well balanced team with a splendid forward in Miss Thomas, and a fine center in Miss Tucker. For Plainfield, Miss Eaton played a great game at guard, holding her opponent, Miss Wilson, to two goals, and continually sending the ball to the Plainfield end of the floor.

Neither team scored for about three minutes after the whistle blew for the opening of the game. The visitors then started the scoring by Miss Thomas shooting a field goal and soon after scored another point by caging a foul goal. Plainfield scored the next three points, when "Dot" Crane caged a field goal and a foul.

Each team scored another basket before the first half ended.

At the beginning of the second period the visitors substituted Miss Clough for Miss Tucker and Miss Brady for Miss Boston. Each team played evenly until the middle of the second period, when two goals by Miss Thomas gave South Orange a lead which it held throughout.

YOUNGSTERS PLAYED FAST PRELIMINARY EXHIBITION

The Somerset Field Club basketball team defeated the Hope Chapel Boy's Club last night in Saengerbund Hall by a score of 29 to 17. The game was played between the halves of the N. P. H. S. girl's game and proved a very interesting one for the spectators.

The first half of the contest ended 11 to 9, in favor of the Field Club after their opponents had given them a very good run for it. In the second half, however, the victors rolled up the baskets from the beginning to the end and the half netted them nine goals as compared with the Hope Chapel boys' eight.

Mantz led in the scoring for the Somerset Field Club with six field goals, and Burner came next with four field goals. Every man on the team, however, scored during the game. For the Hope Chapel team McAfee led in the scoring by caging four baskets, and he, and Muir who played center, were the mainstays of the team.

Harry Taylor and Dick Erler Pushed Into the Background This Week.

Harry Taylor, of Paterson, and Dick Erler, of Newark, who have been having a merry little fight all by themselves for the individual honors in the Elks Senior League battle this season, took a decided slump during the past week and Wright, of Jersey City, climbed to the top rung floating an average of 197.3 for 24 games. Paterson leads the teams with Jersey City in second place. Weber, a new man on the Newark team, has a record of 197.2 for three games.

A HEAVY BURDEN.

A Back Ache Makes Life Miserable for Many Plainfield People.

A bad back is a heavy burden.

A burden at night when bedtime comes,

Just as bothersome in the morning.

Ever try Doan's Kidney Pills for it?

Know they are for kidney backache—and for other kidney ills?

If you don't, some Plainfield people do.

Read a case of it:

Mrs. Anthony Wahl, R. F. D. No. 1, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I had such distressing pains in my back that I could hardly stand and it was out of the question for me to stoop. I was all crippled up and I knew perfectly well that my kidneys were the cause of the trouble. A neighbor recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to me and on her suggestion, I used them. They gave me almost immediate relief and three boxes changed me from a chronic sufferer to a healthy women. I still take Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally, when a cold settles on my kidneys, and they act as a preventive of any serious trouble. You may publish this account of my experience for the benefit of other kidney sufferers."

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Announcement by the management of Proctor's Theatre that the Thanhouser Company's newest serial photo-play, "Zudora," would be shown at the Front street playhouse beginning next Tuesday, has aroused keen interest among local devotees. The story is by Harold McGrath, author of "The Man on the Box," and relates the adventures of a beautiful young woman, who is compelled to unravel twenty mysteries in order to win the man she loves. A co-plot involving her fortune of $20,000,000 makes the narrative all the more thrilling and places "Zudora" in the front rank of photo-plays. The Pathe serial, 'The Perils of Pauline,' which has been running at Proctor's Theatre for several months, will be concluded Tuesday, and Miss Pearl White, who posed for the play, will be at the theatre that night. She will give a unique monologue in which she tells of the real perils that "movie" actors experience while exposing themselves for the camera. Her visit to this city is only one of the many treats that Messrs. Proctor and Sanderson have in store for the Plainfield public and will be followed shortly by others equally as pretentious.

NEWS OF INTEREST IN THE PLAINFIELD BUILDING WORLD

ANNIVERSARY OF BUILDING PAGE

The Daily Press Begins Second Year of Special Department.

ABREAST OF THE TIMES

Building and Construction News of All Kinds Have Been Presented in Attractive Form—New Features Promised for 1915.

With those columns today, the second year of the building department of the Daily Press is ushered in, after having completed, from a newspaper point of view, a most successful year in presenting to the reading public, the only page of its kind in this city, with the building and construction news in this vicinity. Real estate has had its share of attention during the year through these columns, as has the building and realty movements of Plainfield's suburban territory.

Many readers have pursued the construction activities of the city and adjacent towns from week to week, written in paragraphs which were to the point, and in language generally understood by those interested in the development and progress of the city. While the building operations have been at ebb tide during the past season, the department has kept pace with the movements of interest, and presented the news in a way which has attracted many readers to the Daily Press.

This department has been an extensive one to conduct, receiving no material support from contractors or supply dealers, those who mostly benefitted by the department. Despite this fact, the building page has kept abreast of the times, and enters upon its second year with renewed vigor, and determined to give to the public of Plainfield one of the best, and most widely read boosting sections of local newspaperdom.

It is appropriate at this time that we repeat the declaration of principals as made a year ago when the department was first inaugurated, believing that a continuance of these policies throughout the coming year will mean much in keeping the general public well posted on the development of the city, and give to the "Queen City of the East" the best booster page known in its history:

"Proper exploitations of the building and allied interests in Plainfield have been neglected so long that there are thousands of residents of this city who do not realize how fast business and residential buildings are increasing. The Daily Press, in keeping with its "Do It for Plainfield" slogan, believes that there is no better way of showing the outside world how rapidly Plainfield and surrounding towns are growing than through a systematic and careful presentation each week of a thorough review of what is going on in the building world.

"The Plainfield development page is here to stay. One of the Daily Press staff will give his time solely to learning all he can about the growth of the city along this line. The Daily Press wants every bit of building news it can get, and wants to emphasize the fact that the rule will at all times be to give the news to every architect, builder and contractor who may have anything to do with work which may be mentioned. Pictures of new properties will be printed whenever they may be procured. Suggestions for the page which will make it more valuable will be welcomed, and we urge the hearty co-operation of every contractor and builder in the city of Plainfield."—From the Plainfield Daily Press, Saturday, December 6, 1913.

DUNELLEN'S STEADY AND RAPID GROWTH

Borough is Now Recognized as Place of Some Importance.

The fact that Dunellen's steady and rapid growth in the past five years is rapidly bringing her to a point where she s to be generally recognized by outsiders as a place of some size and importance has been attested to again by the action of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company in opening a branch store there yesterday.

While no new awarded contracts or sales of property have been announced this week inquiries continue unusually brisk for this time of the year and the prospects look particularly rosy as to the closing of a deal or two of importance within the next week or ten days. In the meantime the local carpenters, masons, etc., of the borough, will be kept busily engaged as the following notes indicate:

Rapid progress is being made in the erection of the new barn for Walter S. Craig, of New Market road. Contractor J. Newton Apgar is doing the work.

Contractor Firman H. Gise has completed the foundation walls of the new house that Contractor J. Newton Apgar is erecting for the Watchung Investment Company on Second street.

The new Dr. T. H. Platt house on First street has been completed.

Contractor William Kramer has completed excavating for the new house that is to be erected by J. Newton Apgar for his own account on Second street.

The new H. B. Eckert house on Third street has been enclosed.

The trimmers are at work in the new John P. Fenner house on Third street, west of Washington avenue.

Contractor C. D. Nonemaker has men at work on the roof of his new house on Front street.

The plasterers are at work in the new Mark Hipp house on Front street.

Improvements in the carpentry line have been in progress during the past week at the Nelson Blackford place on New Market road.

Contractor Firman H. Gise has completed the foundation walls of the new house to be erected by Contractor A. H. Burdick on Washington avenue.

Contractor Samuel M. Titus' men are at work on the roof of the bungalow that is being erected for John R. McDonough, of Plainfield, on Columbia street.

NEW MARKET.

Contractor VanAlstyne has completed his job of repairs at the plant of the C. E. Kelly Company.

Repairs on the barn of the Jenner property have been completed by Contractor Magnue Johnson.

There will be a special school meeting on Wednesday evening to act on the proposition of building an addition to the South Plainfield school at a cost of $12,500 and issue the bonds of the school district for the same.

One appeal from the assessment of taxes in the township has been filed. It is by Anna W. Hall against the assessment on her land lying along New Market Pond and formerly the property of William Jenner. There are twenty-six acres in the tract and they were assessed by Assessor George Coriell at $100 per acre. The petition asks for a reduction of the total of $2,600 to $1,300.

LOCAL REALTY MARKET ACTIVE

Several Sales and Rentals Reported by Plainfield Agents.

Guy Bender, of New York, has rented the C. K. Compton house at 214 Netherwood avenue, through the Armstrong Mulford agency.

Architect F. L. Lancaster is drawing plans for a store and apartment to be erected at the corner of Third street and Monroe avenue, for J. Pashin, of 962 West Third street. The dimensions of the building will be 24x55. The apartment which will be upstairs will contain six rooms. The building will contain all improvements and will cost about $4,000.

Read Holliday, of Fanwood, has rented a bungalow on Palmer avenue through the Harvey R. Linbarger agency from the Little Farms Company and has taken possession.

H. W. Johns, of Putnam avenue, has rented the property at 1027 Sherman avenue, formerly occupied by William Jeffery, president of the Board of Trade.

Harvey R. Linbarger has taken over a tract of land with 1,100 feet of frontage on the south side of Martine avenue between Hillside and Woodland avenues. Mr. Linbarger expects to develop the tract in the spring. The houses that will be erected will be in keeping with the residences of the surrounding neighborhood.

LOCAL REAL ESTATE DEALERS SAY SPRING WILL BRING REALTY BOOM

Interviews With Prominent Plainfield Operators Indicate That Business is Picking up—Many Think European War Will Have a Beneficial Effect on Conditions—Enormous Demand Already Being Felt for American Manufactures—Federal Reserve System Will Result in Restoration of Confidence.

A majority of the local realty men, who were interviewed this week, expressed a belief that there will be a decided improvement in the realty market with the advent of spring. They do not base that belief as some might suppose on the theory that because conditions generally cannot become any worse that they must improve but rather on well founded beliefs that the business of this country is to be benefited greatly by the present European war through the enormous demand that is already commencing to be felt for our manufactured and food products and through the workings of the new Federal Reserve system with the subsequent elasticity of credits and the alleviation of the present tightness of the money market. The interviews held with the respective realty men are in part as follows:

E. Frank Vail, of 177 North avenue, said, "The war in Europe with the closing of the factories and the killing of men will before long create employment for American men. Things will gradually pick up, in fact conditions in my line as reflected by brisker inquiries are already assuming a brighter hue. One good condition of the present situation has been that no Plainfield property holder has been obliged to sacrifice his or her property. There is one circumstance, however, that surely has not helped the local realty situation any and that is the demand of the local union of carpenters for a minimum pay of $4.50 a day from the first of May. The demand is very untimely and will surely lead to a curtailment of some of those who have only been waiting for better times to build. As an illustration I know of a party who was having plans made to build an expensive house here, but he had work stopped on the plans as soon as he heard of the demand of the local carpenters."

J. H. Carson, of 211 North avenue, enthusiastically said, "The Federal Reserve system will result in plentiful money and the restoration of confidence. The new system has only been in effect a short time and has not really got oiled up as yet, still, there is an already noticeable improvement in conditions. Within the next six months I think that you will see the wheels of industry of this country running full blast and I for one expect to see a great demand for real estate and especially for factory sites as the demand that will then come from the shores of Europe for our manufactured products will equal, if not surpass, their present demand for our food stuffs."

D. Foster Updike, 134 North avenue, said, "Money seems to be more plentiful and the general outlook is considerably brighter than it was. People seem to be more encouraged and are talking about building. At the present time there is more of a demand for farm land than there has been in the past five years. There is also quite a demand for houses to rent at $40 a month and under."

Armstrong Mulford, of 169 North avenue, said, "Things are shaping up better with everybody. The money market is getting a little freer and by spring I think that there will be a real improvement. There is scarsity of houses to rent on the market and I think the present a good time to erect houses to rent between $20 and $40 a month."

Harvey R. Limbarger, of 197 North avenue, says that there are more inquiries and that business is rapidly becoming normal. Mr. Limbarger is of the opinion that the negative effects of the present European war on business have worn off and that from now we will be the gainer by it in a commercial sense.

William Jeffrey, secretary of the Berkley Heights Association with offices on Park avenue said, "Anyone that knows anything at all about the real estate business knows that there are three factors in the production of wealth, viz. Land, Labor and Capitol. Not two of the three factors of wealth, Labor and Capitol, have been very seriously effected and the remarkable thing about it all is that land values have not been effected. Therefore with the recovery of the two factors, and that seems to be apparent to the average man, land values will immediately strengthen and increase which will be followed by sale at present holding prices.

"As for improved residential property the demand now seems to be more for more land and less house. A house constructed of durable material such as stone, brick and concrete which reduces the depreciation to the minimum seems to be the type of house wanted. The size of the plot increasing the land value to the maximum the day of the handsome house on the small lot is about over."

Edward Byers, 148 North avenue, says that the outlook is brighter than two weeks ago and that the situation is bound to improve. Inquiries, Mr. Byers says, are brisk for houses that rent for $25 and $30 a month.

Edward C. Hardingham, of 152 North avenue said, "The outlook for the future is very good owing to the fact that so many shops are opening up on account of the orders that are being received from the other side. This will result in more money being put in circulation and the prospects for a real estate boom I think should be looked for this spring."

In order to facilitate the local realty men in profiting by this boom, Mr. Hardingham is of the opinion that the unit system of assessing with property assessed at its real value should be used instead of the present inaccurate and irregular system. Mr. Hardingham said in this connection, "I think it advisable owing to the various complaints made on the taxes levied on various Plainfield properties that it would be a better plan to assess on the unit system making assessments for the full value of property and reduce the tax rate so that the aggregate income to the city would be approximately the same as it is now receiving. By doing this it would have a tendency in selling property to show the respective buyers that the assessment is approximately the price that we are offering the various properties for sale and by giving them the tax rate, which would naturally be lower than the rates of the majority of the towns in this section owing to the fact that the full value of the property is assessed it would help real estate sales considerably. A great many parties picking properties look up the assessment and if it falls much below the selling price an agent is asking they naturally suppose that we are asking an exorbitant price and our argument that the property is not assessed for its full value does not seem to have very much weight as they are told generally from the outside that Plainfield properties are assessed for full value."

J. O. OSGOOD, JR., TO BUILD A HOME

Will Be Located on Jackson Avenue and Will Cost $2,500.

Three building permits calling for an expenditure of $3,150 and the erection of a house, a bakery and store were issued during the course of the past week by Building Inspector T. O. Doane. The permits as issued as are follows:

First Ward.

Joseph O. Osgood, Jr., of 17 Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield, is to erect a $2,500 home at 123-125 Jackson avenue. The dimensions of the house will be 24x24x24. It will be occupied by its owner.

Domencio Parreto, of 321 Johnston avenue, is to erect a one-story terra cotta building at 315 Johnston avenue. The building will cost $500. It will be used for a garage.

Fourth Ward.

L. Lewis, of 232 First place, is to erect a store at 511 West Third street. It will have a 28 foot front and will be 12 foot deep. It will cost $150.

NEW ORDINANCE A BOROUGH NEED

Will Do Away With Loopholes in the Building Code.

NEW COUNTY SCHOOLS

Great Weather for Prospective Builders—Value of Fire Regulations Demonstrated—Many Garage Permits.

Councilman Milne's ordinance introduced at the special meeting of the Borough Council, November 27, establishing a building line on all streets of the borough with the exception of Somerset street, is a much needed regulation. Its principal feature is a stipulation which prohibits the extension of any building to a point within four feet of the sidewalk line, and fixes a penalty of $10 per day for every day that any building is allowed to stand in violation of this provision. Heretofore considerable trouble has been experienced by the North Plainfield building inspector because of the loopholes in the former ordinance and the new one will be strictly adhered to in the future.

The value of fire and building regulations was demonstrated Monday night when a fire occurred in the Lyric Theatre on West Front street. Had it not been for the fact that a fire-proof booth enclosed the apparatus being used to show the films it is probable that the entire building would have caught fire. The fact that the equipment that caught fire was enclosed in a steel booth kept the flames confined and it was impossible for them to menace other parts of the structure. The thirty people in the place made an orderly exit before even the smoke broke through the booth walls.

Plans and specifications for the proposed new graded school on Evergreen avenue are now on file in the office of the Board of Education. The Building Trades' Council had a bona fide kick to register when the plans were filed in New York and had a perfect right to demand that they be placed on file in some local office. Many think that local contractors can bid as low on the proposed work as out-of-town corporations and the fact that the plans are now easily accessible will probably induce many local proposals.

People who are now building homes in Plainfield are gloating over the excellent weather conditions that have prevailed here this fall. In other years those building residences during November have been forced to leave the grading work until spring owing to the frozen condition of the ground but this year the warm weather has enabled contractors to complete the outside work. Up to this time work of builders has been facilitated by the moderate weather conditions and all are hoping for a continuance of the unusual weather for sometime to come.

One of the handsome new houses constructed in this city during the fall is owned by Dr. Clive W. Montford. It was erected by George Wilson and the owner this week moved his belongings into the home. For modern construction this house is one of the best examples in this section of the State, nothing being lacking along this line. It is located on Park avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets.

The erection of the Dr. Montford and Dr. Hughes' homes in the immediate vicinity of Park avenue and Seventh street has brought about a marked improvement in that section. Prior to the building of the two houses property in that vicinity was marred considerably by the neglected southeast and southwestern corners but the modern dwellings have beautified the place extensively.

Another section of the city that has been improved by building is Sachar place. This short thoroughfare runs west from Girard avenue about two hundred feet from West Front street and the several houses erected on the land by the individual after whom the street is named has done away with the desolate surroundings in that spot.

Work has been completed in raising the old Force homestead at Watchung avenue and East Second street in preparation for the new postoffice building. The tearing down of the "old brown house" marks the passing of a building that has been in use for over half a century being one of the first erected in that neighborhood. Cleared and ready for cellar-digging the site for the new Federal building presents a broad expanse and it is not likely that a better place for such a structure could have been found.

A little over a year ago a real estate firm took possession of Plainfield's most historic athletic field, Crescent Oval, with the expressed intention of cutting it up into building lots. Although the grandstand has been torn down and the property partially cleared we have not been able to locate any further improvements as yet and it is probable that the site will be used as a playground by the youth of the city for some time to come.

The dedication of the Battin School at Elizabeth during the past week gives Union county another creditable educational institution. Pingry students have one of the best equipped structures in the State and one that the county might well be proud of. Westfield has another school in the course of construction and this will also be turned over to the county in the near future.

Haven't heard a thing about that new Fanwood school since that bunch of suffragettes tore up the ballots at the special election. Wonder if the Fanwoodites have forgotten that they needed a new institution of learning or are just waiting for the sentiment to die down.

Permits for garages granted recently by Building Inspector Doane indicate that many local residents contemplate purchasing machines before the first of the year. A number of permits for small structures of this variety have been issued recently.

THIRTEEN PERMITS ISSUED LAST MONTH

Calling for a Total Expenditure of $29.725 for Buildings and Repairs.

Nothing can illustrate what amounted to an almost complete inertia in the local realty market during the past month better than the fact that only thirteen permits, calling for an expenditure of the small total of $29,725 as against a total of $94,880 for the same month last year, were granted in this city for the erection of new buildings and improvements.

As noted in the table printed below the Third ward leads in the total sum of the expenditures. The Fourth ward, however, leads the Third ward as to the number of permits granted with a total of six as against three. In the First and Second wards only two permits were granted for each ward.

The tables of comparison are as follows:

November, 1914.	New Bldgs	Alterations	Total
1st ward	$ 2,500	$ 75	$ 2,575
2nd ward	6,500	300	6,800

4th ward	3,150	——	3,150

TRADES' COUNCIL MEMBERS ARE RILED

Claim Advertisement for New School Bids Was Decidedly Misleading.

Claiming that the mechanics of Plainfield have been slighted by the Plainfield Board of Education, members of the Building Trades' Council are indignant, and several of the more prominent workers in this organization bitterly denounced the local Board for the methods pursued in the handling of the Evergreen Avenue School question, at the meeting held last night. It is the opinion of the Trades Council that the advertisement for bids for the new Evergreen Avenue School was drawn up in a misleading manner and the wording would seem to indicate that the plans were on file in the New York offices of Wilder and White, the architects, and not in the City High School building as stated by Clerk Conger, of the local Board. Because it was stated that the local contractors would have to go to New York to view the plans the Building Trades Council, at a recent meeting, rose in revolt against the supposed injustice to local bidders. This action caused a reply from the clerk of the School Board claiming that the plans had always been on file here but nothing could be unearthed in the advertisement substantiating this contention.

It was stated at the meeting last night that if the contract goes to an out of town bidder or is lower than Plainfield contractors could do the work for and make a reasonable profit the Building Trades Council will call a public mass meeting at which time the matter will be thoroughly inquired into. The consensus of opinion among the mechanics who form this organization seems to be that Plainfield needs schools but the $100,000 set aside as an appropriation for the Evergreen avenue institution, should be divided into two lumps of $50,000 and two schools erected. The opinion prevails that the Netherwood section is also in need of a school building and that if the $100,000 appropriation is sunk in the one building, a similar sum will probably have to be paid out by the city next year for a Netherwood school. One of the members claimed, and his contention was corroborated by other mechanics, that Plainfield contractors could do the work just as cheap as out of town bidders if the specifications did not place certain restrictions on the particular brands of materials to be used. This is classed as an unnecessary provision and it has aroused some adverse criticism locally.

William H. Lunger, agent for the Building Trades, has been appointed to serve on one of the committees for the relief of the unemployed and was given full authority to carry out whatever he saw fit to do with the co-operation of the Council last night.

Tonight they were all sharing the aloofness from the time, an aloofness which she herself had known for years. All save Jenny. To Jenny's house, in defiance of that dog eared paper in the postoffice, Christmas had come. Not a Christmas of "present trading," not a Christmas of things at all, but Christmas. Unto them a child was born.

"Jenny's the only one in this town that's got a real Christmas," thought Mary on her way to meet her own little guest.

The Simeon Buck North American Dry Goods Exchange was dark, too, and from its cave of window the gray St. Nicholas looked out, bearing his flag—and he tonight an idle, mummy thing of no significance. The Abel Ames General Merchandise Emporium was closed, but involuntarily Mary stopped before it. In its great plate glass window a single candle burned. She stood for a moment looking.

"Why, that's what they do some places to let the Christ child in," Mary thought. "I wonder if Abel knows. How funny—for a store!"

Some one whom she did not know passed her and looked too.

"Kind o' nice," said the other.

"Real nice," Mary returned and went on with a little glow.

At Mis' Moran's house on the other side of the square the children were waiting for her—Bennet and Gussie and Tab and Pep and little Emily. They ran before Mary in the road, all save little Emily, who walked, clasping Mary's hand.

"Aren't you staying up late, Emily?" Mary asked her.

"Yes," assented the child contentedly.

"Won't you be sleepy?" Mary pursued.

"I was going to stay awake anyhow," she said. "I ain't goin' sleep all night. We said so. We're goin' stay 'wake and see Santa Claus go by."

"Go by?" Mary repeated.

"Yes," the child explained. "You don't think that'll hurt, do you?" she asked anxiously. "And then," she pursued, "if we don't see him we'll know he's dead everywhere else too. An' then we're goin' bury him tomorrow morning up to Gussie's house."

At the station no one was yet about. Utter peace was there, not the primeval peace that is negation, but a silence that listened.

"While shepherds watched their flocks by night, all seated on the ground," Mary thought and looked along the horizon hill. The time needed an invocation from some one who watched, as many voices through many centuries had made invocation on Christmas eve. For a moment, looking over the lonely white places where no one watched, as no one—save only Jenny—watched in the town, Mary forgot the children.

The shoving and grating of baggage truck wheels recalled her. Just beyond the bay window she saw little Emily lifted to the truck and the four others follow and the ten heels dangle in air.

"Now!" said Pep. And a chant arose:

"'Twas the night before Christmas when all through the house
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse.
The stockings were hung by the chimney with care
In the hope that St. Nicholas soon would be there."

Upborne by one, now by another, now by all three voices, the verses went on unto the end. And it was as if not only Tab and Pep and Bennet and Gussie and little Emily were chanting, but all children who had ever counted the days to Christmas and had found Christmas the one piece of magic that is looked on with kindness by a grownup world. The magic of swimming holes, for example, is largely a forbidden magic; the magic of loud noises, of fast motion, of living things in pockets, of far journeys, of going off alone, of digging caves, of building fires, of high places, of many closed doors, words, mechanisms, foods, ownerships, manners, costumes, companions and holidays are denied them. But in Christmas their affinity for mystery is recognized, encouraged, gratified, annually provided for. The little group on the baggage truck chanted their watch over a dead body of Christmas, but its magic was there, inviolate. The singsong verses had almost the dignity of lyric expression, of the essence of familiarity with that which is unknown. As if, because humanity had always recognized that the will to Christmas was greater than it knew, these words had somehow been made to catch and reproduce, for generations, some faint spirit of the midwinter mystery.

The bus rattled up to the platform and Buff Miles leaped down and blanketed his horses, talking to them as was his wont.

So, holly and mistletoe,
So, holly and mistletoe,
So, holly and mistletoe,
Over and over and over, oh!

he was singing as he came round the corner of the station.

"It ain't Christmas yet," he observed defensively to Mary. "It ain't forbid except for Christmas day, is it?"

He went and bent over the children on the truck.

"Look alive as soon as you can do it," Mary heard him say to them and wondered.

She stood looking up the track. Across the still fields, lying empty and ready for some presence, came flashing the point of flame that streamed from the headlight of the train. The light shone out like a signal flashed back to the star standing above the town.

CHAPTER XIII.

Christmasing.

TEN minutes after Mary Chavah had left her house every window was lighted, a fire was kindled in the parlor and neighbors came from the dark and fell to work at the baskets they had brought.

It was marvelous what homely cheer arose. The dining room table, stretched at its fullest length and white covered, was various with the yellow and red of fruit and salads, the golden brown of cake and rolls and the mosaic of dishes. The fire roared in the flat topped stove on whose "wings" covered pans waited, and everywhere was that happy stir and touch and lift, that note of preparation which informs a time as sunshine or music will strike its key.

The Light Shone Out Like a Signal.

"My land, the oven—the warming oven! Mary ain't got one. However will we keep the stuff hot?" Mis' Winslow demanded. "What time is it?"

"We'd ought to had my big coffeepot. We'd ought to set two going. I dunno why I didn't think of it," Mis' Moran grieved.

"Well," said Mis' Mortimer Bates, "when the men get here—if they ever do get here—we'll send one of 'em off somewheres for the truck we forgot. What time is it?"

"Here comes a whole cartload of folks," Mis' Moran announced. "I hope and pray they've got the oysters—they'd ought to be popped in the baking oven a minute. What time did you say it is?"

"It's twenty minutes past 7," Mis' Winslow said, pushing her hair straight back regardless of its part, "and we ain't ready within 'leven hundred miles."

"Well, if they only all get here," Mis' Bates said, ringing golden and white stuffed eggs on Mary's blue platter. "It's their all being here when she gets here that I want. I ain't worried about the supper—much."

"The road's black with folks," Mis' Moran went on. "I'm so deadly afraid I didn't make enough sandwiches. Oh, I dunno why it wasn't given me to make more, I'm sure!"

"Who's seeing to them in the parlor? Who's getting their baskets out here? Where they finding a place for their wraps? Who's lighting the rest of the lamps? What time is it?" demanded Mis' Winslow, cutting her cakes.

"Oh," said Mis' Bates from a cloud of brown butter about the cooking stove, "I dunno whether we've done right. I dunno but we've broke our word to the Christmas paper. I dunno whether we ain't going to get ourselves criticised for this as never folks was criticised before."

Mis' Winslow straightened up from the table and held out a hand with fingers frosting tipped.

"Well," she said, with a great period, "if we have broke our word to the Christmas paper I'd rather stand up here with my word broke this way than with it kept so good it hurt me. Is it half past 7 yet?"

"I wish Ellen Bourne was here," Mis' Bates observed. "She sent her salad dressing over and lent her silver and her Christmas rose for the table, but come she would not. I wonder if she couldn't come over now if we sent after her last minute?"

Simeon Buck, appearing a few minutes later at the kitchen door to set a basket inside, was dispatched for Ellen Bourne, the warming oven and the coffee pot collectively. He took with him Abel Ames, who was waiting for him without. And it chanced that they knocked at the Bournes' door just after Ben Helders had driven away with the little boy, so that the men found the family still in the presence of the little tree.

"Hello!" said Simeon, aghast. "Christmassing away all by yourselves, I'll be bound, like so many thieves! I rec'lect not seeing your names on the paper."

"No, I didn't sign," Ellen said. "I voted against it that night at the town meeting, but I guess nobody heard me."

"Well," said Simeon, "and so here you've got a Christmas of your own going forward, neat as a kitten's foot"—

"Ain't you coming over to Mary Chavah's?" Abel broke in with a kind of gentleness. "All of you?"

Of Interest to Women and the Home

"Now listen," said Mr. Turkey.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

What the Turkey Gobbler Knew About Thanksgiving.

"'I'LL tell you all about it,' said Mr. Turkey Gobbler, strutting proudly about the barnyard.

"'I shouldn't think you'd like to when you know you're going to be killed and roasted and eaten on Thanksgiving day,' said Mrs. Brown Hen as she sat on the fence and gazed pensively at Mr. Turkey Gobbler.

"'Well,' said Mr. Turkey Gobbler, 'because you know you're going to die some time doesn't make you like your corn any the less today, does it?'

"'N-no,' admitted sedate Mrs. Brown Hen. 'But then, you see, I don't know when I'm going to be sacrificed, and you do.'

"'Oh, well,' replied Mr. Turkey Gobbler, 'I'm proud to be chosen for Farmer Gray's Thanksgiving dinner. That means I'm the finest turkey in the bunch.'

"'Much you'll know about it when you get stuffed and popped into the oven and re-roasted,' spluttered Mrs. Brown Hen.

"'Well, I'm getting a heap of attention now that I do know about it,' gobbled Mr. Turkey Gobbler, 'and I know a lot of things that I'll tell you if you can stop your noise long enough to listen.'

"'Cut cut, cut cut!' said Mrs. Brown Hen, preening her brown feathers and too angry to say anything further.

"'Now, listen,' said Mr. Turkey Gobbler to all the fowls in the barnyard. 'This Thanksgiving day that you hear so much about is really a heritage for these humans from the time of Moses.

"'Moses was a very wise man, and one of his directions to the Israelites was that they should observe the feast of the tabernacles seven days after the harvest—that is, they should give thanks to the great Giver of all things.

"'The pilgrims were a very religious people and, of course, read the Bible a good deal, so they knew about this old Mosaic law.

"'After a terrible struggle the pilgrims were rewarded the autumn after their landing at Plymouth rock with a bountiful harvest; so, of course, it was natural that these pilgrims should think of this old Mosaic direction and follow it themselves with feastings and games and praises to God.

"'This first Thanksgiving was in 1621, the year after the Mayflower came over from England. The old Mosaic thanksgiving was two months earlier in the year than ours.

"'And now you'll be eaten at this last Thanksgiving,' said Mrs. Brown Hen, who had just taken her head from under her wing.

"'Gobble!' said Mr. Turkey Gobbler."

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Dear Marjorie: I am in my study, way up under the eaves. The low windows give me a fine view. As I sit at my desk I can see the dead leaves in frantic flight up the street, pursued by that booming roisterer, the wind. The tree tops are so near me that I am forming an intimate acquaintance with them, and, of course, loving them as never before.

"I come up here every morning promptly at 9 and stay until 11. I let nothing interfere, for if a housekeeper once begins to make exceptions she is lost. I always got to school on time and I make this just as obligatory.

Well, I will unhitch the horse from the back of the cart and take him around to his proper place and tell you what I am doing up here in my attic study. Take a firm hold of yourself for I do not want you to fall or faint. I AM WRITING A BOOK. There! the murder is out.

You know you said when you sent congratulations on my marriage that you did not see how anyone who loved teaching as I seemed to could ever be happy without it. You also know there are very few books on kindergarten plans and as I excelled in original plans I have decided to rush into print. There are to be several books, that is, if everything goes right: a book on kindergarten music and one on games. There is nothing like being ambitious.

When my books come out—how literary that sounds—I shall take any money I make and invest it in mortgages in my name and—this is another secret—I mean to put it in the little home we are planning to build. We have the most delightful plans drawn.

Now that I have the weighty secret off my mind, I must tell you something about myself and my home. It is nearly a year since I was married and such a happy year as it has been. I suppose you are prepared for the statement that Hadley is the dearest man alive. Every day I discover some new possibility of happiness with him, that I never dreamed of before. I wonder if many couples share every thought, and are married in every part of their natures. Some women I know are mental widows, some religious widows. They must live certain phases of their lives alone. I am a widow in nothing.

Besides my married happiness I have the time to do so many things I always longed to do, but never could get time for. They are so many that I have to be very systematic to accomplish anywhere near all of them now.

I see it is nearly 11 o'clock, and I must go down and get dinner. This is absolutely the first letter I have written in study hours, so you may feel complimented.

Write soon, or, better still, come and see the home and meet Hadley. Believe me, you miss a great deal in not knowing him. Your friend,

FRANCES.

The recent variations of the basque give little evidence of the original severity of that garment and here is a charming one with sash extensions that is really ideal for the dressy afternoon costume.

Charmeuse or liberty satin would be handsome for a waist to be worn over a skirt of serge or fancy silk or, for dressy occasions, over a braided skirt of chiffon or crepe de chine.

For the medium size the basque will require four and five-eighths yards of

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

To Keep Furs From Soiling Collars and Neck—Every woman knows how hard it is to keep a lace collar clean while wearing fur next to it. Get three-fourths yard lace five inches deep. Shirr this one inch from edge onto a tape as large around as the top of your fur collar or fur piece. Sew five snap fasteners on tape and the other part of fasteners on inside of fur piece, so when snapped together the lace stands up like a little ruching around the neck. It is just a few moments' work to take it out and wash it and it keeps your collars clean.

THE TABLE

Butter Cream Filling—Two cups powdered sugar, one-half cup butter creamed; thin with three tablespoons sweet cream. Flavor. Chopped nuts improve it.

Fowl Bread Dressing—Take a loaf of stale white bread, soak in water until soft, then squeeze dry. Put three raw eggs in bread and season with salt and pepper. Chop small stalk of celery, one-fourth of an onion, giblets and liver of fowl, then fry till golden brown in two tablespoons fat, mix it thoroughly into bread and put filling into fowl.

To Roast a Pig—Thoroughly clean pig, then rinse it in cold water, wipe dry, rub inside with a mixture of salt, pepper and sage. For stuffing, cut wheat bread in slices half an inch thick, spread butter on to half its thickness, sprinkle with salt, pepper and onion. Pour enough hot water over bread to make it soft, then fill the body with it and sew up. Roast about fifteen minutes for each pound of meat. When done, dredge a little flour into the gravy, boil up once. Boil heart and liver tender, chop fine, and add to gravy.

Pigeons on Nest—Boil some yellow macaroni until swelled out and tender, then cut it in pieces the length of a finger and lay them on a dish like a straw nest. Truss pigeons with the heads on (having scalded and picked them clean) and, having stewed them, arrange them as in a nest, pour the gravy over and serve. The nest may be made of boiled rice or bread cut in pieces the length and thickness of a finger and fried a nice brown in hot lard, seasoned with pepper and salt. Or make it of bread toasted a yellow brown. Any small birds may be stewed or roasted and served in this way.

Apple Dressing for Duck—Take six sour apples, peel, quarter, cover with water, cook until about half done; add one cup bread crumbs, a little sage, an onion sliced very thin and a pinch of cayenne pepper. Mix together and fill duck.

Apple Salad—Peel and core one apple for each person and stew gently in syrup made of one cup sugar, two cups water and one-half cup red cinnamon candies (old-fashioned ones). When able to pierce apples with a fork they are done. Chill in the syrup and serve on a lettuce leaf with spoonful of whipped cream on top. Very pretty and can be served as a dessert without the lettuce.

Spiced Beets—Cook beets until tender, peel and slice (not too thin). Take one and one-half pints each of vinegar and water, one cup white sugar, one cup brown sugar, one teaspoon each of cinnamon, cloves and allspice tied in thin cloth loosely. Boil all together down to one-half the amount and pour over beets. Can or keep covered up in jars. Makes two quarts.

Inexpensive Dinner Dish—For a family of four purchase two and one-half pounds pork chops or the same amount of veal. Stew until tender, season with pepper, salt and milk; thicken the gravy; then place meat in a pan, fill half full of the gravy (make a generous supply), cover with a nice biscuit crust and bake. Nearly as good as chicken and so much cheaper.

COMPLETE HIGH SCHOOL ADDITION

John S. Dahl Being Congratulated on Execution of Big Contract.

ALL CONDITIONS MET

B. F. Tallamy & Bro., Masons, Also Complimented for Their Part of Work—Creditors of Exner & Co. to Get Substantial Dividends.

John S. Dahl, the well known local contractor, is being congratulated by his friends today on the sucessful completion of the High School addition; the general contract for which, it will be recalled, he took over last spring, following the failure of the P. J. Exner Company, who had the original contract.

Messrs. Wilder & White, the architects, have just issued their certificate for the greater part of the balance due under the contract and this will probably be passed upon by the Board of Education at its regular monthly meeting held tonight at the High School building.

While final acceptance of and full payment for the work is not under the terms of the contract due for another thirty days, the building itself is substantially completed.

In carrying the work through under the difficulties always present when an unfinished contract of this size is taken over by a new contractor, Mr. Dahl has done a piece of work which, it is believed, will increase his personal and business reputation in this city. When the Exner Company failed, many persons were of the opinion that it was an impossible task for any contractor to complete the building sufficiently to permit its use when school opened last September. Mr. Dahl, who was the lowest of the three local contractors selected by the creditors of the Exner Company to complete the job, not only met this condition, but contrary to all expectations, had the auditorium in condition to hold the commencement exercises last June.

Since September 15th, the new addition has been in constant use, though, as is always the case, a number of minor details required considerable time to finish up.

Closely associated with Mr. Dahl in this work is the firm of B. F. Tallamy & Brother, in whose capable hands was placed the mason work of the building. Their work at the High School has been up to the high standard which has made for them their reputation as skillful and trustworthy builders.

It is stated on good authority, that the local creditors of the Exner Company will receive a very substantial dividend on their claims when the accounts between the Board of Education and the Exner Company are settled. This is very largely due to the work of the local contractors in completing the building as quickly and economically as possible.

The final cost to the Board of Education for the building will be no greater than if the original contractor had finished the job. If there is any variation it will be in favor of the Board who have insisted that any proposal for finishing the work must not exceed its cost as originally contracted.

MANY ENTRIES RECEIVED.

William J. HEAVY BAIL FIXED FOR CARMAN RITZO

Troublesome Italian Committed to Await the Action of the Grand Jury.

Arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning, charged with assaulting several young women and with making a general nuisance of himself in the Netherwood section of the city, Carman Ritzo, an Italian, was held in $1,000 bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury. The man was arrested after a careful investigation by Sergeant Maurice Higgins and before being committed to the county jail, yesterday, in default of the bail bond, he broke down under a "third degree" and admitted his culpability.

Prominent people in Netherwood have become greatly incensed over the offenses committed by the foreigner and several appeared to press the charge against him Saturday afternoon in the event that his counsel, Robert Newton Crane, elected to demand an examination.

Ritzo appears to be afflicted with a peculiar mania for "picking" wives. Several weeks ago he inserted an advertisement in the local papers for a wife and getting no response he sent communications offering to marry prominent women and girls in the East End. It is said that he furnished a house and had everything in readiness for the reception of his prospective bride. At one time the Italian was employed as an orderly in Muhlenberg Hospital.

Captain Nimrod Baulsir, aged 80 years, who was a pilot for the East River Ferry Company for fifty-eight years, died last night at his home on Terrill road, Fanwood, where he had been living a retired life for some time. Death was due to advancing age and complications. Captain Baulsir was a former resident of Brooklyn, where he was widely known during his long service as a pilot in and around New York harbor.

Captain Caulsir resigned his position when the Roosevelt Street Ferry went out of commission a few years ago, and his since lived in retirement. He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Henry Marston, Miss Jennie Baulsir, Miss Augusta Baulsir and a son, William S. Baulsir.

The funeral will be held at the late home at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening and will be in charge of Rev. J. Madison Hare. The interment will be in Cedar Grove cemetery, Flushing, L. I., Wednesday morning.

RUSSELL VAIL GIVEN A BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

Russell Vail, of 1126 West Sixth street, was given an enjoyable surprise, Saturday night, in honor of his twenty-third birthday anniversary. He was summoned by telephone to the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Eden Bennett, who resides across the street from his own home, on the pretext that he was wanted on a matter of business. On arriving there he was given the "Ha, ha" by fifty friends who had assembled to help him celebrate his natal day. The surprise was complete in every detail, but Mr. Vail was equal to the occasion and helped to entertain his well-wishers.

Several hours were passed with an informal program of cards, music and dancing, after which supper was served. Mr. Vail received numerous appropriate gifts as mementoes of the occasion. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Vail and her sister, Mrs. Gansvoort VanAlstyne, and was gathering included friends from Westfield, Cranford, Roselle, Dunellen and Bound Brook.

RECEPTION AND DINNER.

The choir and ushers of St. Mary's church will be given the annual reception and informal spread in the Social Hall, this evening, by Father Bernard M. Bogan, in recognition of their faithful services during the year. Owing to the fact that so many tickets have been sold for the euchre on Thursday night, it has been decided to hold this event in the Parochial School hall.

CHURCH GREETS ITS NEW PASTOR

Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson Well Received at Park Ave. Baptist Church.

IMPRESSIVE SERMONS

Preacher Shows Deep Earnestness as He Seeks Co-operation of People in His Labors Here—Outlook Bright for Church.

The Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, formerly of Atlantic City, yesterday preached his first sermon as pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church. In spite of the downpour of rain and sleet throughout the day, good-sized audiences greeted the new pastor, both morning and evening, and the disagreeable elements on the outside were completely forgotten in the warmth of good feeling that was manifested at the services.

An impressive feature marked the morning service, when, at the close of the Bible School session, at the request of the superintendent, Willard M. Maxim, the entire main school and elementary department marched into the church auditorium to the accompaniment of "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Dr. Hudson in the morning gave just such a talk to his people as a church would be most apt to hear from its new pastor; a talk that convinced the entire membership of his

FREE LUNCH FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

Another Step Taken in Plan to Assist Committee on Relief Work.

Another step in the plan of relief for the unemployed of the city has been taken in accepting Mrs. Herbert E. Parker's offer, as chairman of the lunch committee in charge of the penny lunches in the local schools, to furnish bread and nutritious soups to children of the Bryant, Lincoln and Franklin Schools, where they are unable to pay for the same. Of course, all who can afford to pay are expected to do so.

The citizens' committee named by Mayor Percy H. Stewart, has engaged Miss Skillman, who will be at the rooms of the Charity Organization every day and to whom all applications for relief and work must be made. Councilman Charles C. Graves has been appointed a committee of one to co-operate with Miss Skillman and give her such assistance as may be possible from time to time.

Former Overseer-of-the-Poor Henry L. DeForest has also offered his services and will co-operate with the city poor department in its relief work. It has been suggested to property-owners that this is a good time of the year to have yards cleaned up, painting and other odd jobs attended to and thus the plan of giving relief may be extended to a considerable degree.

PAID FATHER'S FINE WITH XMAS SAVINGS

Child's Santa Claus Fund Used by Mother to Get Crap Shooter Out.

Fifteen colored gamblers, shooting for big stakes, were taken by surprise at 1 o'clock yesterday morning by four local coppers in a house located at 530 West Third street, the minions swooping down on the gang before the "bones" had stopped spinning on one roll. The entrance of the coppers was a signal for a wild scramble and they fled in all directions, the policemen grabbing the ones they could lay their hands on and the others being rounded up this morning Roundsmen Charles Flynn and Andrew Saffron, and Patrolmen Matt Vanderweg and James Saunders conducted the raid and succeeded in putting to rout a crowd that has been under police ssurveillance for some time past.

Arraigned in the city court this morning, Albert Rogers, the keeper of the house, was fined $25, and William Branch, of 514 West Fourth street; Charles and Irving Cassett, of 520 West Third street, and William Hooper, of 522 East Third street, were sentenced to pay fines of $5 or serve twenty days in the county jail. Waverly Carter, of 542 West Seventh street; Thomas and Roy Johnston, of 541 West Third street, were let go because of previous good records. Several are still at liberty and will be rounded up today.

Rogers, who is the proprietor of the place, has been taken in similar raids on several previous occasions and readily admitted his culpability in the city court this morning, as did also the other men who were fined. All paid their fines and were released this afternoon.

Hooper's wife was in court when sentence was passed on her husband, and as he was being led back to the cell she departed to get the wherewithal to get the man out. She returned in a few minutes with a child's bank and breaking open the little safe she counted out one hundred nickels, adding that it was a child's savings for the year in the anticipation of the coming of Santa Claus.

YALE DRAMATIC ASS'N ON HOLIDAY TOUR

Will Visit Plainfield on New Year's Eve, Presenting Four One-act Plays.

The Yale Dramatic Association, which will visit the Plainfield Theatre, Thursday evening, December 31, is unique among amateur acting organizations. Founded in 1901 to provide an outlet for the dramatic talent of the university, it has never varied from its policy of presenting "worth while" plays in place of the musical farce style of entertainment usually affected by college troupes. On its annual holiday tours and in its open air campus performances the association has given with great popular success some of the best plays in dramatic history. By maintaining a high standard of acting and staging the association has been able to play to uniformly large audiences all over the country and now has a substantial foundation for a fund to build a university theatre.

The Yale players will present on their two weeks' holiday tour a bill made up of four one-act plays, all chosen primarily for their power to interest and amuse. They are: "St. Bartholomew's Eve," by F. W. Tuttle, a romance; "The Ghost of Jerry Bundler," a story, by W. W. Jacobs and Charles Rock; "Behind the Beyond," a dramatic adaptation from Stephen Leacock, and "The Stranger," a tragedy, by A. F. Jenks.

AWFUL LOSS OF LIFE IN STRUGGLE IN WHICH 500,000 MEN ARE REPORTED TO HAVE PARTICIPATED —BOMBS HIT BRESLAU.

TURKISH CRUISER STRIKES MINE IN BLACK SEA

Hamidish Said to Have Reached Port Badlly Damaged—Servians Evacuated Belgrade Voluntarily—Rome Hears That When German Fleet Leaves Kiel Canal Austrian Ships Will Leave Pola Harbor.

London, Dec. 7.—Following their taking of Lodz, which the Germans say occurred yesterday, the Germans are making a direct drive against the Russian forces, in an effort to reach Warsaw, and General Von Hindenburg's army is reported to be within thirty miles of the latter city, the capital of Poland. Every report received indicates that in the terrific fighting of the past week, the Germans have finally been successful, and are now desparately fighting their way through the Russian front. It is said a half million men were involved in the Lodz struggle and the slaughter was terrific.

The city was occupied after severe fighting. The Germans had already purshed forward their armies to Ilow, thirty miles from Warsaw to the northwest, and to Piotrkow, far to the southwest near the Galician frontier. It thus seems that the capture of Lodz is part of the general forward movement of the German army by which they are fast straightening out their advance line along the Ilow-Lowicz-Piotrkow front, their positions already giving them command of all the strategic roads to Warsow and making their position immensely superior strategically to that of the Russians.

It is generally believed here that the Germans have been making good their forward campaign in Russian Poland for some days. Petrograd has been silent on the fighting while Germany has claimed up till yesterday the normal development of the offensive movement. Then came the official announcement in Berlin that the Germans had ocupied Lodz after a week's bombardment and that serious fighting was taking place around Piotrkow and Ilow. It is believed that the strong reinforcements that were rushed to Von Hindenburg from Belgium and Germany had their effect in the terrible fighting of the past few days.

Russian aviators reconnoitering around Breslau have dropped bombs on the city forts, according to a Petrograd despatch. It was also reported that Kaiser Wilhelm was in Breslau on Wednesday conferring with his generals, but wherever he went the Russian airmen followed him, precipitating his return to Berlin.

On the other hand the Russians, although silent regarding the Poland fighting, claim important successes around Cracow. The city and its forts are now being bombarded from the northwest, it is stated, and every effort is being made to capture the fortress at once. Officers are said to have stated that he Russian's plan is to hold the Germans in Russian Poland and to make entry into Silesia through Cracow to Breslau. It is believed that the determined effort to capture Cracow is made in carrying out this scheme.

Rome, Dec. 7(Central News Cable).—King Peter, of Servia, is in command of the first line of his army, according to an official communication issued at Nish and received here today. The communication also stated that the Servians have been enabled to resume offensive tactics against the Austrians by the arrival of reinforcements.

The official statement issued at Nish yesterday afternoon, declared that the evacuation of Belgrade was voluntary. It said the Servian authorities and troops left the capital on the evening of November 29, thirty-six hours before the entry of the Austrians. If there was any fighting it was only between rear guards and patrols.

The Stampa has received information from Jola that two German admirals have arrived in that town. It is asserted that Germany and Austria are preparing simultaneously to act with their fleets. When the German battleships leave the Kiel Canal the Austrian fleet, it is said, will come out of the harbor at Pola.

LITERARY

"More than Conquerors," is the title of an interesting story from the pen of Miss Ariadne Gilbert, of this city, which has made its appearance in book form from the press of The Century Company. The following excellent criticism is republished from The Literary Digest concerning the book.

"An excellent and invigorating collection of biographies, cordially recommended for home and school use. The title might lead one to believe that the author would rub in the moral example of her subjects, instead of which we find after a little reading that she attempts to make each person selected live before us in the midst of his or her human interest and foibles. A most graphic picture is given of Scott, and such treatment as is here practised is sure to make the young reader want to know more about the Wizard of the North. A most lovable portrait is that of Thackeray, and the same may be said of the picture of Phillips Brooks. The author displays in this little book a sympathetic touch, and we like the way she herself has read biography. In her fourteen sketches, in their selection reminding one of a Hall of Fame, she has emphasized what seems to us to be just the right details, and the purpose of the book, as noted in the introduction, is allowed to take care of itself without any forcing. As a book of collective biographies, this is one of the best examples that has come to our desk for many a year."

Mrs. Cowling, mother of George E. Cowling, of Regent street, who fell while walking on Watchung avenue on November 25, breaking her foot, is still detained at home. She is improving slowly.

ZUDORA

First Installment Tells "The Mystic Message of the Spotted Collar"

"Zudora," the widely heralded photo-play which has been put out by the Thanhauser Film Corporation as a successor to the Million Dollar Mystery, will be a weekly feature attraction at Proctor's Front street theatre, being shown each Wednesday, beginning this week. Manager Sanderson has gone to considerable expense to procure this picture for Plainfield, and he is satisfied that its unique and unusual plot will be one that will attract the widest attention of patrons of his popular vaudeville and picture house. There will be twenty episodes, of two reels each, but each installment will contain a complete story, and at the same time all will work together in such a way that they will proceed, like a novel, toward the final climax.

Marguerite Snow as Zudora in Zudora, Thanhouser's Greatest Photoplay

The picture story was planned by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, and it has also been novelized by Harold McGrath. Marguerite Snow, who was the Countess Olga of the Million Dollar Mystery, is in this picture a winsome girl of eighteen, daughter of a miner and circus acrobat. James Cruze is the long haired Hindu mystic, Hassam Ali, Zudora's uncle, and Harry Benham plays John Storm, her lawyer lover.

"Reel Life," in a recent issue, printed a synopsis of the first episode, which will be shown on Wednesday night, and which is entitled "The Mystic Message of the Spotted Collar." At the opening Hassam Ali, the mystic, uncle and guardian of the eighteen-year-old beauty, Zudora, sits by the fire in his handsome home. Events of seventeen years before pass in review, as in a dream, before him. He sees himself once more the side show fakir and fortune teller with the circus. He sees his sister, the tight rope walker with that same circus, coddling the infant Zudora. The circus has just returned to the mining town where his sister's husband, Zudora's father, has been prospecting for gold. The little family is reunited, and events move quickly, for that afternoon the baby's father discovers unlimited gold in the Zudora mine—his mine and named after his baby. Mad with happiness he becomes over excited, sets off a blast too soon, and is killed. They tell his wife, the baby's mother, just as she is about to walk the tight rope, and she, too, attempting to do her circus ring stunt, becomes dizzy, and falls to her death.

All these scenes Hassam Ali sees repeated in his dream. He wakes, and, waking, remembers how the baby's father with his last breath and willed the mine, worth $20,000,000, to his daughter, Zudora, to become her property absolutely, when she reached her eighteenth birthday. In the event of her death, however, it was to go to the next heir at law. Hassam Ali, her nearest kin and thus the beneficiary in the event of her death, with stealthy cunning plans to get the mine's twenty million for his own.

The wonderful photography in the handling and taking of the figure of Hassam Ali sleeping by the fireplace, while scene after scene passes by him in review, is said to be remarkable. Seldom, if ever, has such clever double exposure work been recorded. The setting shifts. Hassam Ali is seen staring into the crystal where, written large, appears the word Zudora. He is startled, but he is also determined. His one fear is caused by the advent of the young lawyer, John Storm, in the life of his niece and ward, Zudora. He has never told her of the inheritance that will be hers when she's eighteen. That will help. And he recognizes also that he must under no circumstances be implicated in the girl's removal.

Leading her lover by the hand, Zudora comes to Hassam Ali. "This is John Storm, and I love him," she says ingenuously. "And I love your niece," Storm tells Hassam. Stiff armed, Hassam Ali pushes the young attorney from him. "Go! go!" he cries, and to Zudora he says: "You have always been interested in my mystical work, you have shown your ability, you have begged me to let you help, when detective cases were brought to me to solve. Now you may have your chance. The next twenty cases that come to me I will give to you to solve. If you solve them you may have this man, John Storm. If you fail you must renounced him forever. That is what I have decided."

It was, indeed, what he, Hassam Ali, had decided. He had hit upon this plan as the one safe and sure way of getting rid of Zudora without involving himself in any way, and it so happened that John Storm himself was the accused in the next case brought to Hassam Ali to be unraveled. Storm had been defending a case for the city. Opposed to him was a prominent lawyer named Bienreith, and the case became so interesting that the newspapers began featuring it. Storm had even had one of these papers in his hand when he came to claim Zudora from Hassam Ali. He was dumbfounded when his sweetheart's uncle denounced him, and turned him away from the house. He did not know that he represented the very chance Hassam Ali had been awaiting for eighteen years.

After Storm has gone from the house, stoop shouldered, and for the moment disheartened, events move quickly across the screen. The illuminating acting, the clear photography, and the splendid arrangement of this reel will hold the audience spellbound. Storm is seen to slay Bienreith's face in the courtroom after the latter has made a particularly insulting speech. "Meet me tonight at midnight—only one of us shall survive." That is written on the sheet slipped across the attorney's table. Storm goes home. Alone in his home he practices with his revolver, between shots sipping a glass of water.

Harry Benham the Hero in Zudora, Thanhouser's Greatest Photoplay

"Only one of us shall survive. That tell-tale sheet of paper is found by a reporter. An hour later the newspapers are full of the approaching duel. Zudora reads. Fearful that her sweetheart may be shot Zudora, as soon as she reads the news, determines to prevent the duel. Putting a harmless but potent drug in her reticule, she goes on to Storm's home, where she finds him practicing with his revolver. Into his glass of drinking water she pours the sleeping potion, and then leaves him. Too strong a man to yield to unnatural sleep without a fight he staggers into the open air and—away.

When Bienreith is found dead in his room the blame is placed on Storm. Where is John Storm? The police cannot find him. No one knows where he is. Suddenly the screen shows him staggering down a city street bare headed, wild eyed. A newsboy approaches him, studies his picture in the paper, and then points out the resemblance to a policeman, who arrests the half-crazed wanderer. Zudora, hearing of it, knows that something must be wrong, that John Storm, the man she had learned to love, never could have committed a cowardly murder, and she rushes to her uncle, Hassam Ali, and begs that she be allowed to solve this mystery.

In examining Bienreith's things Zudora discovers some pencil marks on his collar. When Storm is brought into the coutroom and formally charged with murder, she tries to explain to the court that she can clear Storm of guilt. Burns, Hassam Ali's confederate, puts a revolver against her neck, unseen by anyone. But his nerve fails him for she turns suddenly, apparently heedless of her danger, and takes a pencil from his waistcoat pocket.

The pencil marks she then makes on a slip of paper to prove her contention to the crowd startle her. There is a strange similarity between those made by Burns' pencil and those on the spotted collar, and when court is adjourned, she persuades Burns to come home with her. She takes him at once to the room of mysteries and there, amid the strange, weird lights and mystic whirligigs, she hypnotizes the man. Meanwhile she has hidden two lawyers from the court, where they can hear Burns' story. Under her influence he confesses and tells how he killed Bienreith.

The picture changes. Hassam Ali is shown in his private apartments. He opens the wall by a secret spring, and revolver in hand is shown looking down into the room of mysteries. He listens intently, ready to shoot the moment Burns shows any signs of confessing the real secret which would involve him in the crime. Maddened by the revolving lights Burns made a dash at them just before he reaches the fatal point at which Hassam Ali would have shot him. As he touches them a bolt of electricity leaps through his body. He falls to the floor dead, as the two lawyers concealed by Zudora behind the black velvet curtains, step into sight and congratulate her. "You have solved your first case," her uncle tells her, sourly.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The offering at Proctor's Theatre for the first half of this week will be headed by the musical operetta' entitled "Through Five Countries in Twenty Minutes." It is presented by the Rennes Company and features Miss Rositta Rennes, the comic opera star. The number introduces scenes from Italy, France, Holland, Egypt and America, costumes, dances and songs being appropriate to each nation. Another novelty on the bill will be "Whittier's Barefoot Boy," a single act based on John Greenleaf Whittier's famous poem. The Farrell Taylor trio, comedy variety artists; Stamp and Stamp, comedy bar experts, in their hilarious sketch, "Fun in the Barracks," and Bernard and Finnerty, comedians, complete the program. The nineteenth episode of the "Perils of Pauline" will be shown tomorrow afternoon and night and at the night performances Miss Pearl White, who posed for the "Pauline" pictures, will give a personal monologue describing her experiences while being photographed for the big feature film. The first installment of "Zudora," Thanhauser's latest serial film, will be seen at Proctor's next Wednesday. The story is told in twenty installments, each one a complete film in itself, while the aggregate builds up a puzzling mystery revealed only at the end.

JOIN THE ARMY.

For a number of years at the holiday season the Daily Press has conducted a Good Fellow movement to provide Christmas cheer for the young people, who would not have it were it not for the work done by this newspaper. The season of the year for that movement to start has again arrived, but the people of Plainfield have provided another method for doing the work in the Community Christmas plan. That means that instead of one newspaper soliciting the Good Fellows of the city, there will be an organized movement of all the Good Fellows among our residents, and the effect of the work will be more far reaching than any single newspaper, anywhere, could make it. But even with additional Good Fellows to do the work there will not be any too many, for this year, more than ever before, there are many, many more little children to be saved from a cheerless Christmas.

There are so many little boys and girls who will have nothing unless an army of Good Fellows gets busy, that every possible volunteer to aid the cause will be needed to see that none are disappointed. So the Federation of Men's Clubs is going to form an army, mobilized to make happy the children of Plainfield. The army is going to the relief of another army, one which will have no share of the Christmas joys, unless the Good Fellows army succeeds in breaking through the line of want and suffering and poverty, which hems in hundreds of young people, through no fault of their own.

We know of nothing like the joy of giving, especially that kind of giving which revives faith in life, and the unity of the human family. So we urge our readers to join the army of Good Fellows, for the enlistment is open, and all that is needed to become full fledged soldiers in the ranks is to send a contribution to the treasurer of the local Community Christmas fund. There's going to be a big increase in the army, and those who join now will have the satisfaction of knowing that they have been in the first ranks of the volunteers. Then besides, if you haven't been a Good Fellow in the past you don't realize what you've been missing all the time, and if you keep on delaying you'll wake up some morning and find out that you've got to wait a whole year before you'll have another opportunity to enlist.

If you've been in the ranks in the past, of course there's no need to say anything. You know all about it, and realize that there's nothing to compare to the joy of bringing even a day's happiness into a life that would not have even one day's pleasure without you.

Every Red Cross Christmas Seal that is sold is a real bullet in the fight against tuberculosis. These seals last year helped to support thousands of needy tuberculosis patients and to give them a chance for life. They provided for many visiting nurses, whose hundreds of thousands of visits brought instruction and cheer to numerous patients. They helped maintain dispensaries in scores of cities, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, where thousands of consumptive patients received free treatment, aid and advice. They provided the means to purchase millions of copies of circulars, pamphlets and other literature with which the public has been educated about tuberculosis. They have established and helped to maintain more than 300 open-air schools for children who need open-air treatment. These are just a few of the ways in which the $450,000 received last year was expended. This year a million dollars is needed. Surely any one can help by buying at least ten seals.

Members of Company K, Plainfield's efficient branch of the State National Guard, have begun a determined movement to secure an armory. And there is no reason why they should not have a proper place in which to drill. There are any number of separate companies in the National Guard throughout the State which have armories, and some of them are in places much smaller than this city. If the approval of the State Military Board can be procured, it should be an easy job for the local boys to get a bill through the Legislature appropriating the necessary money, for the leader of the Republican majority in the House of Assembly is a Plainfielder, and Judge Runyon will have great influence in anything he undertakes. Company K, has proven time and time again that it is one of the most efficient units in the State's citizen soldiery, and recognition should be given to that fact by the establishment of a proper home for the command.

The repainting of the Depew building on Park avenue removes the last visible reminder of one of the town's best known and oddest citizens. "What we do, we do right" no longer stares at the passerby from the building in which David J. Carney held forth for so many years.

These are the days when the members of the Hot Stove League are batting them out at a lively rate. If you don't believe it, look at the "dope" on the sporting page.

CHURCH GREETS NEW PASTOR

deep earnestness and a life hidden in Christ, giving him an intense yearning for the winning of souls. Dr. Hudson believes that the material found in the Park Avenue church can be used by the Master to accomplish great things in the spreading of the gospel and in the strengthening of this own Caristian lives, and he is looking forward to a happy co operation of the entire membership of the church in his ministry among them.

At the evening service Dr. Hudson preached a strong sermon from John 9:4, "I must work the works of Him that sent me while it is day." "The clerk," the speaker said, "feels he must reach his place of business exactly on time if he would retain his position. The student knows he must learn his lesson if he wishes to be perfect in recitation; but the soul is prompted by a higher motive, for it is conscious of its personality, its divine relationship with God. I don't know that I can bring you anything better at the beginning of my ministery than the call of Divine Love. We are in the same church with a divine objective—may the Lord lead us on to great things for Him in this place."

Pastor and people are taking up their work with marked interest and enthusiasm, for the outlook is exceedingly bright and encouraging, and all are eagerly looking forward to great activity in every department of the church.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

At the approach of the festal season, when the hearts of the old and the young rejoices, the Salvationist thinks of the unfortunate who have little if anything to bring them joy. This year as in previous years the Salvation Army wish to provide five hundred dinners to the worthy poor of Plainfield. We ask you to assist us as the need is great. MAJORITY FAVOR MORNING SESSION

First Baptist Bible School Vote Against Meeting in the Afternoon.

A GROWING TENDENCY

Superintendent A. M. Harris in Letter to Members Gives Interesting Facts Concerning Sunday Schools of Union County.

The vote just taken among the members of the Bible school of the First Baptist church, shows a substantial majority in favor of continuing the session of the school in the morning, instead of the afternoon, and the official board of the school without a dissenting vote has decided to try the morning session until rally day next fall. Arthur M. Harris, superintendent of the school, who has notified each member through a personal letter of the decision, states that the board was governed not only by the vote of the school, but by the fact that there is a growing tendency toward the morning session hour. One of the strongest arguments in support of this plan is, Mr. Harris says, that the session should be held at an hour when the school can adjourn from one church session to the other. "We are strongly of the opinion that the members of our school should make every effort to attend the church service," says Mr. Harris, "and also that the church members should endeavor to be present at the Bible study session of the church." Mr. Harris in his letter to the members of the school then adds: "For your own information you will be interested in the following statistics:

"In our own (Union) county there are 41 afternoon schools and 58 schools having the morning or noon session. The membership of the afternoon schools is 6,203 and of the others 12,597. The average membership of the afternoon schools is 147 and the others 198.

"Probably many of our members who favor the afternoon session are of the opinion that a larger percentage of the members attend where the session is held in the afternoon than where it is held in the morning or immediately after the church. Very generally throughout the State this is not true, and in Union county 67-59 100 per cent. of the members attend the morning or noon session, whereas only 61-54 100 per cent. of the members attend the afternoon session.

"In Elizabeth the average membership of the afternoon schools is 182 and the others 259. The average attendance in the morning or noon schools is 16 per cent. higher than in the afternoon schools.

"In Westfield the average membership of the morning or noon schools is 253. The afternoon 63. The average attendance in the afternoon is a little less in percentage than the morning or noon schools.

"My reason for giving this information is that you may know what other schools are doing, for I am sure our members will be able to make as creditable a showing as other schools in Plainfield and Union county.

"Our percentage of attendance has been small for a number of years, and we should make every effort to keep up the regularity and promptness of our attendance.

"This letter is being sent to all the members of the school and the superintendent respectfully urges that all our members try to be present on the first Sunday in December promptly at 9:45. If you come, your presence will add to the average 15 100 per cent. and on the contrary your absence will reduce the average by the same percentage. Try hard for the plus side."

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

George Evans' "Honey Boy" Minstrels, represented as "America's largest, best and only first-class minstrel organization," will be seen at the Plainfield Theatre, tonight. For this, the seventh year of the "Honey Boy" Company, George Evans has made what is promised as a notable production for this class of entertainment. A scenic environment which provides for special settings for every feature of the show, is absolutely new. The costumes are all new and striking and the songs have either been written for the production, or chosen from the season's most popular hits. The cast of principals in support of "Honey Boy" Evans embraces such well known minstrel favorites as Arthur Rigby, Sam Lee, Leroy "Lasses" White, Will Cawley, Tommy Hyde, John P. Rogers, James Meehan, William H. Thompson, Jim Doherty, Eldon Durand, Joe Wesley and Master Paul Van Dyke, the little yodler. The band and orchestra feature is again under the capable direction of Edward V. Cupero, which insures an especially attractive musical program. George Evans will be found the same unctious joker he has ever been, indeed, his admirers seem to expect that their favorite monologist will remain the same funny little figure they have learned to know and admire, but Evans has a lot of new chatter and this year finds him with a big war map and a humorous lecture on the war zone.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

"KICK IN."

The New York critics hailed with delight the production, at the Longacre Theatre, of "Kick In," which they unanimously agreed to be the greatest combination of thrills and laughs seen in the Metropolis in many years. The tense, thrilling story of "Kick In," is interpreted by a remarkable cast including John Barrymore, Jane Grey, Josephine Victor and other equally famous artists. So immediate and pronounced was the hit of this play that Mr. Woods put the author, Willard Mack, under contract to write exclusively for him for the next five years.

PALACE VAUDEVILLE.

Annette Kellermann, known around the world as "The Diving Venus" and "The Perfect Woman," will return to vaudeville for a single week at B. F. Keith's Palace Theatre, beginning today, when she will give an exhibition of fancy diving. This will be Miss Kellermann's only appearance in vaudeville prior to her appearance in a new play being written by Anne Caldwell. Bessie Clayton, with her dance offering, has been held over for another week. An important engagement will be the first appearance here of Miss Lillian Shaw, the vocal dialect comedienne, who is the originator of her style of entertainment. Hymack, the chameleon comedian; Bryand Cheebert's Marvelous Manchurians; Robert Emmett Keane and Muriel Window, Flanagan and Edwards and James Hussey and Jack Boyle will complete the bill.

"LIFE."

The sixth week of "Life," at the Manhattan Opera House begins today, and the 50th performance will take place on Saturday afternoon. The large auditorium is full at every presentation of what W. A. Brady appropriately calls "the world's biggest play," while for many of the performances the applicants for admission are far in excess of the theatre's holding capacity. It now seems a settled thing that "Life" will run on until well toward the end of the current season, and seats already are on sale until March.

"THE GARDEN OF PARADISE."

Edward Sheldon's "The Garden of Paradise," at the Park Theatre, a specatcular dramatization of Hans Christian Andersen's fairy story, "The Little Mermaid," produced by The Liebler Co., as the most elaborate they have ever made. Perhaps one reason the success of "The Garden of Paradise" is the fact that Joseph Urban has designed the scenery. Urban's poetic and classic sympathy with the imaginative opportunities of the theatre have been well tested. O. P. Heggie was especially engaged in London to make the production of "The Garden of Paradise" and he fell into the original line which Urban and Edward Sheldon started for him. Much of the credit of this wonderful theatrical novelty is due to Mr. Heggie's sympathy with its imaginative character.

ELKS' MEMORIAL SERVICES

yon. He commented on the characteristic quarities of each of the eighteen members of the local lodge who have passed away since the fraternal order was instituted in this city, having a thorough acquaintance with the peculiarities of each of the deceased, Mr. Runyon brought back to his brother members a vivid realization of those who once attended similar memorial services, but who have now passed into the great beyond.

Those whose names were brought back to the assemblage and the date of their death were: Daniel Detweiler, April 8, 1906; Herbert S. Taylor, April 16, 1906; Robert L. Thomas, July 21, 1906; Clin L. Jenkins, November 13, 1906; Herbert B. Brooks, January 8, 1907; Charles C. Burnet, February 23, 1907; Maze Edwards, July 4, 1909; Joseph W. Reinhart, January 27, 1911; William W. Winn, December 29, 1911; Alexander H. Small, January 9, 1912; John A. Lawrence, January 11, 1912; Herbert L. Overbaugh, May 17, 1912; Elmer E. Runyon, October 16, 1912; James H. Daly, January 21, 1914; David J. Carney, March 17, 1914; John H. Kitchen, April 4, 1914; Clarence T. Brokaw, April 27, 1914, and Frederick Sandford, May 11, 1914.

The Colonial Quartet, composed of Robert D. Armour, first tenor; T. Morgan Phillips, second tenor; Alexander S. Latimer, baritone, and William J. Wilson, basso, rendered a number of pleasing selections during the evening, and orchestra music under the direction of B. A. Fraunbek, a member of the local lodge, were also enjoyed. The assisting artist was Miss Marie Adele Hays, a soprano soloist, and she was accompanied at the piano by Daniel Wolf.

Mr. Donellan, in his address, commented at length on the widespread influence of the Elks' order in all parts of the world, giving many instances to illustrate the good accomplished by the fraternal spirit. He urged a brotherly union and individual co-operation to make the police of the lodge felt in every State and country and telling how one brother has come to the rescue of another in distress. He told of the vast range for the accomplishment of good that is opens to members, and declared that each should avail himself of the opportunities to do another a brotherly turn.

The Rev. Frank Fletcher acted as chaplain. The stage on which was seated the speakers and officers of the lodge was attractively decorated with palms and ferns, which lent an impressive appearance to the gathering.

The program included the following numbers: Prelude, by the orchestra; quartet selection, "Still, Still With Thee;" hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee;" soprano solo, "God of Love," by Miss Marie Adele Hays, accompanied at the piano by Daniel Wolf; quartet selection, "The Vacant Chair;" responses by officers of the lodge; tenor solo; opening ode; invocation; soprano solo, "Come Unto Him;" memorial address by J. Power Donellan; interlude by the orchestra; quartet selection, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought;" eulogistic remarks, by Past Exalted Ruler William N. Runyon; soprano solo, "Holy Father;" closing ceremonies, quartet selection, "Lead Kindly Light;" hymn, "Abide With Me;" benediction; doxology; postlude, by the orchestra.

The officers of the Plainfield lodge are: Exalted ruler, Frank H. Smith; esteemed leading knight, Alfred A. Frudhon; esteemed loyal knight, Joseph P. Burd; esteemed lecturing knight, Walter S. Marder; secretary, William R. Townsend; treasurer, Harry B. MacDonald; esquire, Fred G. Lynn; chaplain, Dr. Chalmers L. Crist, inner guard, Mefford R. Giles; tyler, Edward C. Searing; organist, James L. Pope. The trustees are James F. Buckle, Samuel P. T. Wilbur and Vincent W. Nash, Jr.

LOCOMOTIVE DRIVER HURT IN ODD WAY

Ear Drums of Edward O'Brein Split by Concussion of Whistle.

Edward O'Brien, an engineer on the New Jersey Central, whose home is in Easoon, Pa., received treatment at Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday, for a serious injury received in an unusual way. He was on the running board of his locomotive when the fireman had occasion to blow the whistle. O'Brien was in such close proximity the terrific blast split one of his ear-drums and jarred his brain so badly he almost fell unconscious.

The injured man was first assisted to a pharmacy, but he was immediately sent to the hospital when the seriousness of his trouble was discovered. The man suffered excruciating agony until afforded partial relief by physicians, after which he was removed to his home. He will return to Muhlenberg today or tomorrow for further examination and treatment. O'Brien' case is the first of its kind from such a source, the local institution has on its record.

ELIZABETH OR PHILLY.

Harry, alias "Dutch" Mallison, a well-known local character, was arrested Saturday night for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, a failing that has many times before got him into trouble. Arraigned before City Judge DeMeza, this morning, he was given the choice of spending six months in the county jail or leaving town. He set sail for "Philadelphia" on the next train.

PATROLMAN SWEENEY ILL.

Frank Sweeney, a patrolman on the local police force, has been confined to his home for the past week suffering from a severe attack of heart trouble. In a report made to Chief Kiely, this morning, Dr. Dundon, who has charge of the case, said that the policeman showed signs of slight improvement.

MIXED METAPHOR.

A Choice Bunch of "Bulls" From the House of Commons.

There is no place like the house of commons for a "nice derangement of metaphors." It will be a long time before we have a "mixture" equal to the outburst of an effusive orator who said, "The British lion, whether it is roaming the deserts of India or climbing the forests of Canada, will not draw in its horns or retire into its shell."

It recalls the famous "bull" made by Sir William Hart-Dyke, the Unionist ex-minister, who caused uproarious laughter in the house of commons one day by remarking: "The right honorable gentleman has caught big fish in his time. He has gone to the top of the tree to find them."

Alluding to an item of £2,000,000 in the army estimates one year, a certain member described it as "a flea bite in the ocean," while another, advocating an increase in the European troops employed in India, remarked, "You may depend upon it, sir, the pale face of the British soldier is the backbone of the Indian army."

An Irish member speaking of suicide said, "The only way to stop it is to make it a capital offense, punishable with death." It was the same member who assured the house that "as long as Ireland was silent under her wrongs England was deaf to her cries," while it was during a debate on the scandal of packed juries during the Irish troubles that a member in support of the government exclaimed, "By trial by jury have I lived, and, by the blessing of God, with trial by jury I will die."

There was a wild howl of delight, too, when some prosy member was careless enough to remark, "The time has come and is rapidly arriving," which is equal to the cry of the member who wished a motion was "at the bottom of the bottomless pit."—London Tit-Bits.

WHAT WAR MEANS.

Wanton Destruction May Mark the Progress of an Army.

"All is fair in love and war," runs the old saying, and Mr E. A. Vizetelly in his volume of reminiscences, "My Days of Adventure," proves the truth of it. Referring to the appearance of the railway station at Nantes during the Franco-German war, he says:

"Never since have I seen anything resembling it. A thousand panes of glass belonging to windows or roofing had been shivered to atoms. Every mirror in either waiting or refreshment rooms had been pounded to pieces, every gilt frame broken into little bits. The clock lay about in small fragments; account books and printed forms had been torn to scraps; partitions, chairs, tables, benches, boxes, nests of drawers, had been hacked, split, broken, reduced to mere strips of wood; the large stoves were overturned and broken, and the marble refreshment counter, some thirty feet long and previously one of the features of the station, now strewed the floor in particles, suggesting gravel. It was indeed an amazing sight, the more amazing as no such work of destruction could have been accomplished without extreme labor.

"When we returned to the inn for dinner I asked some questions.

"'Who did it?'

"'The first German troops that came here,' was the answer.

"'Why did they do it? Was it because your men had cut the telegraph wires and destroyed some of the permanent way?'

"'Oh, no! They expected to find something to drink in the refreshment room, and when they discovered that everything had been taken away they set about breaking the fixtures.'"

Steam Power.

The name of the first man to discover the power of steam will never be known. As early as 180 B. C., at Alexandria, Egypt, we hear of "Hero's engine," a sort of steam using engine. From the time of Hero to the seventeenth century the subject is unheard of. About 1601, Giovanni Battista del la Porta wrote a treatise on the steam engine. The great name in the history of steam and its application is James Watt, 1763.

A Wonderful Gorge.

Yosemite valley, in the southern part of the Yosemite National park, is a great gorge about seven miles long and three-fourths of a mile wide, with a level park like meadow in its center. The great cliffs which form the wall of the valley rise almost vertically to a height of about 3,000 feet, and in many places are beautiful waterfalls which have a vertical drop of from 600 to 900 feet.

Our Daughters.

"I say, dad, I've just accepted Charlie Brown. He's in the drawing room, and if you've a minute to spare you might pop in and see him and talk it over, but please be quick; we've got to rush out and see about the banns."—London Opinion.

FOUNDING DATE IS CELEBRATED

Bethel Chapel Active in Religious Work for the Past Thirty Years.

INTERESTING SERVICES

Andrew J. Gavett Reads Paper on the History of the Chapel Since 1884—Different Phases of the Work Reviewed.

Services commemorating the thirtieth anniversary of the founding of Bethel chapel were conducted yesterday, special programs being given at the morning, afternoon and evening activities. In the morning, Rev Dr. E. G. Read delivered the sermon and a special program of music was rendered. The Sunday-school exercises were in charge of Superintendent James E. Kimball, and addresses were made by Rev. J. O. McKelvey of Warren chapel; Rev. Frederic L. Greene, of Hope chapel, and Andrew J. Gavett. A history of the chapel was given by Mr. Gavett, who has been one of the most active workers since its founding.

Bethel chapel had its beginning in the Bethel Mission, which was founded December, 1884, and some years later Stephen A. Ginna started a Sunday-school for white and colored children which first met in a room at her home. At a meeting in the Crescent Avenue church November 23 1884, the renting of the little German church where the chapel now stands was authorized and the first service was held December 7, 1884.

Mr. Ginna was appointed the first superintendent and was assisted in teaching by Mrs. Ginna, Mrs. Weaver, Miss Everett, Miss DeForest and Miss Kimball. A. W. Duxbury took charge of the musical work and also acted as secretary and treasurer. Fifty-one pupils attended the first gathering. Religious services were soon inaugurated in the chapel and early in 1885 a choir of twelve voices was formed.

The property on which the chapel is located was purchased in 1885 and the first communion service was celebrated March 14, 1886, at which eleven persons were received into membership, the service being conducted by Rev. William R. Richards.

A number of ministers served the chapel from time to time, the first being Rev. William T. Carter, who preached from March 7 to November 21, 1886. Rev. Thomas Lee occupied the pulpit several times the same year, and Rev. William T. Deicker served between October 23, 1887, and January 29, 1888. The construction of a new edifice for the church was authorized in 1886 and on October 23, 1887, an offering was made in the Crescent Avenue church to make up the deficit in the fund for building the new chapel and to pay for the lot for the chapel, $3,700 being subscribed. The last service in the old building was held on November 13, 1887, and it was then moved to its new site on West Fourth street. The first meting in the new building took place November 20, 1887. The largest membership recorded by Mrs. Ginna was 276, in November, 1897.

On November 15, 1896, Rev. F. D. Tildon was engaged to take charge of the pulpit temporarily and on January 3, 1897, a call was extended to him to become the regular pastor. This continued until his resignation last month.

The death of Stephen A. Ginna, the founder of the chapel, occured January 15, 1905. Mr. Duxbury succeeded him and served until 1912.

In the evening an illustrated lecture was given by Superintendent Kimball on "The Bible."

An adjournment was granted the defendant until next Friday morning, in order that he might be able to obtain legal advice.

The fire department was called to Rock avenue and Front street about 10 o'clock last night, but found that the call was a false alarm. The person who turned in the box, that gave the department the long drive for nothing, escaped and has not yet been found.

Trade In Plainfield and Grow With Us

The growth of a city depends largely on the amount of money spent within its borders. Are YOU buying in Plainfield? Are YOU selecting our own men to do your work instead of outsiders? Are YOU helping Plainfield to grow? Ask yourself this question. Are you?

Plainfield is one of the prettiest cities in New Jersey. She can point with pride to her magnificent High School, excellent graded schools, elegant homes and beautiful streets. What have you done? If you take Plainfield money and spend it in other cities, are you helping Plainfield to grow? Spend your money home where you and your children are enjoying the splendor of our city. Do YOUR part for a better and bigger Plainfield.

—Interesting to Men--But to Women—

The question of cultivation of good taste in a home means the purchase of whatever improves the appearance, comfort and welfare of every one connected with it. The woman is the purchasing agent of the American home; keenly interested in high grade merchandise and table goodies; the kind presented by Plainfield merchants, backed by prompt courteous attention, a stock of large variety to select from, and prices that are no higher than the stores of other cities.

Trading in Plainfield is the easiest, safest, and most profitable, and when you purchase an article that is not entirely satisfactory you experience no difficulty in having it exchanged or your money refunded. On the other hand, can an article purchased in stores in these other cities afford you the same protection as our Plainfield merchants? Sometimes an article can be exchanged, but then it is necessary to have it travel 20 or 25 miles back to the store where you purchased it, and the second selection forwarded to you, and if you wern't fortunate enough to make a second selection on the day you did your shopping you are either obliged to make it from a catalog or take another trip yourself to straighten the matter out. Do your shopping in your home town and avoid any unnecessary risks or delays. Help your city to grow.

BY MORRIS MILLER

Despite their great 1914 showing, the Braves have lost 1,041 games in eleven years, which is close to an average of 100 per season. Two other National league teams, Brooklyn and St. Louis, have lost more than 1,000 games in eleven pennant races. They are closely bunched, as the Cardinals have two more victories than the Dodgers and one less defeat in the period covered. No team in the American league has been defeated 1,000 times in eleven seasons. The St. Louis Browns, who have made the poorest showing in that time, have lost 911 games, which gives them a better average than the Braves and practically as good a showing as the St. Louis and Brooklyn teams of the older league, who rank sixth and seventh in the aggregate figures. No team in the American league has shown enough continuous supremacy to win 600 per cent of the games it has played, the Athletics missing that eleven year average by a single percentage point. The Mackmen stand out many points superior to the other seven teams in their showing since the American league became a major circuit. They are more than thirty points ahead of the White Sox.

"You can say for me that Frank Chance stands forth as the biggest individual failure in the history of the American league," declared Ban Johnson in a recent interview.

"Chance had the material in New York, and I think any other man would have made a success of the venture," Ban went on. "Surely no one could have done any worse. Of all the players that were on the New York roster in 1913 and 1914, and there were any number of likely-looking recruits, Chance failed to develop even one man of class. Why, it was an outrage.

"And then when he made up his mind that he was a failure, or at least when he was ready to step down and out he had the unmitigated nerve to ask for pay for services that he had not performed. That surely was gall, to say the least. Why Roger Peckinpaugh, youth, though he is, displayed far more class as manager of the Yankees in the short time he was at the helm than Frank Chance ever did. And Chance was one of the howling successes of the National league."

Of all the players now under contract to the Boston Braves for next season—there are twenty-two of them—there is not a single recruit who is not a battery man. Four newcomers are on the list, three catchers and one pitcher, a Cuban named Luque, who twirled for the Long Branch champions of the Atlantic league this year. The catchers are Bruggy of the Lowell club in the New England league; Tyler of the Jersey City Internationals, and Tragessor of the Birmingham club of the Southern league.

Tommy Murphy's winnings in stakes and purses the last three years have totaled $230,680. This gives him first place among the Grand Circuit drivers. Walter Cox ranks second with $180,814. Pop Geers third with $130,092, and Lon McDonald fourth with $104,178. No other driver has won over $100,000 in the same length of time. Murphy, Cox and Geers have run one, two three in regard to winnings in each of the last three seasons.

Johnny Maulbetsch, Michigan's pie eating halfback, is a prominent All-American candidate for two reasons. The first is his great work against Harvard. The second is his ability to escape injuries and stay in the game. Maulby is almost cripple-proof. He required time out only a few times this year and this in spite of the fact that the huskiest men who opposed him never overlooked a chance to muss him up. He always was ready to go in and play his head off for Yost. If Splawn, Hughitt and Catlett could have done the same, Michigan probably would have made a great record this year instead of her poorest since Yost took charge at Ann Arbor.

PROSPECTS WANTED TO PLAY IN THE DARK

Opponents of Holy Cross Showed up Shortly Before Dusk Last Saturday.

Many loyal football fans who braved the cold weather to see Holy Cross play the Prospects, Saturday afternoon, were disappointed when Manager Doyle arrived on the scene about 4 o'clock and announced that there would be no game as the visitors had just arrived in town and, although they were willing to play the game the local manager would not consent to it because of the late hour. Quite a gathering was present at 3:15, the time announced for the battle to start and they were entertained during the long wait by an impromptu game on the sidelines while the Holy Cross players practiced new plays.

The Prospects started from Newark at 1 o'clock and instead of coming by train they took their time and made the trip by trolley. Not more than one-quarter could have been played so Manager Doyle called the contest off and sent them back home. One more game will be played on Cricket Field before the curtain finally falls for the season and that will be next Saturday, when the Franklins, of Newark, will appear here for the third time this season. The borough eleven was originally to have played the last game on the Franklins grounds, but they have consented to come here and meet the local aggregation.

Y. M. C. A. FIVE WIN OVER SUMMIT Y. M. C.

Easy Victory Recorded for Association Players Last Saturday.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team won its third game of the season Saturday night on the association court, when the Summit Y. M. C. was forced to take the short end of a 50 to 26 score. The visitors were never in the lead and the team work that was displayed by the local five was too much for them, Ricketts and Gavett scoring almost at will. Moulton made only one goal during the entire game, but he was responsible for many of the points as he played a fine passing game and fed Jack Ricketts continually. Jack's side shot was working to perfection and in the first period he scored seven field goals. Gavett counted for four and the half ended 27 to 14.

The visitors were held to six field goals in the last half while the association players chalked up eleven. Brynarski and Dunning replaced Glover and Gavett during the second half. The visitors were accompanied by about fifty rooters and made the trip in a large auto truck.

LOCAL HOPES DEFEAT HOPES OF ELIZABETH

They Finish Game Fifteen Points to the Good on Home Court Saturday.

The Hope chapel basketball team defeated the Hope Memorial chapel team, of Elizabeth, on the Fourth street court, Saturday night, by the score of 45 to 20. The visitors were never dangerous, but in the first half they made the local aggregation work for their points while they dropped in a few baskets on the side.

Tommy Heron's playing ability has been heralded in Elizabeth before and his opponent refused to let him loose. The local captain could cage only four field goals, but helped out by making good on seven trys from the foul mark. Walls scored six of the two-point variety while Chamberlain, playing center, was credited with seven goals. For the visitors, Harrison and Ball were the best scorers.

PEERLESS FIVE RALLIED BUT "MIXUPS" WON OUT

The Y. M. C. A. "Mixups" defeated the Peerless Five, Saturday afternoon in an exciting game on the Saengerbund Hall court, by a score of 37 to 34. The contest was one-sided at the start and the "Mixups" began rolling up the baskets at a fast rate. After the Peerless team changed its lineup things began to look different, and it was only in the last minute of play that he victors scored their winning points.

In the first half the association boys scored ten field goals against their opponents four field goals and one foul, and the half ended with a score of 20 to 9 in favor of the visitors. In the second half, however, the Peerless boys shifted some of their men to different positions and put McDonough in the game in Scarborough's position. The game then took a big turn and things began to look bright for the home team, as basket after basket helped to add up their score. After the score had been tied, however, the Peerless team could make no more points and its opponents passed them by caging a neat field goal and a free throw in the last minute of play. The home team scored twenty-five points to their opponents' seventeen in this half.

N. P. H. S. WALLOPED BERNARDSVILLE HIGH

Boroughites Became Tired of Shooting Baskets Before the Game Ended.

The North Plainfield High School basketball team succeeded in downing the Bernardsville quintet in Saengerbund Hall, Saturday night, by the overwhelming score of 80 to 14. The visitors were completely outclassed and the North Plainfield boys rolled up the baskets from the start to the finish. Toward the end of the last half the borough five stopped shooting and, even with that chance, the Bernardsville team was not helped any.

The ball was continually in the home team's territory and many baskets were registered from difficult angles, the Bernardsville aggregation not being able to break up the fine team work and good passing of the Canadians.

The visiting team started the scoring with a neat field goal from the side, but here they had to stop, as the boroughites started adding up the points continually, registering twenty field goals and four fouls in the half against their opponents' two goals and three free throws making the score 44 to 7.

In the second period, Townley, VanMater and Hebert were taken out and Day, Denny and French were put in their respective places, thus giving every man on the squad a game, and even with this chance the visiting team could make no more points than in the first half, while the home team rolled up thirty-six, the half ending 36 to 7.

Conroy led in the scoring for the borough team by caging sixteen baskets and two fouls and he played a good game throughout both periods. Townley, VanMater and Day, who were only in for one half were also high point scorers, Townley and VanMater each making six baskets and one foul and Day scoring eight pretty field goals.

For the Bernardsville five, Bird scored eight out of the fourteen points made and showed himself up as the mainstay of that aggregation, although Mackenzie played a fairly good game at guard. The team as a whole, however, did not work very well together, but perhaps this may be accounted for by the fact that this was their first game of the season and they have not had the practice their opponents have.

PLAINFIELD TO HAVE A MODERN BASKETBALL COURT THIS SEASON

What promises to be a welcome innovation in local athletic circles was launched by members of the Columbuc Club in the organization's rooms yesterday, when a committee composed of Fred Hillman, chairman; George Taylor and John T. Caulfield, was appointed to complete plans for the inauguration of basketball in the club. Sports, principally bowling, have been injected into the retinue of club life in this organization extensively during the past year and the new movement comes as one of the steps to make the club a thoroughly modern place for the development of sportsmanship as a promoter of fraternalism. A better place for the introduction of the popular indoor game in this section of Central New Jersey could not be established than the West Front street clubhouse and when the present plans are completed the rendezvous will be one of the best in this State. Taking the Columbia University gymnasium as a model, the committee has decided upon a plan to transform a portion of the spacious ball room into a regulation basketball court such as can be used for competition between teams of the highest calibre. The Columbus Club will be represented by a strong quintet and challenges will be issued in the near future to all of the best teams in New Jersey and the Metropolitan district. The court will provide the best accommodations for spectators of any in this section and several hundred will be able to witness the games from an advantageous point of view.

The policy adopted is to purchase a large net, such as is used in the collegiate game, and this will be erected in the form of a cage on a floor space of approximately 1,500 square feet. The court will be about sixty feet in length and twenty-five feet in width. Goals, of the regulation calibre, will be constructed on the court and a competent coach will drill the candidates for the club's representative team.

The lighting equipment at the Front street clubhouse is ideal for this game and accommodations will be provided for home and visiting combatants. A casual survey of the material available for organization indicates that one of the fastest teams that ever played the game in this locality will be picked and another formidable contender for city and Central New Jersey title be brought to light.

The facilities for staging games will not alone be confined to the benefit of club members, for it is planned to rent the hall out to outside teams for big games. This is a need that has long been felt locally, as the courts of regulation size in this city and borough are extremely scarce. In other years teams seeking neutral courts for championship battles have been forced to decide on a not altogether satisfactory compromise, but the new court will eliminate this drawback.

LEAL FIVE BEATEN IN HOT ARGUMENT

Upsala College Players Only Four Points Ahead When Final Whistle Blew.

The Leal School basketball five met its first defeat of the season at the hands of the Upsala College aggregation at Kenilworth, Saturday afternoon, the final score being 22 to 18. The game was featured with many arguments which slowed it up considerably and the local boys did not start playing in real form until the last few minutes of play, when they almost tied the score.

The college team ran away from its opponents in the first half of the game and only allowed them five points. The Leal forwards could not find the basket in the initial period of play and they missed many chances to score on free throws from the fifteen foot mark. The first half ended with the score 11 to 5 in favor of the home team.

The private school players started their team work in the second half and closed the gap between the two scores considerably, but there was not time enough to tie it up. Stewart scored three field goals, Dickerson four and Schneider counted for four fouls.

THIRTY RIDERS IN HUNT CLUB CHASE.

Picturesque Sections Covered in Long Week End Run.

About thirty riders turned out for the week-end run of the Watchung Hunt Club, Saturday afternoon, the line being laid over picturesque sections of Union and Middlesex counties. The hounds were again taken up and cast in near the Lehigh Valley Railroad, the line leading over various farms, including the Ackerman estate, where farmers from the housetops obtained a good view of the riders.

The second check was near the Colonia Golf Club. The last check was near the estate of Daniel Ginna. Those who were able to follow the run throughout were Rufus C Finch, M. F. H.; J. J. O'Donohue, H A. Bourne, A. C. Fox, Miss Mary F Baker, R. H. Towner, S. D. French Mrs. Gertrude Mattlach, Mayor H. W Evans, of Westfield; H. L. Finch, E R. Finch and Huntsman Harrison.

London).—The latest bulletins issued from general headquarters deny that the German forces along the Yser are retiring or that the French are meeting with success in Alsace They admit the loss of Vermelles, explaining that the French artillery was too strong for them.

The text of the statement follows:

"Reports that our forces are retreating along the Yser are untrue

"Vermellas was evacuated by us according to our plans on account of the continuous French artillery fire which was causing unnecessary loss The buildings which remained standing were blown up by us, and our troops occupied positions prepared east of Vermelles, so that the enemy could not follow in this direction.

"Southwest of Altkirch, the French renewed their attack with reinforcements, but without success, and they suffered heavy loss."

Paris, Dec. 7.—The French War Office gave out the following statement at 3 o'clock this afternoon:

"In the region of Yser we continue to attack some trenches which the enemy has maintained upon the left bank of the canal.

"In the region of Armentieres and of Arras, as in that of the Oise, the Aisne, and the Argonne there is nothing to report, except that in a general way the superiority of our offensive has been demonstrated.

"In the Champagne district our heavy artillery in several engagements has gained a marked advantage over the artillery of the enemy. There is nothing new on the eastern front where the positions of the previous day have been maintained."

The Turkish cruiser Hamidish encountered a mine in the Black Sea and regained Constantinople with difficulty, says a despatch from Sebastopo to a news agency here.

"No nation and no national industry is harder hit by the war than Monaco and the activities of its casino and sporting club," says a despatch to the Eclaire. The official season at Monte Carlo is supposed to open on November 15, but this year the pursuers of excitement from Petrograd, Chicago, London and Paris were absent. The Monegasque retained complete possession of the streets and halls, where ordinarily the 23,000 permanents of the principality are at this season mere caterers to visitors.

Amsterdam, Dec. 7 (Central News Cable).—The Turks have occupied Koda, an important point east of Batum, according to a message from Constantinople. The capture of the point was made by a bold strategem. The electric light works were put out of action. Three hundred Russians sent forward by the Russian commander to retake the electric light plant were ambushed and completely annihilated.

A victory by the Austrians and Hungarians over the Russian troops which have invaded Hungary through the Carparthian passes is claimed in a despatch from Iglo, Hungary. The despatch declares that the Austro-Hungarian armies have repulsed the Russians in the region of Zemplin and Saros, and have reoccupied Stropko. The railway communication from Bartfeld to Orlo has been restored.

Berlin advices say that Field Marshal Von Der Goltz has started for Constantinople, while advices from Dresden state that the King of Saxony has started for the western war theatre and the Duke of Saxe-Coburg Gotha for the eastern.

Copenhagen, Dec. 7 (Central News Cable).—The German submarine U-16 arrived yesterday at Esbjerg, at the mouth of the Mjerting River, in Denmark, to make repairs on its engine. Her commander expected to leave this morning within the time limit.

A despatch from Norway declares that Germany has seized two torpedo boat destroyers, which were being built for Norway in Germany, for the Kaiser's navy.

Stockholm, Dec. 7 (Central News Cable).—The Swedish steamers Luna and Everilda struck floating mines and were sunk off the coast of Finland in the vicinity of Martenyluete. The entire crew of the Luna and one man of the crew of the Everilda were saved.

CANNOT USE STAMPS TO PAY TELEGRAM TAX

Stamps cannot be used to pay the tax on telegrams. The act requires telegraph companies to collect on behalf of the government, from the person paying for the message, a tax of one cent, in addition to the regular charges for each telegram filed for transmission over their line.

The person paying for the message pays the tax to the telegraph company and the telegraph company in turn pays the tax to the government, therefore revenue stamps purchased from the government cannot be used to pay the tax on telegrams. The telegraph companies must collect the tax in cash and cannot accept revenue stamps atatched to messages in lieu of cash.

COMMANDS ATLANTIC FLEET.

Admiral Fletcher Succeeds Admiral Badger, Who Retires to Naval Board.

Rear Admiral Frank F. Fletcher has succeeded Rear Admiral Charles J. Badger as commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet. Admiral Badger has become a member of the general board of the navy at Washington.

One of Fletcher's qualifications for his present command is the fact that he is a sea lawyer, but not in the usual sense of the term. The traditional sea lawyer is a trouble maker. Fletcher is not of the old type. He is regarded as a good authority on international law, which involves, among other things, the diplomatic and military relations between countries, whether they are at peace, at war or in the twilight zone between.

Admiral Fletcher was born at Oskaloosa, Ia., on Nov. 23, 1855. He was christened Frank Fletcher. The middle name, Friday, is something of an accident. Fletcher was born on the sixth day of the week, and his father was in the habit of referring to him as his "man Friday." The father of the present admiral died when the boy was seven years old, but the nickname stuck. When he was only fourteen Fletcher was appointed to Annapolis Naval academy, and an elder brother brought him east from Iowa. The brother wrote his name on the roster of the Naval academy as Frank Friday Fletcher, and so it has stood on the government books ever since. Naval officers rarely use the Frank when referring to the admiral. He is known throughout the service as Friday Fletcher.

the welfare and education of the various Indian peoples. The speakers are men and women who have expert knowledge of Indian affairs as well as the principles of race development. Each year the society adopts a platform setting forth the fundamental needs of the race as well as mentioning matters of immediate concern. The society endeavors to get at the root of matters pertaining to the interests of the Indians and then embodies its conclusions in bills submitted to congress. The special theme of this year's meeting is: "To the American Indians, Let them be given equal opportunities, equal responsibilities and equal education."

Ellen smote her hands together.

"I meant to go over later," she said, "and take"— She paused. "I thought we'd all go over later," she said.—"I forgot about it. Why, yes, I guess we can go now, can't we? All three of us?"

Abel Ames stood looking at the tree. He had guessed that she might have dressed it for no one who would see it. He looked at Ellen and ventured what he thought.

"Ellen," he said, "if you ain't going to do anything more with that tree tonight, why not take some of the things off and have Matthew set it on his shoulder, and bring it over to Mary's for the boy that's coming?"

Ellen hesitated. "Would they like it?" she asked. "Would folks?"

Abel smiled. "I'll take the blame," he said, "and you take the tree." And, seeing Simeon hesitate, "Now let's stop by for Mis' Moran's coffeepot," he added. "Hustle up. The local must be in."

So presently the tree, partly divested of its brightness, was carried through the streets to the other house—in more than the magic which attends the carrying in the open road of a tree, a statue, a cart filled with flowers, for the tree was like some forbidden thing that still would be expressed.

"He might not come till Christmas is 'way past," Ellen thought, following. "She'll leave it standing a few days. We can go down there and look at it—if he comes."

A little way behind them, Simeon and Abel, with the coffeepot and the warming oven, were hurrying back to Mary's. They went down the deserted street where Abel's candle burned and Simeon's saint stood mute.

"When I was a little shaver," Abel said, "they used to have me stand in the open doorway Christmas eve, and hold a candle and say a verse. I forget the verse. But I've always liked the candle in doors or windows, like tonight. Look at mine over there now—ain't it like somebody saying something?"

"Well," said Simeon, not to be outdone, "when we come by my window just now the light hit down on it, and I could of swore I see the saint smile."

"Like enough," said Abel placidly; "like enough. You can't put Christmas out. I see that two weeks ago." He looked back at his own window. "If the little kid that come in the store last Christmas eve tries to come in again tonight," he said, "he won't find it all pitch dark, anyway. I'd like to know who he was."

Near the corner that turned down to the Rule factory they saw Ebenezer Rule coming toward them on the Old Trail road. They called to him.

"Hello, Ebenezer!" said Abel. "Ain't you coming in to Mary Chavah's tonight?"

"I think not," Ebenezer answered.

"Come ahead," encouraged Simeon.

As they met Abel spoke hesitatingly. "Ebenezer," he said, "I was just figuring on proposing to Simeon here that we stop in to your house. I was thinking," he broke off, "how would it be for you and him and me, that sort of stand for the merchandise end of this town, to show up at Mary's house tonight. Well, it's the women have done all the work so far, and I was wondering how it would be for three to get there with some little thing for that little kid that's coming to her. We could find something that wouldn't cost much. It hadn't ought to cost much 'count of our set principles. And take it to him." Abel ended doubtfully.

Ebenezer simply laughed his curious succession of gutterals.

"Crazy to Christmas, after all, ain't you?" he said.

But Simeon wheeled and stared at Abel. For defection in their own camp he had never looked.

"I knew you'd miss it—I knew you'd miss it!" Simeon said excitedly, "cut paper and fancy tassels and"—

"No such thing," said Abel shortly. "I was thinking of that boy getting here, that's all. And I couldn't see why we shouldn't do our share—which totin' coffeepots and warming ovens ain't, as I see it."

"Well, but heavens, man," said Simeon, "it's Christmas! You can't go giving anybody anything, can you?"

"I don't mean give it to him for Christmas at all," protested Abel. "I mean give it to him just like you would any other day. We'd likely take him something if it wasn't Christmas, sort of to show our good will, like the women with the supper. Well, why not take him some little thing even if it is Christmas?"

"Oh, well," said Simeon, "that way. If you make it plain it ain't for Christmas. Of course we ain't to blame for what day his train got in on."

"Sure we ain't," said Abel confidently.

Ebenezer was moving away.

"We'll call in for you in half an hour or so," Abel's voice followed him. "We'll slip out after the boy gets there. There won't be time before—what say, Ebenezer?"

"I think not," said Ebenezer. "You don't need me."

"Well, congratulations anyhow!" Abel called.

Ebenezer stopped on the crossing.

"What for?" he asked.

"Man alive!" said Abel. "Don't you know Bruce has got a little girl?"

"No," said Ebenezer, "I—didn't know. I'm obliged to you."

He turned from them, but instead of crossing the street to go to his house he faced down the little dark street to the factory. He had walked past Jenny's once that evening, but without being able to force himself to inquire. He knew that Bruce had come a day or two before, but Bruce had sent him no word. Bruce had never sent any word since the conditions of the failure had been made plain to him when he had resigned his position; refused the salary due him and left Old Trail Town. Clearly Ebenezer could make no inquiry under those circumstances, he told himself. They had cut themselves off from him definitely.

How definitely he was cut off from them was evident as he went down the dark street to the factory. He was strangely quickened from head to foot with the news of the birth of Bruce's child. He went down toward the factory simply because that was the place that he knew best, and he wanted to be near it. He walked in the snow of the midroad, facing the wind, steeped in that sense of keener being which a word may pour in the veins until the body flows with it. The third generation; the next of kin—that which stirred in him was a satisfaction almost physical that his family was promised its future.

Nellie Hatch and her lame sister were watching at the lighted window as if there were something to see.

"Must be kind of dreary work for them—living," he thought. "I s'pose Bruce is pretty pleased—pretty pleased."

At the corner some one spoke to him with a note of pleasure in his voice. It was his bookkeeper, with his wife and two partly grown daughters. Ebenezer thought of his last meeting with his bookkeeper and remembered the man's smile of perfect comprehension and sympathy as if they, too, had something in common.

"Family life does cling to a man," he had said.

That was his wife on his arm and their two daughters. On that salary of his! Was it possible, it occurred to Ebenezer, that she was saving egg money, earning sewing money, winning prizes for puzzles—as Letty had done?

Outside the factory, the blue arc light threw a thousand shadows on the great bulk of the building, but left naked in light the little office. He stood looking at it, as he so rarely saw it, from part way across the road. Seen so, it took on another aspect, as if it had emerged from some costuming given it by the years. The office was painted brown and discolored. He saw it white, with lozenge panes unbroken, flowered curtains at the windows, the light of lamp and wood stove shining out. And as sharply as if it had been painted on the air, he saw some unimportant incident in his life there—a four wheeled carriage drawn up at the door with some Christmas guests just arriving and himself and Letty and Malcolm in the open doorway. He could not remember who the guests were or whether he had been glad to see them, and he had no wish in the world to see those guests again. But the simple, casual, homely incident became to him the sign of all that makes up everyday life, the everyday life of folk—of folks—from which he had so long been absent.

His eye went down the dark little street where were the houses of the men who were his factory "hands." Just for a breath he saw them as they were—the chorus to the thing he was thinking about. They were all thinking about it too. Every one of them knew what he knew. Just for a breath he saw the little street as it was—an entity. Then the sight closed, but through him ran again that sense of keener being, so poignant that now, as his veins flowed with it, something deeper within him almost answered.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — How a Little Girl Tried to Live Alone.

Katy Grabbed the Purse and Ran Down Stairs.

"'I DON'T want to help wash dishes. I'm tired,' said Katy. 'I wish I could go away somewhere and live all by myself.'

"'Well,' said Mamma Gray, 'why don't you if you feel like that?'

"'Would you let me?' asked Katy.

"'Why, certainly; you may go at any time,' said Mamma Gray.

"Katy didn't feel at all as she thought she would feel if she were given permission to go away and do what she pleased.

"But she went out of the kitchen where Mamma Gray was doing the Saturday morning work and climbed the stairs to her own pretty little room.

"Katy peeped into the tiny mirror of her pretty dresser, but instead of a happy face smiling gleefully back at her, as she really had a right to expect, this little girl's face was very sad.

"But she was going away to do forever just what she pleased. Yes, she ought to be happy. Just think, only eleven, and no one any more could tell her what to do!

"Then Katy donned her pink sunbonnet, took her purse which daddy had given her the Christmas before and emptied the contents of her bank into it.

"There were one fifty cent piece, two quarters, three dimes and four nickels.

"Katy felt pretty rich. But all at once she remembered that these were her savings that she was going to buy Christmas presents with for daddy and mamma and Brother Ben.

"But then why should she care? She would be miles and miles away on Christmas day, having a beautiful time doing just what she pleased.

"So Katy grasped her little purse tightly in her hand and ran downstairs, through the yard and out in the road.

"There she paused and looked back at the house. It was a very pretty house, nestling among the trees which had now put on beautiful autumnal tints of crimson and gold.

"Then all at once what do you suppose happened? Why, a great lump swelled up in Katy's throat, pearly tears just tumbled over themselves down her pink cheeks, her lips quivered, and a sore little place grew right where her heart beat so fast.

"Then her little feet began to run, and what do you think? They took Katy back through the gate, around to the kitchen door and right into Mamma Gray's arms. 'I'll help you, mamma!' she sobbed.

"And Mamma Gray smiled a wise smile and patted Katy's golden head with her kind hand."

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Hello! Is this Mrs. Sargeant? This is Mrs. Emery speaking. How are you?

"Yes, so am I, in fact I have resigned myself to living in a rush. I have tried all the fall to get out to see you to give you the promised report on our garden. You were so kind to give me seeds and suggestions. I have felt guilty every time I thought of it.

"Success? Not so that you could notice it. You know Morton went into it 'against his will and better judgment,' as he says, and I think Mr. Dooley would say, 'You can lade a man to a garden, but you can't make him dig.' That has been my experience, anyway.

"No, I feel that it's my failure. It was my project and I certainly didn't make good. In the first place, as Morton refused to dig, I hired a man to spade the ground. I had to buy tools, of course. The ground was too wet and it dried in lumps of yellow clay as big as my head.

"Oh, no, he didn't know any better. It was blind leading the blind, you see. I waited for it to rain and by experimenting I found out when the lumps would crumble and telephoned the man when to come back and break them up. I bought a load of rich loam and some fertilizer at the suggestion of the greenhouse man, and had them worked in. Then I proceeded to plant. I pawed around just as you told me, and tried to do all the latest agricultural stunts. Morton watered the garden. He said we would form a partnership, 'Paul plant and Apollus water,' and in that way we had scripture for hopes of increase, but there was something wrong; it didn't come.

"Well, I can hardly say truthfully that we got nothing. We had quite a number of meals off of the string beans, but Morton very thoughtfully pointed out to me that beans at that time were five cents a pound, and we may have had four pounds in all.

"No, the tomatoes absolutely refused to grow, and they were what I wanted most of anything, besides parsley and lettuce. The tomato plants stood week after week exactly stationary, thus confuting the time-honored theory that things must advance or they will retrograde.

"Oh, yes, I got thirteen tomatoes the size of black walnuts.

"Indeed, yes; I have everything down in black and white. I agreed to defray the expenses of the garden in order to save money on my housekeeping bills, as you said you did but when I think how flat my private pocketbook is after making up the deficit I am moved to tears, and Morton's 'I told you so' attitude is simply maddening.

"No, that's not the worst, the effect on my naturally hopeful disposition is dreadful beyond words.

"Yes, I have the figures right here

"I charged Morton for the sod taken up, as it was put on the parking. I shall plant grass seed over the grave of the garden. With all the manipulating the soil had it ought to grow well.

"Certainly, condolence is in order.

"All right, we will be glad to come and I hope Mr. Sargeant will rub it well into Morton how he enjoys working in a garden. Good-bye."

Household Hints

STUFFINGS FOR POULTRY

As the holiday season is approaching, a few recipes for stuffing may not be amiss. Do not pack the stuffing into the fowl too tightly, or it will be heavy.

For Chicken — No. 1 — One cup coarse cracker crumbs, one-fourth cup butter, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-third cup milk, a little pepper. Mix well.

No. 2 — Two cups dry bread crumbs, one-half cup fine sausage meat, one tablespoon each of chopped parsley and onion, one-fourth cup butter, one teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon pepper, few grains nutmeg, two eggs. Soak bread in cold waetr till soft. Press out all water and add sausage meat, seasonings, melted butter and beaten eggs. If meat is very fat, use less butter.

For Turkey—Four cups stale bread crumbs, three-fourths cup melted butter, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, fine herbs if desired.

For Duck — Two cups bread crumbs, one-fourth cup butter, two tablespoons milk, one-half chopped onion, one chopped duck liver (boiled), one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper.

Chestnut Stuffing for Poultry — One pint fine bread crumbs, one pint shelled and boiled chestnuts, chopped fine, one-fourth cup butter, salt, pepper and chopped parsley to season.

Small raw oysters or finely cut celery may be substituted for the chestnuts, omitting parsley.

Potato Stuffing — Two chopped onions, two cups mashed potatoes, one cup bread crumbs, salt, pepper and powdered sage to taste.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

To extract spots or durable ink, use a little sal-ammonia moistened with water.

If you have a latticed back porch, line it inside with felt paper way down to the floor and as high as your head, to keep out cold and soot.

To lengthen tennis bed blankets (more especially those having no colored border), take the colored border off blankets that are nearly if not past their usefulness as bed blankets and stitch the same across ends of white blankets in a way that the buttonholed ends of white blankets cover raw edge of seam, and also make a flat seam. By equally dividing space of plain color of blankets each side of the colored borders before stitching the same on the white blanket, you will have a very neat finish as well as a blanket of very comfortable length for bed occupied by tall people.

Easy and quick way to remove rust from closet bowls or sink, use muriatic acid; apply with cloth fastened on end of a stick or a brush, being careful not to get acid on the hands.

RECIPE FOR "TATTLERS"

Take a handful of weed called runabout, the same quantity of nimble tongue root, a sprig of the herb backbite (either before or after dog days), a tablespoonful of don-you-tell-it, six drams of malice, a few drops of envy (can be purchased at the shop of Miss Tabitha Tea-Table and Miss Nancy Night-Walker).

Stir all well together and simmer half an hour over the fire of Discontent, kindled with a little Jealousy. Then strain through the rag of Misconception, cork it up in the bottle of Malevolence and hang it upon a skein of Street Yarn.

Shake it occasionally for a few days and it will be fit for use. Take a few drops before walking out and the subject will be able to speak all manner of evil and that continually.

THE TABLE

Tartar Sauce—Beat yolks of two eggs in a gill of salad oil, a tablespoonful good vinegar, a teaspoonful of dry mustard, a tablespoonful of gherkin (chopped), with pepper and salt. Beat all together in a bowl and it is ready for use.

Cranberry Salad—Make cranberry jelly usual way; pour into individual molds. When cold turn on lettuce leaves, sprinkle nut meats over chopped with olives and celery. Over each put two dessertspoonfuls of mayonnaise dressing. Serve with salted wafers.

MUTUAL AID SOCIETY HELD ANNUAL SESSION

Entertainment Followed Business Meeting of Saurer Company Organization.

At the annual meeting of the Mutual Aid Society of Saurer Motor Truck Company, held in Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall, Saturday night, the following officers were re-elected: D. B. Martin, president; William Mack, vice president; H. Lude, treasurer; A. H. Flood, financial secretary, and Earl Ising, recording secretary. There were three vacancies on the board of directors, and George Ludgate, William Sparks and John Young were elected to fill them. John Kriney, John Goff and Frank Crozier were appointed members of the auditing committee for the ensuing year.

The past year was the most prosperous of the eight years the society has been in existence, the sick benefits being very light, and there was but one death benefit. The membership now totals 149. George Sharpe was awarded the prize for securing the most members and reinstatements in the past year.

After the close of business, the society entertained its guests, provision having been made for two hundred. Considering the disagreeable weather they were more than gratified at the turn-out. The entertainment committee provided a very enjoyable program as follows: Address of welcome, President D. B. Martin, address, George Pearson, chairman committee; duet, John and Howard Barry; solo, George Pearson; song Impromptu Sextet, John Beattie, William Colvin, Elmer Barrett, William Sparks, Arthur Utzinger and George Pearson; solo, Howard Parry; crayon sketches, Paul Gdaniec; solo, John Parry; solo, John Lugate; solo, George Pearson; piano solo, William Sparks.

The accompaniments were played by Miss Jeanette Neal. At the conclusion of the entertainment, the members and their guests adjourned to the dining room, where supper was served.

QUARTET CHOIR SINGS "THE LIFE EVERLASTING"

Despite the stormy weather there was a large congregation at the First M. E. church last evening to enjoy the musical service, which included the rendition of the cantata "The Life Everlasting," by the quartet choir. The service was in charge of Clifford S. Braider, organist and choir director, and the solo parts were all well taken.

The quartet, Miss Gabrielle Drosse, soprano; Miss Ethel Kinnaman, contralto; Aleck MacGowan, tenor, and Edgar Cole, baritone, was assisted by Fay Maupin, violinist.

COUNCIL AMENDS TYLER ORDINANCE

Thereby Assuring a Liquor License to Clark Saloon Next Year.

NO DISSENTING VOTES

Mt. Olive Baptist Church Loses Its Chance to Public Protest—Spicer Manufacturing Co. Urges Defeat of the Amendment.

Without a dissenting vote the amendment to the Tyler "zone" ordinance as offered by Councilman C. C. Graves was adopted on third and final reading at the December meeting of the Common Council, last night. President George S. Clay and Councilmen R. A. Claybrook, A. D. Edgar and Thomas F. Hylan were absent, the first named being detained at home following a recent operation.

This action means that the Clark saloon on Liberty street will get a renewal of its license next year and safeguards Watson's saloon on Grant avenue, so that in case of the death of the owner a license can be reenewed. Councilmen Leighton Calkins, Charles C. Graves, Theodore Martin Cornelius van Herwerden, John H. Cose, Francis J. Blatz and Juan A. Babcock, those present last night voted for the amendment.

A large delegation of officers and members of the Mt. Olive Baptist church were present to protest against the adoption of the amendment, but as the time for a public hearing was passed, they had no opportunity to voice their sentiments in public. Earlier in the evening, when it was reported that the matter might be laid over until the next meeting at the request of President Clay, who could not attend, several persons who favored the amendment left the Council chamber upon the advice of William Newcorn, of Counsel for the Clark estate, he believing that their presence would not be required.

The Spicer Manufacturing Company, through its president, entered a written protest against the adoption of the amendment which would mean the continuance of the Clark saloon, explaining that it was the employer of high-class men and did not wish to have such a temptation placed near employes of the concern.

ISSUE INVITATIONS FOR A RECEPTION AND DANCE

Mrs. Eugene Hamlin Hatch and her daughter, Miss Eleanor Hatch, have issued invitations for an "At Home" on the afternoon of Tuesday, December 29, from 4 until 7 o'clock, at 202 West Eighth street. The afternoon reception will be followed by a dance in the evening at 8:30 at the Park Club, for which invitations have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. Hatch and Miss Hatch.

MRS. F. G. MEAD AND MISS MEAD RETURN

Mrs. Frederick G. Mead and her daughter, Miss Margaret Mead, of "Sunnyside," East Front street, returned home this afternoon from an extended trip abroad, the greater part of which was spent in China, where Mrs. Mead's son, Lawrence Mead is engaged in mission work. Miss Frederica Mead, another daughter, who went abroad, is now in China, having decided to remain there and take up mission work.

Mrs. Mead and her two daughters left here last April on their long journey, and they had a most delightful time. The return trip was made by the way of San Francisco overland to Plainfield.

Y. M. C. A. PICTURES.

Pictures teaching the lesson of Christmas in a most beautiful and impressive manner will be shown at the Y. M. C. A. motion picture entertainment on the remaining Saturdays of this month. They will include the very finest of the films which reflect the Christmas spirit. On Saturday, December 12, the program will include: "A Christmas Accident," "His Honor, the Mayor," "The Amateur Lion Tamer," "America and the European War," number 2.

EUCHRE AND DANCE.

There will be a euchre and dance on Thursday evening in St. Mary's School Hall for the benefit of the unemployed of the city. The committee reports an unusually large list of awards; also a number of articles to be sold. Play will begin at 8 o'clock. There will be music by Squire's orchestra.

ELKS TO ENTERTAIN IN THEIR CLUBHOUSE

Informal Reception Planned for Thursday Night With Several Features.

Van Epps' banjo orchestra, with its famous "Victor drummer" has been engaged to furnish the music at the Elks' Club reception Thursday night, the committee in charge having made arrangements to entertain fully 250 guests with an elaborate program. The event will be one of the winter series of social functions and the members will have the privilege of inviting friends to the affair. Dancing will be the principal event on the program. The coming of the world famous drummer, who has been under contract with the Victor Talking Machine Company, is looked forward to with considerable interest and it is probable that he will render several special selections Thursday night.

Invitations have been issued to members and they will in turn be distributed among friends. Refreshments will be served during the dance intermissions. The program will be an informal one and members of the lodge will supply the various numbers. The committee in charge includes Dr. Chalmers L. Crist, Jack V. Todd, Elmer D. Cutting, John H. Cose and Dr. C. W. Leonard.

STORM DOES NOT DAUNT SUFFRAGISTS

Enthusiastic Meeting Held at Plainfield High School Last Night.

In spite of the bad storm and the absence of Dr. Anna Howard Shaw and in spite of everything that would have daunted ordinary mortals the Suffragists held a good meeting in the Plainfield High School, last night, and enjoyed two excellent speeches by Mrs. Edward F. Feickert and Mrs. Helen Hoyt Greeley.

A total eclipse of the High School electric lights took place as the audience was assembling. But even this did not seriously depress the enthusiasts. The musicians went right on playing in the dark and when suddenly the eclipse was over Dr. H. M. Maxson was discovered on the platform offering his usual word of cheer which is seldom lacking to those who need it.

The music that never failed at the darkest moment, was provided by Stephen Haff, pianist and Arthur Mosher, violinist. Mrs. Arthur B. Jones and Mrs. Champlain L. Riley, president and vice-president respectively, of the Equal Suffrage League, of Plainfield and North Plainfield, were on the platform together with the speakers, Mrs. Feickert and Mrs. Greeley.

Mrs. Feickert received rounds of appreciative applause when she made especially telling home-thrusts. Her address was on the "Pecularities of New Jersey," and in closing she begged the men of New Jersey to make their State peculiar in regard to enfranchising their women. It is New Jersey's opportunity to be the first of the Atlantic seaboard States to give back votes to women. It was an nounced that Dr. Shaw would speal in the High School on Wednesday night, December 16 and tickets bearing the date of December 7 will b good on the 16th.

SAYS VALUATION IS UNREASONABLE

William Newcorn Enters Protest Against Report of Madison Ave. Commission.

COMPARATIVE FIGURES

Attorney for Dreier Estate and Other Owners Attempts to Show That Allowances for Benefits is Not Commensurate With Damages.

Following the presentation and reading of the report of the commissioners, J. Fred MacDonald, A. E. Smith and A. H. Atterbury, in th matter of widening Madison avenue, from West Front street to the railroad bridge, at the December meeting of the Common Council, last night, another strong protest against the adoption of the report was made by William Newcorn. He stated that he represents not only the estate of Samuel Rreier, but Morris Abrahams, Abrams and Dreier and Moses Bender, all of whom are assessed for the proposed improvement.

The heaviest assessment on the effected property-owners is levied on the estate of Samuel Dreier. The commissioners allowed $10,125 for damages, $1,626 for benefits, leaving the net damages $8,499. Mr. Newcorn, who explained in detail his reasons for opposing this particular assessment, said that this assessment of $10,125 for damages is a reduction of almost $2,000 from that allowed in a previous report.

After taking the required property from the Dreier estate for the widening, Mr. Newcorn said that it would take $4,500 to remodel the building and make it tenantable. He said that the commissioners had placed an approximate value of $700 on the affected strip, while the market value at present is between $1,000 and $1,500.

Mr. Newcorn said that across the street from the Dreier property, where the owner has simply to move back his curb line, a portion of land already having been dedicated to widening, the owner will receive a net benefit of $2,000. Then beside, continued Mr. Newcorn, the commissioners do not appear to have taken into consideration the loss of rental value to the Dreier estate and he said that the assessment was unjust and unfair.

The same thing applies to Moses Bender, said Mr. Newcorn, where the owner would be obliged to build an entire new wall at considerable expense. He did not think that either Morris Abrams or Abrahams and Dreier would be benefitted whatsoever by the improvement, and if the widening was a benefit at all it was a benefit to the whole city. In his opinion he thought the assessments were inadequate and unreasonable.

The commissioners allowed total damages of $20,897.00 and total assessed benefits of $7,743.50, leaving the net damages $13,153.50. Benefits are assessed on West Front street, east and west, on Madison avenue to West Fourth street, on West Second street to Fred Ivamy's property. The total benefits assessed on the city is $4,111.60. Mr. Newcorn asked the Common Council to refer the report back to the commissioners for another revision. After the public hearing the report was referred to the street committee and no further recommendations were made last night.

LARGE NUMBER OF BIDS EXPECTED BY THE BOARD

It is known that an unusually large number of contractors will be present tomorrow night at the Board of Education offices at the High School, when the bids for the new Evergreen Avenue School building are to be received. Since the revision of the plans originally prepared, a number of local men who did not figure the first time the contracts were advertised, have gotten into the running, and practically all the former bidders have applied for the new specifications.

Those best posted say that a substantial reduction is to be expected on all the contracts, from the original figures. This is especially true of the contract for heating and ventilating plant, the specifications for which have been revised.

Both at the office of the Board, and at the office of the architects, Messrs. Wilder & White, in New York city, many applications for the plans have been received within the past two weeks. The Board will meet at 8 o'clock tomorrow night, and all bids must be presented at that hour.

POSTPONE MEETING.

The meeting of the Tomlinson "Y" has been postponed from tonight to Thursday night, at the home of James W. Dunwell, on East Seventh street.

PUBLIC XMAS EVE CELEBRATION

Sunday School Superintendents' Association to Take Charge of Details.

A COMMUNITY AFFAIR

Proposition Discussed at Dinner Given to Executive Committee by George E. Hall, President—A. M. Harris Elected Chairman.

Plans for the public out-of-doors Christmas celebration to be given on Christmas Eve. were discussed by the executive committee of the Sunday-school Superintendents' Association, last night, when the members were guests of the president, George E. HONEST BUSINESS NEED NOT FEAR

President Wilson Departs From Prepared Message in Address to Congress.

URGES SHIPPING BILL

Philippine Self Government Urged—President Makes It Plain That He Is Opposed to Increased Standing Army, But Wants Trained Citizens.

Washington, Dec. 8.—In delivering his annual message to Congress, President Wilson departed today from the printed address, which had been prepared in advance for the newspapers, and interpolated a message of assurance to the business world. He said that the legislative program regarding business was practically complete, under the laws already enacted, and that honest business now could tread the path toward success without fear.

Passage of the shipping bill and other measures designed to open up and develop the resources and commerce of the United States was strongly urged by the President in his address.

The President also asked for the passage of the Philippine self-government bill, and called the attention of the Senate to the fact that the proposed convention for safety at sea awaits confirmation, as the time for acceptance expires at the end of the present month, and adds that this country should show good taste by adding its acceptance to that of Germany and Great Britain.

In regard to the subject of national defense, the President made it plain that he was not in favor of an increase in the nation's standing army, declaring that its dependance in time of peril must be placed rather upon a citizenry trained and accustomed to arms.

The message follows:

RED CROSS SEAL FUNDS NOT FOR WAR RELIEF

Director Bicknell Urges Support of Anti-tuberculosis War.

Washington, Dec. 8.—None of the proceeds from the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals which are being sold widely throughout the United States for the benefit of the anti-tuberculosis movement will be used for war relief purposes, according to a statement issued today, by Ernest P. Bicknell, National Director of the American Red Cross.

Mr. Bicknell says: "The American Red Cross is deeply appreciative of the sympathetic interest which has inspired the suggestion from various parts of the United States, that a certain percentage of the Red Cross Seals Sales Fund, which has been used for the last six years exclusively for the prevention of tuberculo*sis in the United States, be expended* this year to aid the European war sufferers. While the Red Cross is trying very hard to raise a large war relief fund and is anxious to secure contributions that will increase this fund, we do not feel justified in adopting any policy which will tend to cripple the tuberculosis work in this country, which is dependent for its support to so large an extent on the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals. The announcement that a percentage of the Red Cross Seal money would go to our war relief fund might possibly increase the sale, but, in our opinion, the final results would show a distinct loss in that part of the proceeds going for tuberculosis work.

"At the present time there are over one thousand anti-tuberculosis societies distributed over nearly every State in the Union, and even in Vera Cruz, the Canal Zone and far off Hawaii, which are dependent almost entirely upon the receipts from the Red Cross Seal sale for their work during the year 1915. The people of the United States must support this local war against tuberculosis, which annually kills 200,000 people, and at the present time is leaving a trail of a million wounded."

ANNUAL WARNING FROM FIRE CHIEF

Precautions Should Be Taken to Prevent Christmas Conflagrations.

In an interview with a Daily Press reporter last night Fire Chief Doane gave out the following suggestions to householders and store-owners regarding the use of Christmas tree decorations:

"Christmas is approaching. Stores will be crowded with people, windows will be decorated. We have been talking for several years of safety first. Think of safety first now. I would ask that proprietors and managers of stores see that all exits are cleared, especially the side and rear exits. Call the attention of all clerks to the exits and instruct them to station themselves at specific doors in case of fire and panic and call quietly to those nearest them "this way out." Allow no baby carriages in stores. Put up "no smoking" signs and see to it that no smoking is allowed in the store. In schools, churches and halls unusual precautions should be taken. Do not let decorations of any kind come close to electric bulbs; do not cover bulbs with paper petticoats and keep all decorations, etc., at least two feet clear of gas-burners. Do not use cotton for decorations. In the case of Christmas trees place zinc or sheet iron under the trees to catch the drip from the candles if used, but don't use candles if you can possibly avoid it.

"If trees are to be wired for electric lights employ a good electrician for the work. Always have some one to watch the trees. If you have no fire extinguisher have a bucket of water and a dipper handy. If you get an extinguisher, get one of the carbonated gas kind. They are quite cheap now.

If your clothing takes fire lie down and roll over while extinguishing the flames. If a person's clothing takes fire the very first thing to do is to throw that person down. This changes the direction of flame and saves eyes, faces and lungs. Then smother fire with coats, rugs, carpets or anything handy. Every Santa Claus costume should be dipped in a solution of alum water. Always bear in mind 'safety first.'"

Report That Russians Have Begun Bombardment of City—Servians Claim to Have Been Victorious Over Austrians.

Amsterdma, Dec. 8 Central News Cable).—The Germans have lost an immense number, estimated at 126,000 men, in the furious fighting which has occurred before Nieuport, Dixmude and Ypres in their unsuccessful attempt to press through to Calais.

The Germans are barricading houses along the sea front in the vicinity of Zeebrugge, and are placing maxims at every available point in consequence of their apprehension that the British will direct an action against Heyst, says the Telegraaf. Before he went after the police, Fleece, perceiving that Bellis was under the influence of liquor, had endeavored to get him to leave his premises, but there was "nothing doing" in that line as the man's deluded mind made him positive in the assertion that a friend of his resided in the house and he was going to see that friend and that was all that there was to it. When arraigned before Recorder Campbell, in the borough hall, yesterday, Bellis was fined $3 and severely reprimanded.

BARBERS' BALL WAS ATTENDED BY MANY

Fine Program Arranged by Members of Local Unionists Last Night.

Members of the local branch No. 315, Journeymen Barbers' International Union, with prominent members of the Building Trades' Council and Allied Trades' committee as their guests, enjoyed an elaborate social program in the I. O. O. M. new headquarters in Abrams' auditorium last night, about 100 persons being present. The features of the evening were addresses and cabaret entertainment, refreshments being provided by a committee throughout the evening. C. F. Foley, of Pottsville, Pa., made the chief address. He is the second vice-president of the International Union and in a general way gave the history of the barbers' trade, classing it as one of the oldest in the history of the world. He declared that the barbers' emblem, a striped pole, is the only trade symbol that has been left unchanged since its adoption. Other trades have adopted various marks but all of these have been subjected to various changes from time to time. He urged the bosses and journeymen to cooperate and emphasized the fact that nothing can be accomplished without organization. Mr. Foley pictured the barber as a veritable slave and said that conditions should be regulated in a way that will give the laymen more freedom. He also urged the regulation of prices and lauded the manner in which the local bosses work together.

David DeLianoardo, president of the local Union, made a strong address on the subject of "Tuberculosis." He set for the claim of the physicians as preventatives for this disease and urged the barber to inject cleanliness and other essentials into his shop. He showed figures of the average cost of right living for a year and then declared that the majority of working men are getting but fifty per cent. of the necessary amount.

Business Agent William Lunger, of the Building Trades Council, in a brief address, urged the Union men to uphold one another by patronizing organized labor and purchase goods manufactured in properly regulated shops. John Cordover, secretary of the Council, also spoke.

Between the speeches an excellent program of earbaret amusement rendered by local and professional talent was enjoyed. The prominent feature on this portion of the program was the rendition of vocal selections by Miss Jennie Lane, of New York city, "the little girl with the big voice." Mat King, of Newark, a blackface comedian and singer, gave several pleasing impersonations and sang topical songs. A novelty dance was executed by Tony Parretti and Miss Mame Day and a demonstration of modern dancing by Morris Lavere and Miss Walsh. Music was furnished by Professor Scott. Charles Pagilucca presided.

NEW PASTOR PRESENT AT SERVICES IN NEW CHARGE

The Rev. John Batzyl, who was recently extended a call to take charge of the pastorate of the All Souls' Unitarian church in this city, attended the morning services Sunday and read his acceptance. He will move to Plainfield and enter upon his new duties the Sunday prior to Christmas.

The new minister comes from Hudson, Mass.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

The Boys' A. A. of the High School held a meeting yesterday noon and voted to appropriate money for the purchase of eight new jerseys for the basketball team. Most of the jerseys which were purchased last year have gone out of the school with those who graduated and there are only two left and as it is very hard to tell the men on the basketball floor if they do not have uniform suits the money was readily granted.

The matter was left in the hands of Manager Van Mater.

Miss Utter, the singing instructor of the High School, has picked a double quartet, which will render selections at the Christmas entertainment. Rehearsals will start some time this week. Those who will sing in the quartet are Warren Townley, John Dawe, Vincent Laporte, Lester Chandler, Elmer French, Oscar Dilts, Edson Day and Ralph Smalley.

Rutgers Prep has cancelled the game which it had scheduled with North Plainfield High School March 3, and Manager Van Mater has arranged to play the game which was pending with West Orange High School for December 3, in the place of the Rutgers Prep. game.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys, Then the Back Hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Making the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wishing gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.—Adv.

CITY TO WIDEN EAST SECOND ST.

On Account of New Federal Building Thoroughfare Will Be Improved.

WORK TO BEGIN SOON

Council Warned That Fire Alarm System Needs Immediate Attention—Sinking Fund Money Invested In Municipal Bonds.

Another step in the plan to widen East Second street, between Watchung avenue and Church street, was taken by the Common Council at its December meeting, last night, when the ordinance providing for this improvement was adopted on third and final reading. The thoroughfare will be widened to conform to the proposed changes to be made on the Government property at Watchung avenue and East Second street, where the new Federal building is to be erected early next year.

A. B. Wilson, local manager for the New York Telephone Company, again reminded the Council of a previous notice regarding the poor condition of the fire alarm wires in the city, and stated that the company would not be responsible for any criticism that might follow any trouble in the future. He said that the system had not been fully repaired since the blizzard of last March and it needs immediate attention, as it is likely to "go bad" any time. The matter was referred to the police committee.

The Laing Auto Machine Company petitioned for permission to install a 500 gasoline tank beneath the sidewalk at West Front street and Central avenue, on the Dr. C. B. Lufburrow property. This was referred to the street committee.

Councilman Francis J. Blatz, reporting for the finance committee for Mr. Calkins, who presided in President Clay's absence, referred back several matters. Regarding the petition from the Board of Trade to have the city publish a tax book, he reported that the city was without funds for such work. The petition of J. H. Carson to establish a city park on the Boice property on East Front street was filed, and A. D. Mailin's petition referring to pipes supposed to be laid across his property in the East End, Mr. Blatz stated that an investigation showed that the pipes did not run through the petitioner's property, there being a misunderstanding.

The sum of $2,000 was transferred from the general to the poor fund and a resolution offered by Mr. Blatz, which was adopted, provided for borrowing $4,000 for sewer extension work. Another resolution authorized the payment of $310 to the Madison avenue commissioners, J. Fred MacDonald, A. E. Smith and A. H. Atterbury.

Still another resolution by Mr. Blatz, which was adopted, authorized the purchase of three $1,000 municipal bonds from money in the sinking fund, one issued on account of the Darrow Avenue School, one on account of the Jefferson School and one on account of the Wet End fire house.

The sum of $183,702.57, representing the city's share of the State school and county tax, was authorized paid to the county collector by City Treasurer W. F. Arnold, it being the 1914 tax.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett reported the granting of six sewer permits last month and Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that he had granted 13 building permits during the same period. Horace G. Adams, clerk of the District Court, reported receipts for the month of $211.39 and expenditures of $62.14, the balance being turned over to City Treasurer W. F. Arnold.

Mr. Blatz reported that the Kelly-McFeely Company, of Camden, had completed in a satisfactory manner its sewer contract here, and he then introduced a resolution, which was adopted, accepting the work, with the understanding, which is part of the contract, that the contractors maintain the system in order for a period of nine months.

Councilman C. C. Graves called up on third reading the amendment to the ordinance governing the fire department, which provides for certain changes, and it was adopted.

On motion of Mr. Cose, Dudley S. Miller's petition for a 350 candle power electric light on East Fourth street, between Park avenue and Sycamore street, was referred to the 1915 Council. The Council decided to meet on Monday night, December 21, at which time, it was requested, that the members be prepared to refer all unfinished business which cannot be disposed of this year.

The Plainfield-Union Water Company reported the installation of five new hydrants in various parts of the city, as requested. Margaret Zeiler, of South Second street, in a communication, called the attention to an error made in the assessment on her property, and requested the return of $3.60, which she claimed was due her. The matter was referred to Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed.

A communication from the Rushmore Dynamo Works sought information as to when a two-way hydrant is to be located near its plant on South avenue, so that certain arrangements could be made. This matter was referred to the fire committee.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

A tabloid musical comedy, entitled "Through Five Countries in Twenty Minutes," heads an excellent bill at Proctor's Theatre for the first half of the week. It is presented by the Rennes, a company of four, featuring Miss Rositta Rennes, a versatile comic opera star, who gives songs and dances appropriate to Italy, France, Holland, Egypt and America. There are five quick changes in the act, each one with a beautiful scenic and costume invertiture. Another feature act on the bill is the Farrell-Taylor Trio, three black-face comedians, who give comedy, singing and dancing, and instrumental music. Their offering produces almost a steady succession of laughs. "Whittier's Barefoot Boy" is the odd title of an act, with a special drop in which the typical country lad imitates birds and animals in a marvellous manner. The whistling solos by this youth are little short of wonderful, being done without the aid of an instrument of any kind. An acrobatic act entitled "Fun in the Barracks," by Stamp & Stamp, and a singing and talking act by Bernard & Finnerty, complete the program. The nineteenth episode of the serial film, "The Perils of Pauline," will be shown this afternoon and tonight, and at both performances tonight Miss Pearl White, Pathe's feature star, who posed for the "Pauline" pictures, will be an added attraction, telling of her experiences as a movie heroine. The first episode of "Zudora," the new serial film, will be shown tomorrow.

Miss Rositta Rennes,
Featured in "Through Five Countries in Twenty Minutes," at Proctor's Theatre.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

President Wilson's message to Congress, which was read this afternoon, is much longer than any similar document since he became head of the nation. In keeping with his public utterances of late, he brings no new suggestions to the attention of Congress, but reiterates the necessity for a merchant marine, self-government for the Filipinos, the passage of a shipping bill and for great economy in the administration of the government because of the conditions brought upon us by the war abroad.

No part of his message, however, will command so generally the attention of the people as a whole, as that which refers to the army and navy, and in this he takes a wise view, which undoubtedly will meet with the approval of the great mass of the American people. Speaking plainly and directly upon the question of national defenses, the President says that he is opposed to a big standing army, but says that every reasonable means must be used to provide a trained citizenry for defense. "We must depend in every time of national peril upon a citizenry trained and accustomed to arms. We should encourage such training and make it a means of discipline which our young men will learn to value. It is right too, that the National Guard of the States should be developed and strengthened by every means which is not inconsistent with our obligations to our own people or with the established policy of our government," says the President. In order to carry this out he thinks that some means must be devised by which "every citizen who will volunteer for the training may be made familiar with the use of modern arms, the rudiments of drill and manoeuvre, and the maintenance and sanitation of camps."

The President says that the American people have always regarded a powerful navy as our proper means of defense, but he is puzzled, in view of recent developments, as to what is the best method of strengthening that branch of the nation's forces. In expressing his perplexity he reflects the sentiment of nearly everyone, for the submarines have made big and expensive battleships ineffective abroad.

The message is another contribution to a great series of State papers which have come from President Wilson. It contains much sound advice, and shows fully the necessity for many changes in government to provide in the future for such emergencies as those which have developed since the war broke out.

JOHN WOOLMAN.

Plainfield members of the Society of Friends will learn with interest of the movement on foot to purchase the old house in Mount Holly which was the home of John Woolman. Undoubtedly there are many in this city who will do their part toward seeing that the building is preserved as a memorial of the calm, yet learned, man whose life and writings are part of the history of America. As the Camden Post Telegram says, there are many Friends whose individual worth, whose sagacity in business, or whose skill in agriculture have become proverbial in a township or county. A number have won reputation as educators and scientists But the five most celebrated names of the Society are Fox, the missionary; Barclay, the controversialist Penn, the founder of a great Commonwealth; Woolman, the man of quiet life and famous diary, and Whittier, the poet of the anti-slavery movement. Woolman lived his patient thoughtful course, and might have been forgotten outside the Society but for the praise bestowed on him by Charles Lamb. In recent years the reprint of Woolman's journal has brought his name before many who might not have heard of him. It is the barest justice to say that he is now better known than would have seemed possible fifty years ago. New Jersey has always ranked him among those of whom she is proud.

Judge DeMeza's acceptance of money for a fine from a crap shooter, which the wife of the accused took out of a child's bank containing Christmas savings, is so contrary to everything that he has done before that we cannot understand his position. One of a group of colored gamblers admitted his wrong doing and when a $5 fine was imposed his wife went home, got a child's bank and breaking it open counted out one hundred nickels, saying that it represented the child's savings for a year in anticipation of the Christmas period. If that was the only way in which the fine money was procurable the court should never have given the alternative of a fine to the father Jail was too good for that kind of a man, and the chances are ten to one that the family would not have suffered had he been put away. It's a most peculiar idea of the fitness of things, when the Christmas spirit is in the air, and a popular move would be for some one to start a subscription list to replace those treasured nickels, of which the child has been deprived.

Complaint has been made about the delay on the part of many householders in not cleaning the slippery slush from their sidewalks on Sunday, making pedestrianism difficult for those who were unfortunate enough to have to be out of doors A reader of the Press has written that he was "astonished, indeed disgusted, to see how many people who are ordinarily respectable and respected, had shown so little civic pride and so little regard for the comfort of others. I passed over such walks in front of the houses of lawyers, ministers, brokers and others, people who take an interest in city politics and run for office, who preach the gospel, who help support the hospital and other charities, who work for the Belgian refugees." The protest is a fair one, and it is to be hoped that if our people are not more thoughtful at the time of the next storm they will receive a gentle hint from the police, who need but call attention to the ordinance in order to do away with all cause for complaint

Saturday's contributed editorial is being prepared by a man who has never written for the Press before but whose ability has gained for him an enviable position with a great weekly publication. It will take up a local topic, and tell Plainfielders how they can help make a lot of their fellow citizens happy.

F. E. Smith is Chosen Superintendent for Thirteenth Consecutive Year.

Fred E. Smith was elected superintendent of Trinity Reformed Sunday school for the thirteenth consecutive year at the annual meeting of the officers and teachers of the Sunday school held in the church parlors last night. The meeting was preceded by the annual supper in charge of the Band of Workers, assisted by several of the girls of the Sunday school who acted as waitresses. The tables were decorated with yellow chrysanthemums.

F. E. Smith acted as toastmaster. The report of James Conkling, treasurer of the Sunday school, was read and showed a balance after the year's expenditures. The election of the officers for the ensuing year was as follows F. E. Smith, superintendent; E. F. Sheppard, assistant superintendent; W. F. Oliver, second assistant superintendent; Mrs. L. S. Smith, superintendent of intermediate department; Miss Mable Wilson, superintendent of junior department; Mrs. J. M. Sheppard; assistant presenter, Philip Vroom; pianist, Miss S. Etta Raybert; assistant pianist, Miss Jeanette Neal; H. P. Seader, chairman of the missionary committee.

Following the business meeting reports from the delegates who attended the recent State Sunday School Convention at Newark were read. Thos who gave reports were Mrs. L. S. Smith, Miss Mable Wilson, Miss Winifred Rapalje, who is teacher of the Trinity Teacher Training Class, Mrs. H. M. Cooke, A. W. Dunavan and H. P. Seader. Mr. Smith introduced Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., who is a member of the Trinity Consistory, and he commended the school on its excellent work in the past year and also in the years before.

Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of the church, gave a very interesting and stirring talk on "Evangelism" the all important work of the Sunday school. E. F. Sheppard was also called on for a few words. The Sunday school orchestra, which consists of about fifteen pieces, were present and played during the evening.

A general discussion which was introduced by Russell Doeringer, was held concerning changing the time of meeting from the afternoon to the morning all the year around as many of the other Sunday schools in the city have done. Mrs. George Schlereth gave statistics showing the increase in attendance in the morning services in Union county, but action on the matter was deferred until the January meeting.

A Famous Saying.

When the great Napoleon was about to reach Paris on the way back from the disastrous Russian campaign he exclaimed, "Du sublime au ridicule il n'y a qu'un pas" (from the sublime to the ridiculous there is but a step). Such is the generally received opinion as to the origin of the famous saying, although some authorities attribute the remark to the great historian, Longinus of the third century.—New York Journal.

A Long Shot.

In a certain textbook on arithmetic which was designed for use in schools appears the following ingenious problem: "A cannon ball travels 540 feet in one second How far will it be from the muzzle of the gun after the lapse of thirty-five minutes?"—New York Post.

Sitting in the New York county branch of the New York Supreme Court, Justice Charles L. Guy yesterday granted an interlocutory decree of divorce to Mrs. Clara A. The decree gives the plaintiff the custody of their twelve-year-old child, Myrtle, and the right to marry after the final ruling, although this privilege is denied the defendant.

The Kettenrings were married in New Brunswick, but until a year ago resided in North Plainfield. Mrs. Kettenring established her home in New York after the separation and lives there at the present time.

NEW ASTOR THEATRE READY FOR OPENING

Elaborate Finishing Touches Being Put on Up-to-date Motion Picture House.

Finishing touches are being put on the extensive remodeling that has been going on for the past year to the Astor theatre on West Front street and when the new playhouse opens its doors to the public Thursday afternoon, December 16 it will be one of the most up-to-date motion picture houses of its kind in this section. Daily programs with one show in the afternoon and two at night will feature the best moving pictures obtainable and the fact that the management has not tied up his contracts with any one company assures Plainfield lovers of films of a varied selection of the latest and most popular scenarios. Twice each week the program will include some of the most successful operatic productions and these features promise much in the way of entertainment for local theatre goers.

The interior decorations of the new playhouse are particularly attractive and ample provisions has been made for every need. One of the outstanding features is a modernly equipped lobby and its adjoining ladies' room and men's smoking parlor. During the afternoon and evening performances a maid will be in charge of the ladies' room and patrons will be treated with a policy of courteousness established by Joseph M. Coven, of Paterson, who is the owner of the new place.

The ceiling in the Front street lobby is decorated with an antique bronze effect and the side pillasters with the panels of the sidewalls are correspondent with the ceilings and bronze moldings. The ceiling is tinted with shaded colors.

The women's room will have a cream colored ceiling with stencil decorations. The sidewalls are panelled, and are of a pink shade. The auditorium ceiling is finished in light cream with twelve panels and a twenty inch cove in the Adams style. The sidewalls contain about thirty panels on each side which are tinted in old rose effect.

The house has provisions for 750 persons and will cater principally to women and children. An expensive pipe organ and a three piece orchestra will furnish the musical program All of the doors and windows are draped.

LECTURE BY CELEBRATED TRAVELER AND EXPLORER

The fourth of the popular series of free entertainments which the Board of Education is giving the public this winter will take place at the Washington School auditorium, Thursday night, and will consist of an illustrated lecture by the celebrated traveller and explorer, Harry C. Ostrander, who has a wide reputation as an entertainer of unusual merit.

The lecture covers Southern Spain, Morocco, Algeria, the Sahara Dessert, Italy, Sicily, Turkey, Syria, Palestine, Egypt, Ceylon, India, Burma, Java, the Malay Peninsular, China and Japan. It is appropriately called "Around the World In Ninety Minutes," and will be illustrated by several hundred stereopticon slides, most of which are prepared from photographs made by the lecturer during his world-wide travels.

Mr. Ostrander knows the Far East intimately, and his lectures are famous for the interesting anecdotes of his adventures among the many strange peoples in whose countries he has lived. The lecture will begin promptly at 8 o'clock p. m.

Temperance
NEWS AND VIEWS
Conducted by THE W. C. T. U.

The fight for nation-wide prohibition is to be pressed at the next session of Congress. The war in Europe and the action of Russia, Germany, France, and England in opposition to the use of liquor by their men in the field, the pronouncement of Russia for no further liquor sales in that country, give a powerful onward impetus to the prohibition wave in the United States. Throughout the world the baneful effects of intoxicants are being more clearly recognized than ever before in the history of mankind. And viewing things there is ample ground for the feeling that it will not be so many years in the future before this entire country will have banished liquor. And when this has been done America will be a better country.—Raleigh (N. C.) Observer.

It stands to reason that all the congressmen and senators from the fourteen States which have adopted prohibition would feel compelled to vote for a national measure of this kind, in order to keep in harmony with the majority of the voters in their States. There is no disguising the fact that the trend in this country is towards the abolition of the liquor business, and if Congress could be induced to take a hand in it, we might wake up any morning and find the entire traffic eliminated so far as the United States is concerned.—Butte (Mont.) Miner.

Owners of the leading breweries in the State, it is understood, are preparing to take some action to protect their property. It is probable that they will convert their plants into other industries. It is said that one brewery at Astoria will be transformed into a salmon-packing plant. Others in the State, it is said, will become ice manufacturing plants. It is reported also, that some of the business locations in Portland now occupied by saloons and that were so boldly proclaimed "for rent after November 3 if the State goes dry," already are being sought by mercantile establishments of various kinds.—Portland Oregonian.

Prohibition is inevitable. From this time forward its battles will be rear-guard engagements with the discouraged and demoralized forces of a business that is so bad that no right thinking man will defend it.—Waco (Tex.) News.

In the State of Ohio, "Home Rule" won by 8,300 votes. That majority is pitiful, when it is contemplated from a sane viewpoint. It means that Cincinnati, notorious for its breweries, distilleries and liquor violators, opened forty-five dry counties in this State to booze.—South Liverpool (O.) Tribune.

An Associated Press dispatch dated from Petrograd throws this light upon conditions existing in Russia since the sale of vodka was prohibited by the Czar:

"The word prohibition must be taken literally. It means that a vast population which consumed $1,000,000,000 worth of vodka a year, whose ordinary condition has been described by Russians themselves as ranging from a slight degree of stimulation upward, has been lifted almost in one day from a drunken inertia to sobriety.

"On that day when the mobilization of the Russian army began, special policemen visited every public place where vodka is sold, locked up the supply of liquor, and placed on the shop the imperial seal.

"From the day this step was taken drunkenness vanished in Russia. The results are seen, at once in the peasantry: already they are beginning to look like a different race. The marks of suffering, the pinched looks of illness and improper nourishment have gone from their faces.

"In Petrograd and Moscow the effect of these improved conditions is startling. Things are so different to day that unattended women may now pass at night through portions of these cities where it was formerly dangerous even for men. Minor crimes and misdemeanors have almost vanished.

"This miracle has been accomplished by one man. He is Michael D. Tchelisheff, a peasant by birth, originally a house painter by profession, then mayor of the city of Samara, and now a millionaire.

"Speaking of his work Mr. Tchelisheff said: 'I was reared in a small Russian village. There were no schools or hospitals or any of the improvements we are accustomed to in civilized communities. I picked up an education from old newspapers and stray books. One day I chanced upon a book which treated of the harmfulness of alcohol. It stated among other things that vodka was a poison. I was so impressed with this, knowing that everybody drank vodka, that I asked the first physician I met if the statement were true. He said yes.

"'At Samara I decided to more than passively disapprove of vadko. At this time I was an alderman, and many of the tenants living in my houses were workingmen. One night a drunken husband in one of my houses killed his wife. This incident made such a terrible impression on me that I decided to fight vodka with all my strength.

"'On the supposition that the government was selling vodka for the revenue, I calculated the revenue received from its consumption in Samara. I then introduced a bill in the City Council providing that the city give this sum of money to the imperial treasury, requesting at the same time that the sale of vodka be prohibited. This bill passed and the money was appropriated. It was offered to the government, but the government promptly refused it. It then dawned upon me that the bureaucracy did not want the people to become sober, for the reason that it was easier to rule autocratically a drunken mob than a sober people."

Over 47,000,000 of the population of the United States live under prohibition.

Over 71 per cent. of the area is prohibition territory. One-half of all the people now living in license territory, live in four States—New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and New Jersey.

One-fourth of all the people in the United States who live in saloon territory, live in six cities—New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Boston, Cleveland.

There are fewer saloons south of the Mason and Dixon line altogether than there are in the city of Chicago.

The fourteen prohibition States are: Maine, Kansas, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Mississippi, Georgia, North Carolina, Tennessee, West Virginia, Virginia, Colorado, Oregon, Washington, Arizona.

Eastern football has Haughton of Harvard, Sharpe of Cornell and Folwell of W. and J. as great coaches of 1914. In the west Zuppke of Illinois and Stiehm of Nebraska stand forth as the year's wonder workers. Their success overshadows Yost's great work for the time being. But the list of gridiron wizards doesn't end with these men. The south has a coach who must be counted in on any glory that is to be passed around. He's Mike Donahue, coach of Alabama Poly at Auburn, Ala. Donahue, a Yale product, has just rounded out his fifth year at Auburn. In those five seasons Auburn has lost only one intercollegiate association game, that to Georgia in 1912. His teams have totaled 700 points against 80 for their opponents. Donahue's most notable triumphs were achieved at the expense of Vanderbilt. The Vanderbilt team that tied Harvard in 1912 could do no better than tie Auburn. Auburn then defeated Vanderbilt 14 to 6 in 1913, and 6 to 0 in 1914.

Intersectional football games will probably become the popular fad next fall. Twelve were played this season. There will be twenty and probably more in 1915. The intersectional football games played this fall were on something of an experimental order. The experiment proved highly successful. Every game in which east met west was a big financial success. Yale and Harvard staged games with Notre Dame and Michigan this year. Princeton had no game with a big western eleven, but it is almost certain that the Tigers' 1915 schedule will call for a meeting between Princeton and one or possibly two western teams.

President Barney Dreyfuss defends Muggsy McGraw, who has been accused of tampering with Ed Konetchy. "McGraw did not tamper with Konetchy," says the Pirate owner. "He wanted to talk to him and we gave our consent. McGraw offered $15,000 for him, but I could not afford to lay myself open to the unjust charge that I was helping the Giants to win the pennant. It paid us to sacrifice that purchase money, rather than have the people think we bartered a principle. Konev would have been a Giant about the middle of August had something more advantageous than cash been offered."

Freddie Welsh says he would rather fight Jimmy Duffy, the Buffalo lightweight, than Charley White. Says Welsh: "Duffy is the cleanest fighter I ever have met. He never tries to take unfair advantage of an opponent. He is a bit awkward, but at the same time is clever. He has a long left that makes a fellow as mad as a hornet when he tries to evade it and can't. Charley White isn't as hard to hit as Duffy and his style is more puzzling."

Illinois high school athletic authorities find themselves forced to adopt regulations to prevent athletes from jumping. Football players in particular are said to be in need of such regulation. Rival schools have been in the habit of making all sorts of inducements in order to coax players to jump. In some cases positions for the boys' fathers have made it possible for the players' families to move from one town to another. It is proposed to adopt a state rule requiring players to establish a one-year residence before being allowed to compete for the schools which they attend.

Minor leagues are sharpening up their pruning knives preparatory to reducing expenses next season, and the umpires are going to feel the blades the same as the players. Many minor leagues that have been working the double umpire system for years will prune down to four or five men. The Southern league, a class A organization, will reduce expenses $1,000 per month by cutting its umpire staff in two.

The report that Charlie Herzog would give way to Miller Huggins has proved a fake. A report from Cincinnati says that last year's popular Red leader accepted Cincinnati's terms a month ago. Herzog is a man with too many ideals and too much fighting spirit to be cast off after one unfair trail of a year during which the Federal league interfered with the best-laid plans of the ex-Giant.

RUBE MARQUARD SWEARS DEAL WAS A LEGAL ONE

Chicago, Dec. 8.—An affidavit in which R. W. Marquard declares he is under no binding contract with any team other than the Brooklyn Federals was received in the office of President Gilmore, yesterday, attached to the document in which the New York pitcher agrees to play for the Wards.

The affidavit was made out in the office of John M. Barber, a notary of Westchester county, New York. Gilmore displayed the affidavit as an answer to charges that Marquard was under contract with the New York Nationals, hence could not legally join the Brooklyn team.

N. Y. U. L. S. IS DUTCH.

The New York University Law School basketball team, which has been one of the best and strongest opponents of the local Y. M. C. A. team for the past two years, "put one over" on the representative five of the N. Y. U. recently, when a game was scheduled by the manager of the Law School five with West Point. The manager of the Army team thought he had arranged a match with the varsity quintet and there was some trouble getting the matter straightened out. The matter will be taken before the Athletic Council.

BASEBALL PLAYERS ARE GOOD BASKETBALL SHOTS

Frank Bruggy and Jimmy Clinton, both of whom are well known in local baseball circles, have succeeded in maintaining their places for the week in the individual standings of the players in the New York State Basketball League, of which both are members. Clinton is hanging on to third place, two points ahead of the player claiming fourth place. Jimmy is a forward and plays on the Cohoes five, which occupies third place in the league standing. To date he has made 42 field goals and 28 fouls in fifteen games.

Bruggy is a guard and has made a total of 84 tallies for the Gloversville aggregation in 16 games. The points are divided into 29 field goals and 16 fouls.

BASEBALL CAUSES 35 DEATHS.

Chicago, Dec. 8.—Figures compiled here show that thirty-five deaths were caused by baseball last season. Of the players who died from injuries twenty were hit by pitched balls, five were struck by bats, one was killed in a fight, one was hurt sliding and four died of over-exertion.

Duffy put his team back in the running, and ahead of their opponents with a 205, while Strappe, of the Parrots, hit for 200, and Taylor, of the other five, went up to 222. The Parrots won the game, the scores being 918 and 879.

The second game was the hardest of the three and Duffy's 213 helped out greatly in carrying the Parrots to the front by a small margin. Strappe, of the Parrots, made high score of the match in the last contest, when he registered a 223, which was one point higher than Taylor's mark in the first game. McInerney, of the Peacocks, scored a 204 in this roll. Tobin was given his average of 145 in each of the three settos, and Duffy had an average of 206.1 for the three games.

Tomorrow night the Crows will play the Hawks.

MORE PRACTICE FOR VARSITY.

Supervising Principal D. Fred Aungst, of the borough schools, has re-arranged the schedule for the use of the Saengerbund Hall by the various teams of the High School, so that the boys' first team will have more time to practice. Mr. Aungst has taken a great interest in basketball, and is doing everything possible to help putting out championship teams. Some of the time that has previously been given to the grades has been given to the varsity squads and the grades schedules changed.

UPSALA SWELLING UP.

Manager VanMater, of the North Plainfield High School basketball team, received a telephone message from the manager of the Upsala College five, that North Plainfield was scheduled to play today, cancelling the game. The reason he gave for the cancellation was because North Plainfield was a High School team and the Upsala fellows had lately become very prejudiced against playing teams other than colleges or academies.

BOUND BROOK AGAIN.

The prospects for a good gym team at Rutgers College this year are extra bright and the New Brunswick performers expect to show up well in intercollegiate matches. Richardson, of Bound Brook, will again be on the squad and is the best club swinger in the institution and he is expected to win this event this year. Last year he was ill and could not take part in the meet.

RAHWAY WILL LOSE PLAYERS.

Nine members of the Rahway High School championship football team that gave Plainfield High School its first defeat of the season on Parker Field, will be among the missing when the eleven takes the field next year. All but two of the first string men will be graduated in June and a new squad will have to be trained to defend the title next season.

STINE CHALLENGES ROYAL T. PHILLIPS

But "Hub" Appears to Have the Two "Phillips" Mixed in His Reply.

Herbert Stine, who refereed the Holy Cross-Viking football game on Cricket Field two weeks ago, makes the following reply to Royal T. Phillips, who took exception to one of his decision in that contest:

"Some people are born crabbers!

"According to the article in your Wednesday night's paper, Royal T. Phillips doesn't come far from being one, inasmuch as he wishes to start an argument regarding one of my decisions made in the Holy Cross-Viking game.

"In the first place, how does it compare with the decision he made in the recent Holy Cross-Franklin game?

"As I understand it, Phillips was supposed to referee the game, whether he thought it a too stiff a proposition or not and came late to the field is another question. Anyhow, he wasn't to be found on the field when it was time to start the game. The coach then naturally started to look around for someone to pick upon. After some hesitating on my part they decided to go by my rulings. Understand, I didn't go to the field to criticise, but to witness the game. As for the 'Shop in Plainfield' motto, I can say that it is a good one and further, regarding the terms I received, I will say that it was spent in Plainfield at the station. It didn't take me much further than New York, by the way.

"I admit that I made some minor mistakes in handling the game, not only the one mentioned in your columns. Has any referee yet gone through any game without meeting with some difficulties, and in the end finding that some of his decisions were not doubted? At the present time I can give you a couple instances noticed in the P. H. S.-Alumni game. Thanksgiving morning which could have been improved upon. What's the use? Anyone is liable to make mistakes. If this was the most costly decision I made that he saw, I think he had better look over the rules too.

"Therefore, to Royal T. Phillips I would give this little advice: Do not criticise so much. I do not place myself with a first rate official, but I do mean to be fair. Saturday's game was my first attempt to referee a football game, and I value the experience a great sight more than the money received. If it is the little change you are bawling about kindly let me know, probably I can help you out, even though I am still a student. According to my receipts of the game, you should be worrying about the little brownies. Keep it up, you know it is the little things in life that count.

"In closing, I wish to say that I am indeed sorry that I caused so much trouble and if there are any further arguments I will be in town for a week after Christmas and would be glad to consider them personally, and oblige. I am.

"Yours in Sport,

"H. A. STINE."

N. P. H. S. HOME GAME.

After receiving word from the management of Upsala College that the game between the North Plainfield High School and Upsala must be cancelled, Manager Van Mater, of the borough five, hustled around and secured a midweek home attraction and the Roselle Park High School team will appear in Saengerbund Hall tomorrow afternoon. The game will start at 3:30 o'clock. The team will go to Woodbridge next Friday and play the High School team of that place.

BENDER SIGNS CONTRACT.

Baltimore, Dec. 8.—At a meeting of the Baltimore Federal League officials yesterday, it was officially announced that Pitcher Bender, formerly of the Athletics and who signed a Fed contract last week, has been assigned to Baltimore.

ELKS IN NEW YORK.

The Plainfield Senior Elks bowlers will go to New York tonight and roll three games with the "Bills" of that place. Captain Nash and his regulars will leave Plainfield on the 5:11 train.

The Daily Press will be glad to have its attention called to any misleading or untrue statement, if such should appear at any time in an advertisement in its columns.

Readers are requested to assist in protecting themselves and legitimate advertisers.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

"Upsala College athletes have recently become prejudiced against playing any but college basketball teams," says the Upsala manager in a letter to Manager Van Mater, of N. P. H. S., cancelling the game scheduled for this afternoon. Sport stock in the Kenilworth institution must have taken one big jump during the last few days. Taking into consideration the fact that Leal School prevented the collegians from annexing more than a four point lead a couple of days ago we fail to see any reason for this sudden swelling of the Swedish craniums. In fact we're inclined to believe "cold feet" is an affliction suffered by the Upsala boys.

"Hub" Stine breaks into print with a "come-back" at Royal T. Phillips' article, adding that if we won't publish it for him he will take the matter up with other news starved scribes. Although his threats sent a cold chill running up and down our spinal columns we waded through the letter and from a "once-over" standpoint think that he is sadly mixed. The best thing to do is to forget those petty grievances, "Hub", old boy, you're only opening old wounds.

Plainfield High School basketball players dedicate their fine new gymnasium tomorrow afternoon with the Somerville schoolboys as their opponents. The P. H. S. squad looks pretty good in print and many are anxious to get a glimpse of it in the initial fray.

Now that all of the prodigals have been returned to the N. P. H. S we expect a general settling down over in "Canada." Captain Abrams has been treated to his ups and downs in the way of material this season, but now seems to have the one best bet for a regular lineup.

The initial Intercholastic League fracas is not far distant and the rival forces will soon have to start tuning up for the event. Leals and North Plainfield usher in the season's race this year.

Track athletics are certainly booming in the Ninth street institution. Jack Fritts' advent into the P. H. S. camp has started things humming and some cracking good exhibitions are being arranged by Manager Schenck.

An exchange refers in the following terms to the N. P. H. S.-Woodbridge game Friday night: "Indications are that the Woodbridge team will appear much stronger this week than it did against the Keyport five last week. For this reason it will be necessary to meet some strong opponents." Therefore the Woodbridge clan have singled out the boroughites to hand a defeat to. Yougottahandit to Woodbridge for the courage stuff.

A Metropolitan scribe says:—"Not in years has New Jersey seen so many snakes as have glided over her soil during the last five or six months." All of which goes to substantiate the fact that Jersey is not the "driest" State in the Union.

P. H. S. READY FOR INITIAL CONTEST

Team That Will Play Somerville on Local Court Has Been Picked.

The Plainfield High School basketball team will play its first regular game on the new court tomorrow afternoon and the Somerville High School five will have the honor of being the first out of town team to play on this floor. The local squad has been practicing hard for the opening game and has taken part in several hard practice scrimmages which have put them in shape for the game.

Coach Patch has thinned out the squad and now has only sixteen players which will be divided into the first and second teams. The new suits were given out yesterday and the following players were credited with them: Captain McNamee, Rosenson, Chamberlain, Wheelan, Peacock, Ryder and Coudray. The five players that have been picked by Captain Dan McNamee and the coach to start the season against the Somerville basketeers are Rosenson and McNamee, forwards; Chamberlain, center; Wheelan and Peacock, guards.

The other members of the squad, who will continue to report for practice and play against the first string men, are H. Peacock, Noonan, Canter, Aipaugh, Coudray, O'Leary, Hirsch, Dunham.

gium are claimed in the official statement issued by the French war office at 3 o'clock this afternoon. It is as follows:

"During the day of the seventh the enemy showed himself more actively than on the preceding day in the region of the Yser and in the vicinity of Ypres. Our artillery, however, repulsed all attacks.

"In the region of Arras a brilliant attack put us, as we have already announced, in possession of Vermelles. Vermelles has been for nearly two months the scene of a bitter struggle. The enemy took possession of it on October 16, and from October 21 to 25 succeeded in forcing us back from that locality. Since October 25 our sapping and mining operations have brought us step by step to its very outskirts, and on December first we carried the park and chateau.

"In the region of the Aisne and Champaign a few artillery duels have occurred. Our heavy artillery dispersed several formations of the enemy.

"In the Argonne, in the forest of LaGruire and to the northwest of Pont a Mousson, in the forest of Le Pretre, we have gained some ground. Along the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

London, Dec. 8.—A Russian force numbering 270,000, under command of the Bulgarian general, Radko Dimitrieff, is reported to have arrived before Cracow and to have begun a bombardment of the suburbs to the southeast of the city, according to a dispatch from The Hague. The Austrian forces have withdrawn into the Bartfeld pass in the Carpathians.

The Central News reports that outer forts to the north of Cracow have already been destroyed.

While the situation around Lodz is not yet clear, it appears that both sides are establishing themselves in trenches, which is not difficult as the front has broken and rainy weather set in.

The battle line from East Prussia to Cracow is 300 miles long. Eleven German army corps are said to be around Lodz.

Everywhere the situation is satisfactory to the Russians. The business of the Russian troops in Poland is merely to hold their line. Meanwhile, in East Prussian and Cracow, the Russians are pushing forward vigorously.

In East Prussian the most important feature is the siege of the fortress of Lotzen, which the Russians left untaken on their earlier dash into East Prussia, thereby enabling the Germans later to turn the tables on the invaders.

South of Cracow the Russians are advancing steadily, while the movement into Hungary progresses at a satisfactory rate.

Ostend is reported on fire. The cause is not known, but is reported to have started by incendiaries or by bombardment of ships.

Rome, Dec. 8 (Central News Cable).—The Servian offensive movement was victorious along the entire front and the Servians captured over 5,000 troops in the three days' fighting, according to an official announcement from Nish, the capital of Servia.

Count Tisza, president of the Hungarian Ministry and Hungarian Minister of the Interior, recently visited Germany on the request of the Kaiser, who desired an interview, according to the correspondent of the Tribuna at Budapest. The German Emperor attempted to pursuade Count Tizsa to make the most complete concessions to the Roumanians in Transylvania as a means of averting the entrance of Roumania into the war. The Kaiser's effort failed as the Hungarian cabinet member declared that fresh and further concessions to the Roumanians in that part of Hungary would weaken the Hungarian supremacy.

Petrograd, Dec. 8 (Central News Cable).—That the German army lost in the recent fighting between the Warta and the Vistula Rivers, 100,000 in killed and wounded, or one-fifth of their effective fighting force in that vicinity, is the statement of the newspaper Birzheviya Viedomosti. The article adds that a Russian victory near Lodz produced a crushing effect upon the morale of the German troops, that the Germans prisoners are most dejected and that several distinguished German generals narrowly escaped capture. Turkish officers, the newspaper says, were observed among the German troops and it is reported that these officers had come to see the Kaiser to confer with him regarding complaints that the Germans had not supplied ammunition for the German rifles issued to the Turkish troops.

A despatch from King Nicholas, of Montenegro, states that one-third of his army has fallen on the battleground.

Tokio, Dec. 8.—The Japanese Diet opened yesterday with an address by Emperor Yoshihito. In reviewing the situation brought on by the war, after asking for certain legislation, the Emperor said:

"The friendship between Japan and its treaty powers is growing in cordiality, and the British alliance and the French and Russian ententes have been more strongly cemented by bonds stronger than those of mere amity. Japan's army and navy have crushed the enemy, co-operating with our allie, and peace in the Orient is being restored. I rely on the loyalty and bravery of my subjects. Japan must attain the final object as quickly as possible."

Paris, Dec. 8 (Central News Cable).—By forcing the fighting in Poland the Germans hope to save East Prussia and to hinder the operations against Cracow, says a despatch to the Journal from its correspondent in Petrograd. Following this general policy the Germans have sent forward a new army from the vicinity of Kalisz, which is driving the Russian left toward Petrokov and which it is the plan of the Germans will force the Russians to concentrate their forces between the Vistula and Warthe Rivers.

The Germans are desperately attempting to keep the theatre of the struggle in Poland, hoping to force the withdrawal of Russian troops from both the right wing in the Mazurian Lakes region, from the left wing in Galicia and especially before Cracow.

The Germans are said to be suffering terribly in the trenches in Poland, where cold rains have followed the frosts, softening the roads so as to make rapid movements of troops impracticable and the transportation of cannon almost impossible. Despite the announcement from Berlin that the Kaiser has returned from the east front it is reported that he and two of his sons are with the Germans there.

"FASHIONS IN ART" DESCRIBED BY LECTURER

"Fashions in Art" was the subject of an illustrated lecture given by Arthur Hoeber, A. N. A., of New York, before the Monday Afternoon Club in the parish house of the Congregational church yesterday afternoon. Owing to the stormy weather the attendance was small. The illustrations were interesting, describing the fashions in art during past centuries.

Mr. Hoeber said that there are fashions in paintings and pictures just as there are in dress and architecture and he then emphasized the truth of his remarks through attractive pictures. Mr. Hoeber is an interesting talker and his remarks were much enjoyed by all present. The speaker also touched on the "cubist futurists," as an example of artistic work.

PLAY WILL BE GIVEN FOR SCHOLARSHIP FUND

"The Rose and the Ring," a fairy play will be given at the Hartridge Auditorium, tomorrow afternoon and evening by the College club, of Plainfield. The proceeds from the performances will be used for the club's scholarship fund with which to help worthy young women through college. The afternoon performance will be for children and the evening for grown-ups. Tickets can be secured from the members of the club or at the door.

ACCIDENT VICTIM BURIED.

The funeral of Norman H. Force, the young man who was killed in the automobile and train accident at Manville early Saturday morning, was held from his parents' home in New Dover this afternoon, the Rev. C. C. Cain, of the Grace M. E. church, officiating. A large attendance of friends, including representatives of the Zeek Baking Company in this city, by whom the deceased was employed, were present and floral tributes were numerous and beautiful.

MATCH POSTPONED.

The bowling match between the Plainfield and Paterson Junior Elks teams that was to be played at Paterson, Thursday night, has been postponed on the request of the local "Bills."

Gentlemen of the Congress—The session upon which you are now entering will be the closing session of the Sixty-third congress, a congress, I venture to say, which will long be remembered for the great body of thoughtful and constructive work which it has done in loyal response to the thought and needs of the country. I should like in this address to review the notable record and try to make adequate assessment of it, but no doubt we stand too near the work that has been done and are ourselves too much part of it to play the part of historians toward it.

Moreover, our thoughts are now more of the future than of the past. While we have worked at our tasks of peace the circumstances of the whole age have been altered by war. What we have done for our own land and our own people we did with the best that was in us, whether of character or of intelligence, with sober enthusiasm and a confidence in the principles upon which we were acting which sustained us at every step of the difficult undertaking. But it is done. It has passed from our hands. It is now an established part of the legislation of the country. Its usefulness, its effects will disclose themselves in experience. What chiefly strikes us now, as we look about us during these closing days of a year which will be forever memorable in the history of the world, is that we face new tasks, have been facing them these six months, must face them in the months to come—face them without partisan feeling, like men who have forgotten everything but a common duty and the fact that we are representatives of a great people whose thought is not of us, but of what America owes to herself and to all mankind in such circumstances as these upon which we look amazed and anxious.

War has interrupted the means of trade not only, but also the processes of production. In Europe it is destroying men and resources wholesale and upon a scale unprecedented and appalling. There is reason to fear that the time is near, if it be not already at hand, when several of the countries of Europe will find it difficult to do for their people what they have hitherto been always easily able to do—many essential and fundamental things. At any rate, they will need our help and our manifold services as they have never needed them before, and we should be ready, more fit and ready than we have ever been.

It is of equal consequence that the nations whom Europe has usually supplied with innumerable articles of manufacture and commerce of which they are in constant need and without which their economic development halts and stands still can now get only a small part of what they formerly imported and eagerly look to us to supply their all but empty markets. This is particularly true of our own neighbors, the states, great and small, of Central and South America. Their lines of trade have hitherto run chiefly athwart the seas, not to our ports, but to the ports of Great Britain and of the older continent of Europe. I do not stop to inquire why or to make any comment on probable causes. What interests us just now is not the explanation, but the fact and our duty and opportunity in the presence of it. Here are markets which we must supply, and we must find the means of action. The United States, this great people for whom we speak and act, should be ready as never before to serve itself and to serve mankind, ready with its resources, its energies, its forces of production and its means of distribution.

It is a very practical matter, a matter of ways and means. We have the resources, but are we fully ready to use them? And, if we can make ready what we have, have we the means at hand to distribute it? We are not fully ready; neither have we the means of distribution. We are willing, but we are not fully able. We have the wish to serve and to serve greatly, generously. But we are not prepared as we should be. We are not ready to mobilize our resources at once. We are not prepared to use them immediately and at their best, without delay and without waste.

To speak plainly, we have grossly erred in the way in which we have stunted and hindered the development of our merchant marine. And now, when we need ships, we have not got them. We have year after year debated, without end or conclusion, the best policy to pursue with regard to the use of the ores and forests and water powers of our national domain in the rich states of the west, when we should have acted, and they are still locked up. The key is still turned upon them, the door shut fast at which thousands of vigorous men, full of initiative, knock clamorously for admittance. The water power of our navigable streams outside the national domain also, even in the eastern states, where we have worked and planned for generations, is still not used as it might be, because we will and we won't; because the laws we have made do not intelligently balance encouragement against restraint. We withhold by regulation.

I have come to ask you to remedy and correct these mistakes and omissions, even at this short session of a congress which would certainly seem to have done all the work that could reasonably be expected of it. The time and the circumstances are extraordinary, and so must our efforts be upon hesitation and makeshift and formulate a genuine policy of use and conservation in the best sense of those words. We owe the one measure not only to the people of that great western country for whose free and systematic development, as it seems to me, our legislation has done so little, but also to the people of the nation also.

Fortunately two great measures, finely conceived, the one to unlock, with proper safeguards, the resources of the national domain, the other to encourage the use of the navigable waters outside that domain for the generation of power, have already passed the house of representatives and are ready for immediate consideration and action by the senate. With the deepest earnestness I urge their prompt passage. In them both we turn our backs as a whole, and we as clearly owe the other in fulfillment of our repeated promises that the water power of the country should in fact as well as in name be put at the disposal of great industries which can make economical and profitable use of it, the rights of the public being adequately guarded the while and monopoly in the use prevented. To have begun such measures and not completed them would indeed mar the record of this great congress very seriously. I hope and confidently believe that they will be completed.

And there is another great piece of legislation which awaits and should receive the sanction of the senate. I mean the bill which gives a larger measure of self government to the people of the Philippines. How better in this time of anxious questioning and perplexed policy could we show our confidence in the principles of liberty as the source as well as the expression of life; how better could we demonstrate our own self possession and steadfastness in the courses of justice and disinterestedness than by thus going calmly forward to fulfill our promises to a dependent people, who will now look more anxiously than ever to see whether we have indeed the liberality, the unselfishness, the courage, the faith we have boasted and professed? I cannot believe that the senate will let this great measure of constructive justice await the action of another congress. Its passage would nobly crown the record of these two years of memorable labor.

But I think that you will agree with me that this does not complete the roll of our duty. How are we to carry our goods to the empty markets of which I have spoken if we have not the ships? How are we to build up a great trade if we have not the certain and constant means of transportation upon which all profitable and useful commerce depends? And how are we to get the ships if we wait for the trade to develop without them? To correct the many mistakes by which we have discouraged and all but destroyed the merchant marine of the country, to retrace the steps by which we have, it seems almost deliberately, withdrawn our flag from the seas, except where, here and there, a ship of war is bidden carry it or some wandering yacht displays it, would take a long time and involve many detailed items of legislation, and the trade which we ought immediately to handle would disappear or find other channels while we debated the items.

The case is not unlike that which confronted us when our own continent was to be opened up to settlement and industry, and we needed long lines of railway, extended means of transportation prepared beforehand, if development was not to lag intolerably and wait interminably. We lavishly subsidized the building of transcontinental railroads. We look back upon that with regret now, because the subsidies led to many scandals of which we are ashamed, but we know that the railroads had to be built, and if we had it to do over again we should of course build them, but in another way. Therefore I propose another way of providing the means of transportation, which must precede, not tardily follow, the development of our trade with our neighbor states of America. It may seem a reversal of the natural order of things, but it is true, that the routes of trade must be actually opened—by many ships and regular sailings and moderate charges—before streams of merchandise will flow freely and profitably through them.

Hence the pending shipping bill, discussed at the last session, but as yet passed by neither house. In my judgment such legislation is imperatively needed and cannot wisely be postponed. The government must open these gates of trade, and open them wide, open them before it is altogether profitable to open them or altogether reasonable to ask private capital to open them at a venture. It is not a question of the government monopolizing the field. It should take action to make it certain that transportation at reasonable rates will be promptly provided, even where the carriage is not at first profitable, and then, when the carriage has become sufficiently profitable to attract and engage private capital and engage it in abundance, the government ought to withdraw. I very earnestly hope that the congress will be of this opinion and that both houses will adopt this exceedingly important bill.

The great subject of rural credits still remains to be dealt with, and it is a matter of deep regret that the difficulties of the subject have seemed to render it impossible to complete a bill for passage at this session. But it cannot be perfected yet, and therefore there are no other constructive measures the necessity for which I will at this time call your attention to, but I would be negligent of a very manifest duty were I not to call the attention of the senate to the fact that the proposed convention for safety at sea awaits its confirmation and that the limit fixed in the convention itself for its acceptance is the last day of the present month. The conference in which this convention originated was called by the United States. The representatives of the United States played a very influential part indeed in framing the provisions of the proposed convention, and those provisions are in themselves for the most part admirable. It would hardly be consistent with the part we have played in the whole matter to let it drop and go by the board as if forgotten and neglected. It was ratified in May last by the German government and in August by the parliament of Great Britain. It marks a most hopeful and decided advance in international civilization. We should show our earnest good faith in a great matter by adding our own acceptance of it.

There is another matter of which I must make special mention, if I am to discharge my conscience, lest it should escape your attention. It may seem a very small thing. It affects only a single item of appropriation. But many human lives and many great enterprises hang upon it. It is the matter of making adequate provision for the survey and charting of our coasts. It is immediately pressing and exigent in connection with the immense coast line of Alaska, a coast line greater than that of the United States themselves, though it is also very important indeed with regard to the older coasts of the continent.

We cannot use our great Alaskan domain, ships will not ply thither, if those coasts and their many hidden dangers are not thoroughly surveyed and charted. The work is incomplete at almost every point. Ships and lives have been lost in threading what were supposed to be well known main channels. We have not provided adequate vessels or adequate machinery for the survey and charting. We have used old vessels that were not big enough or strong enough and which were so nearly unseaworthy that our inspectors would not have allowed private owners to send them to sea. This is a matter which, as I have said, seems small, but is in reality very great. Its importance has only to be looked into to be appreciated.

Before I close may I say a few words upon two topics much discussed out of doors upon which it is highly important that our judgments should be clear, definite and steadfast?

One of these is economy in government expenditures. The duty of economy is not debatable. It is manifest and imperative. In the appropriations we pass we are spending the money of the great people whose servants we are—not our own. We are trustees and responsible stewards in the spending. The only thing debatable and upon which we should be careful to make our thought and purpose clear is the kind of economy demanded of us. I assert with the greatest confidence that the people of the United States are not jealous of the amount their government costs if they are sure that they get what they need and desire for the outlay, that the money is being spent for objects of which they approve and that it is being applied with good business sense and management.

Governments grow piecemeal both in their tasks and in the means by which those tasks are to be performed, and very few governments are organized, I venture to say, as wise and experienced business men would organize them if they had a clean sheet of paper to write upon. Certainly the government of the United States is not. I think that it is generally agreed that there should be a systematic reorganization and reassembling of its parts so as to secure greater efficiency and effect considerable savings in expense. But the amount of money saved in that way would, I believe, though no doubt considerable in itself, running, it may be, into the millions, be relatively small—small, I mean, in proportion to the total necessary outlays of the government. It would be thoroughly worth effecting, as every saving would, great or small.

Our duty is not altered by the scale of the saving. But my point is that the people of the United States do not wish to curtail the activities of this government. They wish, rather, to enlarge them, and with every enlargement, with the mere growth, indeed, of the country itself, there must come, of course, the inevitable increase of expense. The sort of economy we ought to practice may be effected, and ought to be effected, by a careful study and assessment of the tasks to be performed, and the money spent ought to be made to yield the best possible returns in efficiency and achievement. And, like good stewards, we should so account for every dollar of our appropriations as to make it perfectly evident what it was spent for and in what way it was spent.

It is not expenditure but extravagance that we should fear being criticised for, not paying for the legitimate enterprises and undertakings of a great government whose people command what it should do, but adding what will benefit only a few or pouring money out for what need not have been undertaken at all or might have been postponed or better and more economically conceived and carried out. The nation is not niggardly; it is very generous. It will chide us only if we forget for whom we pay money out and whose money it is we pay. These are large and general standards but they are not very difficult of application to particular cases.

The other topic I shall take leave to mention goes deeper into the principles of our national life and policy. It is the subject of national defense.

It cannot be discussed without first answering some very searching questions. It is said in some quarters that we are not prepared for war. What is meant by being prepared? Is it meant that we are not ready upon brief notice to put a nation in the field, a nation of men trained to arms? Of course we are not ready to do that, and we shall never be in time of peace so long as we retain our present political principles and institutions. And what is it that it is suggested we should be prepared to do—to defend ourselves against attack? We have always found means to do that and shall find them whenever it is necessary without calling our people away from their necessary tasks to render compulsory military service in times of peace.

Allow me to speak with great plainness and directness upon this great matter and to avow my convictions with deep earnestness. I have tried to know what America is, what her people think, what they are, what they most cherish and hold dear. I hope that some of their finer passions are in my own heart—some of the great conceptions and desires which gave birth to this government and which have made the voice of this people a voice of peace and hope and liberty among the peoples of the world, and that, speaking my own thoughts, I shall, at least in part, speak theirs also, however faintly and inadequately, upon this vital matter.

We are at peace with all the world. No one who speaks counsel based on fact or drawn from a just and candid interpretation of realities can say that there is reason to fear that from any quarter our independence or the integrity of our territory is threatened. Dread of the power of any other nation we are incapable of. We are not jealous of rivalry in the fields of commerce or of any other peaceful achievement. We mean to live our own lives as we will, but we mean also to let live. We are, indeed, a true friend to all the nations of the world, because we threaten none, covet the possessions of none, desire the overthrow of none.

Our friendship can be accepted and is accepted without reservation, because it is offered in a spirit and for a purpose which no one need ever question or suspect. Therein lies our greatness. We are the champions of peace and of concord. And we should be very jealous of this distinction which we have sought to earn. Just now we should be particularly jealous of it, because it is our dearest present hope that this character and reputation may presently, in God's providence, bring us an opportunity such as has seldom been vouchsafed any nation, the opportunity to counsel and obtain peace in the world and reconciliation and a healing settlement of many a matter that has cooled and interrupted the friendship of nations. This is the time above all others when we should wish and resolve to keep our strength by self possession, our influence by preserving our ancient principles of action.

From the first we have had a clear and settled policy with regard to military establishments. We never have had, and while we retain our present principles and ideals we never shall have, a large standing army. If asked, Are you ready to defend yourselves? we reply, Most assuredly; to the utmost. And yet we shall not turn America into a military camp. We will not ask our young men to spend the best years of their lives making soldiers of themselves. There is another sort of energy in us. It will know how to declare itself and make itself effective should occasion arise. And especially when half the world is on fire we shall be careful to make our moral insurance against the spread of the conflagration very definite and certain and adequate indeed.

Let us remind ourselves, therefore, of the only thing we can do or will do. We must depend in every time of national peril, in the future as in the past, not upon a standing army nor yet upon a reserve army, but upon a citizenry trained and accustomed to arms.

It will be right enough, right American policy, based upon our accustomed principles and practices, to provide a system by which every citizen who will volunteer for the training may be made familiar with the use of modern arms, the rudiments of drill and maneuver and the maintenance and sanitation of camps. We should encourage such training and make it a means of discipline which our young men will learn to value.

It is right that we should provide it not only, but that we should make it as attractive as possible, and so induce our young men to undergo it at such times as they can command a little freedom and can seek the physical development they need, for mere health's sake, if for nothing more. Every means by which such things can be stimulated is legitimate, and such a method smacks of true American ideas. It is right, too, that the national guard of the states should be developed and strengthened by every means which is not inconsistent with our obligations to our own people or with the established policy of our government, and this also not because the time or occasion specially calls for such measures, but because it should be our constant policy to make these provisions for our national peace and safety.

More than this carries with it a reversal of the whole history and character of our polity. More than this, proposed at this time, permit me to say, would mean merely that we had lost our self possession, that we had been thrown off our balance by a war with which we have nothing to do, whose causes cannot touch us, whose very existence affords us opportunities of friendship and disinterested service which should make us ashamed of any thought of hostility or fearful preparation for trouble. This is assuredly the opportunity for which a people and a government like ours were raised up, the opportunity not only to speak, but actually to embody and exemplify the counsels of peace and amity and the lasting concord which is based on justice and fair and generous dealing.

A powerful navy we have always regarded as our proper and natural means of defense, and it has always been of defense that we have thought, never of aggression or of conquest. But who shall tell us how what sort of navy to build? We shall take leave to be strong upon the seas in the future as in the past, and there will be no thought of offense or of provocation in that. Our ships are our natural bulwarks. When will the experts tell us just what kind we should construct, and when will they be right for ten years together, if the relative efficiency of craft of different kinds and uses continues to change as we have seen it change under our very eyes in these last few months?

But I turn away from the subject. It is not new. There is no new need to discuss it. We shall not alter our attitude toward it because some among us are nervous and excited. We shall easily and sensibly agree upon a policy of defense. The question has not changed its aspects because the times are not normal. Our policy will not be for an occasion. It will be conceived as a permanent and settled thing which we will pursue at all seasons without haste and after a fashion perfectly consistent with the peace of the world, the abiding friendship of states and the unhampered freedom of all with whom we deal. Let there be no misconception. The country has been misinformed. We have not been negligent of national defense. We are not unmindful of the great responsibility resting upon us. We shall learn and profit by the lesson of every experience and every new circumstance, and what is needed will be adequately done.

I close, as I began, by reminding you of the great tasks and duties of peace which challenge our best powers and invite us to build what will last, the tasks to which we can address ourselves now and at all time with free hearted zest and with all the finest gifts of constructive wisdom we possess. To develop our life and our resources, to supply our own people and the people of the world as their need arises from the abundant plenty of our fields and our marts of trade, to enrich the commerce of our own states and of the world with the products of our mines, our farms and our factories, with the creations of our thought and the fruits of our character—this is what will hold our attention and our enthusiasm steadily now and in the years to come as we strive to show in our life as a nation what liberty and the inspirations of an emancipated spirit may do for men and for societies, for individuals, for states and for mankind.

TERRIFIC STORM SWEPT THE COAST

Two Dead and Millions of Dollars Damage Done by Sleet and Rain.

Plainfield and its surrounding suburbs were fortunate in getting only the tail-end of the terrific wind and rain storm that swept the Atlantic coast from Maine to North Carolina late yesterday afternoon and last night, doing damage estimated to reach several millions of dollars. The wind that reached a velocity of seventy-four miles an hour, ripped the coast to pieces, wrecked homes and resulted in the loss of several lives. The towns along the coast were thrown into total darkness last night, hundreds of miles of wiring being ripped from its moorings by the gale. A cutting sleet accompanied the wind in some parts of the State and this halted traffic for hours.

Although the Central Railroad ran its trains on scheduled time on the main division last night, the service on the coast line was completely cut off below Galilee. Nearly a dozen houses in the exclusive Sea Gate residential section were in danger and fearing that they would be blown away, the tenants yesterday packed up their belongings and moved to new quarters. A roaring wave at Sea Gate undermined a house and carried it far out to sea, only to return with it and dash it to pieces against the bulkheads. The shattered building and splintered furniture littered the beach. The loss is estimated at $25,000.

The highest tide in years swept the Asbury Park shore and many docks have been washed away in that section. The traps of the Asbury Park Gun Club at Eighth avenue were swept out to sea. Along the Ocean Grove beach front towering breakers swept across the strand, making great inroads in the beach. Waves washed beneath the boardwalk and the undermining of that structure in several places is threatened. The flooring of the Asbury Park and Ocean Grove fishing piers was ripped up by the combers.

The worst damage done in this vicinity was suffered at Coney Island, where the loss within the past twenty-four hours is estimated at $200,000. Two or three fine houses at Sea Gate were almost completely wrecked despite the fight of a small army of workmen to build defenses with hundreds of sand bags. The waves threw them aside, rolled in and tore the houses apart. Fifteen buildings along Coney Island had been damaged last night, including big bathing pavilions and summer cottages.

H. S. SANDERSON FINDS OLD FRIEND WITH EVANS

George Evans and his "Honey Boy" minstrels kept a small but enthusiastic audience in laughter for nearly three hours last night at the Plainfield Theatre. Mr. Evans, in one of his characteristic monologues, appeared only once during the evening, but what he had to say about the European War, and the explanations given with the aid of a large map of the causes of the conflict caused gales of laughter. The show was splendidly mounted, all of the scenes being artistic, and giving much attention to detail.

The principal funmakers were Arthur Rigby and Leroy "Lasses" White. Rigby found a friend of many years standing in Plainfield, in the person of Harry S. Sanderson, manager of Proctor's Theatre. The first position the comedian ever had, was under the management of Mr. Sanderson, about twenty-five years ago, in the old days at Tony Pastor's Theatre in New York, and the two spent considerable time yesterday renewing acquaintances, and discussing incidents of some years ago.

OUR NEW-YORK LETTER

Tuesday, December 8th.

"Where is the Dollar Shop? I've heard so much about the lovely things they have at moderate prices?" Many women have asked this question recently and have later visited with delight this rendezvous teeming with beautiful Christmas gifts. Anything you may desire in fancy needlework, will be made to order if you do not see it on exhibition. The dollar sections present wonderful values in things that are different and exclusive. 8 E. 37th St.

Choosing your Christmas gift cards, calendars, or books is an easy matter at the BOOK AND ART EXCHANGE for discriminating care has already been exercised in grouping appropriately expressed sentiments. There is nothing offered that is not charmingly attractive. Calendars by the thousands. Mottoes, Sachets, Bayberry Candles and dainty gifts for Yuletide abound, and you will find that prices are surprisingly low. 30 E. 34th St.

Isn't this a charmingly graceful dress slipper? Quite the prettiest I've seen so far. Slender, beautiful lines, in superb quality, patent calfskin; high, open, beaded instep, to display a touch of dainty hosiery. Of course, hand-made and turned throughout, brilliantly enameled Louis quinze heel. Magnificent value at $7 pair. You will find this very elegant shoe at the Smart Queen Quality Shop, 32 W. 34th St. Christmas gifts of "Comfy" Slippers are most acceptable. You will find them in all colors and styles at this nice shop. Also the most fascinating types of satin dancing slippers at $4 pair.

In the unique and quaint surroundings of "The Tally-Ho" enjoying afternoon tea, lunch or a charming Southern dinner, one would never suspect the close proximity of the HEART of New York's smart shopping district. One almost expects the call to the meet and the baying of the pack anxious to be off. In this quaint, quiet, restful place you will enjoy your afternoon tea, a respite midst the turmoil of Christmas shopping. Luncheon, at 65c, is delightful, or dinner at 85c, sumptous. 20 E. 34th St.

Many a lovely gift will be chosen at The Florentine Art Shop, 5 E. 47th St., for they were singularly fortunate in procuring many fascinating pieces—Alabaster vases and lamps, globes, etc., Della Robbia ware, candle sticks, Carrara Marble ornaments and gorgeous floor lamps in real carved wood with silk and parchment hand-painted shades. Hosts of really worth-while gifts, from $10 up, and Florentine hand-painted leather bookmarkers and card cases from $1 up.

For fine plaiting-hemstitching or button making you will be entirely satisfied (and I speak from experience) with the work done by Mehrlust and Grossman, 3460 Broadway (at 141st St.). Your work will be delivered on very short notice. Write for booklet which tells you how to prepare materials, etc. A large and comprehensive stock of laces and trimming is kept in stock for the convenience of customers. Call or write.

A dainty and charming dance frock or reception gown, in the season's newest mode, can be made from your dress that is passe, or that you have become tired of. THE MENDING SHOP, 20 W. 31st St., has been famous for its wonderful remodeling results for many years. So you still have time to have a new dress for Christmas on this basis at a third expected cost. Fabrics and personalities are always considered in deciding which of the new styles are advisable.

A luxuriously warm glove for Milady's winter wear—and therefore an Ideal Christmas Gife is the "Peary"—which is a very recent production of the famous and exclusive Glove Shop of P. CENTEMERI & CO., 206 Fifth Avenue. "The Peary" is made of Russian Kassan Capeskin, firm grain skin, particularly adapted to withstand hard usage and cold weather. Ever so much warmer than an ordinary lined glove—for it is a kid glove made over a specially knit seamless wool glove, wrist length, full six inches from the base of the thumb, lined throughout, and the wrist is securely fastened with small strap clasp. It is so neat and well proportioned that one would never suspect it being a lined glove. The price is $3.50 pair.

Handkerchiefs and the Christmas gift question are close acquaintances. When one thinks of handkerchiefs, instinctively one thinks of Fifth Avenue's famous house, the GRAND MAISON DE BLANC. Strolling through their new building I was surprised to note how very reasonable the prices are: a box of six fine initialed linen handkerchiefs for $2 or a dainty sheer Swiss hand embroidered Mouchoir for $1.50. Christmas gifts that are individual as well as inexpensive, abound in this lovely shop. 538-540 Fifth Ave.

I saw at least a dozen types of exclusive and charming dance frocks and evenings gowns at Miss White's Smart Salon, at 46 W. 46th St. From a standpoint of "style" and selection, it is very doubtful if you could duplicate Miss White's frocks at $35 to $50, or even at $25. The fresh maize and orchid tints in chiffon taffetas and rich charmeuse in the new fleur-de-lis models, with petal edges and gathered high waist line, must be seen to be appreciated. Fitting is accomplished expertly and there is no chance of disappointment. You will surely find your Christmas frock here.

Do you know that at the Famous Fur House of Henry Slede, 43 W. 46th St., you may have your fur coat remade and relined at $25 up, and fur sets from $10. Furriers for 63 years, they had the confidence of our grandparents and hold ours still. All remodeling is done under Mr. Seide's personal supervision. Perfect cut and finish are assured. This will be a long winter they say, so it is by no means too late to send your furs to Slede's.

Christmas gifts of Sterling or Dutch Silver purchased at WYLER'S beautiful shop, 6 E. 46th St., have that fascination about them which comes of good judgment and expert knowledge in selection. For $10 one may choose charming jewel cases, pastile boxes, chased spoons, salt shakers in unique and beautiful designs; perfume bottles, flower holders, etc., wedding gifts many a lovely piece may be chosen, from the individual silver tea pot at $50, to the tea service of sterling silver, in Adam design, four pieces, with Sheffield plated tray, at $250. Three-piece service at $100. Sheffield tray $20 extra. Thousands of magnificent gifts at almost any price you wish to pay.

Father and the boys will appreciate exclusive haberdashery at Christmas, but go to Doyle & Black, 45 W. 46th St., to be on the safe side. Shirts made to order from an endless variety of unusually smart and distinctive weaves, $2.50 to $7 each. The same fine workmanship in all grades, done on the premises. There is just time to have shirts made to order for Christmas delivery. I saw many unusual and very desirable styles and patterns in winter neckwear at 50c to $2.50.

Have you been to The Little Shop of T. Azoez, 561 Fifth Ave., on 46th St.? No? Then you have a treat in store if you love unusual things, whether it be La Tosca Bar Pin, shaped like a dagger and richly bejeweled, from $15 up, or a quaint hoop ring, beautifully set with jewels from $30up—you will note that prices are low and out of all proportion to the unique beauty. Madame, the head designer, prefers to make things to suit the individual.

I know of no better place to buy blouses for Christmas gifts than JOHN FORSYTHE & SONS, 3 W. 42d St., for this being an exclusive waist shop. It is reasonable to understand that every innovation and point of newness and beauty is always on view. Truly an ideal Christmas gift for an intimate friend. At $5 there are lovely two-toned effects and lace waists, all beautifully finished and wonderful value. Among many at $9.75 you will see the smart tailored waists of silk cashmere or crepe de chine in the new sand and maize tints, trimmed with handsome pearl buttons or silk military braid.

A rain and surely acceptable Christmas gift would be "Etui Mignon" for Milady's toilette, procurable at D'Arsy's, 14 W. 47th St., which is a branch of the famous Paris house of that name. This little toilette case is most essential for week-end trips and contains a sufficient quantity of each preparation—the face cachets, Creme de Beaute, Poudre, Lotion, Savon, Sonya Wash and dentrifrice, $2 complete.

Another case of feminine needs "The Automobile Box," containing everything necessary to prepare the complexion for the sharp wind, the supper after the drive; altogether a choice assortment of auxiliaries to the complexion and toilette for $10 complete.

Household Hints

EVENING PARTY DISHES.

Since it has become fashionable to serve a regular "sit down" supper at evening parties, there is general demand for dishes of a character to excite appetite without imposing too heavy a tax upon the digestion. The recipes will be found unusually delicious, as well as deliciously unusual.

Fish Salad Croquettes—Flake enough cooked fish—salmon or halibut preferred—to make two cupfuls. Add a little salt and pepper, a tablespoon chopped chives or minced onion, two teaspoons lemon juice and sufficient mayonnaise dressing to make the mixture mold well. Form into croquettes, roll in egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat. Garnish with parsley and slices of lemon.

Hot-Pot in Baskets—Remove seeds from six sweet peppers and chop shells moderately fine, together with one Bermuda onion. Cook ten minutes in cup of olive oil, add one teaspoon French mustard, juice of half a lemon and one inch of minced preserved ginger. Stir thoroughly and serve very hot.

Asparagus With Stuffed Eggs—Boil asparagus in salted water, or heat canned asparagus; drain and arrange on platter in border of buttered toast and quartered stuffed eggs. Pour over all a hot French sauce, made as follows: Blend in a saucepan two ounces butter with one and one-half ounces flour. Add pint chicken stock or small can of chicken broth and six finely minced mushrooms. Stir fifteen minutes, add one cup hot cream and juice of a lemon; strain and cook five minutes longer. To stuff eggs: Boil them hard, divide lengthwise and remove yolks. Chop yolks very fine and blend with potted ham or tongue in the proportion of one teaspoon meat to each egg. Season with celery salt and pepper, moisten with cream and refill the cavities of the whites.

Chicken and Mushroom Patties—Fry two cups canned mushrooms in an ounce of butter for five minutes, seasoning with salt and pepper. Remove from fire, take out a scant cupful and chop remainder moderately fine together with two and one-half cups cold chicken. Beat together two eggs, a sprinkling of salt and pepper and juice of half a lemon. Add one tablespoon chopped parsley and a pint of boiling milk, stirring until it thickens. Then add chicken-mushroom mixture; when very hot fill patty shells and garnish tops with the whole mushrooms, which have been kept warm in the meantime. If the paste is prepared in advance and kept on ice chicken patties can be made and baked in the evening with little trouble.

Dresden Oysters—Chop two dozen large oysters with a tablespoon of melted butter, an unbeaten egg, one-third the bulk of bread crumbs, a tablespoon of parsley, and a little onion juice if liked. Season with salt and paprika, form into balls, and bake ten or fifteen minutes in a hot oven. Serve on half oyster shells with a parsley garnish.

IDEA FOR CHRISTMAS GIFT.

Home-made Christmas presents for 20 cents:

At 5 and 10-cent store get a pair of Japanese slippers. Then get two yards of 5-cent ribbon. Sew a little bow on each slipper at the top and leave the loop to hang them up, that holds them together. Put little bows down the center. This makes a useful present for bedrooms, for comb and brush, or curling iron, hatpins, etc.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Dyeing Hint—Take a strip of goods about five inches wide and baste a half spool of thread the same as goods; then color thread and goods together and you have your desired shade. If it is white, use white thread, but if you can't get the shade you want, use white; dip in the dye till you get the right shade.

CHAPTER XIV.

Waiting.

He wheeled impatiently from where he stood. He wanted to do something. At the end of the street he could see them crossing under the light on their way to Mary Chavah's. Abel and Simeon might stop for him, but how could he go there among the folk whom he had virtually denied their Christmas? What would they have to say to him? Yet what they should say would, after all, matter nothing to him, and perhaps he would hear them say something about Bruce and Jenny. Still, he had nothing to take there, as Abel had suggested. What had he that a boy would want to have? Unless—

He thought for a moment. Then he crossed the street to what had been his house. He went in, seeing again the hallway and stair, red carpeted, and the door opened into the lamplit room beyond. He found and lighted an end of candle that he knew and made his way up the stair. There he set the candle down and lowered the ladder that led to the loft.

In the loft a gust of wind from the skylight blew out the flame of his little wick. In the darkness the broken panes above his head looked down on him like a face and that face the sky, thousand eyed. He mounted a box, pushed up the frame and put out his head. The sky lay near. The little town showed heaped roofs and lifting smoke and here and there a light, sparkling in their midst was the light of the town hall, like an eye guarding something and answering to the light before his factory and to the other light before the station, where the world went by.

With every [illegible] the east, came Capella and seemed to be standing above the village.

As he looked the need to express what he felt beset Ebenezer.

"Quite a little town," he thought, "quite a little town."

He closed the glass and groped in the darkness to where the roof, sloping sharply, met the floor. There he touched an edge of something that swayed, and he laid hold of and drew out that for which he had come—Malcolm's hobbyhorse.

Downstairs in the hall he set it on the floor, examined it, rocked it with one finger. The horse returned to its ancient office as if it were irrevocably ordained to service. Ebenezer, his head on one side, stood for some time regarding it. Then he slipped something in its worn saddle pocket. Last, he lifted and settled the thing under his arm.

"I dunno, but I might as well walk around by Mary Chavah's house," he thought. "I needn't stay long."

At Mary Chavah's house the two big parlors, the hall, the stairs, the dining room, even the tiny bedroom with the owl wall paper, were filled with folk come to welcome the little boy, and on the parlor table, set so that he should see it when first he entered, blazed Ellen Bourne's little tree. The coffee was hot on the stove, good things were ready on the table, and the air was electric with expectation, with the excitement of being together, with the imminent surprise to Mary and with curiosity about the little stranger from Idaho.

"What'll we all say when he first comes in?" somebody asked.

"Might say 'Merry Christmas,'" two or three suggested.

"Mercy, no," replied shocked voices; "not to Mary Chavah especially!"

But, however they should say it, the time was quick with cheer.

At quarter to 8 the gate clicked. The word passed from one to another, and by the time a step sounded on the porch the rooms were still save for the whispers and a voice or two that kept unconsciously on in some remote corner. But instead of the door opening to admit Mary and her little boy a hesitating knock sounded.

Those nearest to the door questioned one another with startled looks, and one of them threw the door open. On the threshold stood Affer, the telegraph operator, who thrust in a very dirty hand and a yellow envelope.

"We don't deliver nights," he said, "but I thought she'd ought to have this one. I'm going home to wash up, and then I'll be back," he added and left them staring at one another around the little lighted tree.

Before they could go out to find Mary, as a dozen would have done, she was at the threshold, alone. She seemed to understand without wonder why they were there, and with perfect naturalness she turned to them to share her trouble.

"He hasn't come," she said simply.

Her face was quite white, and, because they usually saw her with a scarf or shawl over her head, she looked almost strange to them, for she wore a hat; also she had on an unfamiliar soft colored wrap that had been her mother's and was kept in tissues. She had dressed carefully to go to meet the child. "I might as well dress up a little," she had thought, "and I guess he'll like colors best."

Almost before she spoke they put in her hands the telegram. They were pressing toward her, dreading, speechless, trying to hear what should be read. She stepped nearer to the light of the candles on the little tree, read and reread in the stillness. When she looked up her face was so illumined that she was strange to them once more.

"Oh," she said, "it's his train. It was late for the local. They've put him on the express, and it'll drop him at the 'draw.'"

The tense air crumpled into breathings, and a soft clamor filled the rooms as they told one another and came to tell her how glad they were. She pulled herself together and tried to slip into her natural manner.

"It did give me a turn," she confessed. "I thought he'd been—he'd got"—

She went into the dining room, still without great wonder that they were all there. But when she saw the women in white aprons and the table arrayed and on it Ellen Bourne's Christmas rose blooming she broke into a little laugh.

"Oh," she said, "you done this a-purpose for him!"

"I hope, Mary, you won't mind," Mis' Mortimer Bates said formally, "it being Christmas so. We'd have done just the same on any other day."

"Oh," Mary said, "mind!"

They hardly knew her, she moved among them so flushed and laughing and conformable, praising, admiring, thanking them.

"Honestly, Mary," said Mis' Moran finally, "we'll have you so you can't tell Christmas from any other day—it'll be so nice!"

The express would be due at the "draw" at 8:30—8:33. Affer told her when he came back "washed up." Mary watched the clock. She had not milked or fed the cows before she went because she had thought that he would like to watch the milking and it would be something for him to do on that first evening. So when she could she took her shawl and slipped out to the shed for the pails and her lantern and went alone to the stable.

Mary opened the door, and her lantern made a golden room of light within the borderless shadow. The hay smell from the loft and the mangers, the even breathing of the cows, the quiet safety of the place, met her. She hung her lantern in its accustomed place and went about her task.

Her mind turned back to the time that had elapsed since the local came in at the Old Trail Town station. She had stood there, with the children about her, hardly breathing while the two Trail Town men and a solitary traveling man had alighted. There had been no one else. In terror lest the child should be carried past the station, she had questioned the conductor, begged him to go in and look again, parleyed with him until he had swung his lantern. Then she had turned away with the children, utterly unable to formulate anything. There was no other train to stop at Old Trail Town that night. It must mean disaster—indefinable disaster—that had somehow engulfed him and had not pointed the way that he had gone. She recalled now that she had refused Buff Miles' invitation to ride, but had suffered him to take the children. Then she had set out to walk home.

On that walk home she had unlived her plans. Obscure speculations, stirring in her fear, at first tormented her and then gave place to the conclusion that John had changed his mind, had seen perhaps that he could not after all let the child go so far, had found some one else to take him, and that the morrow would bring a letter to tell her so. In any case, she was not to have him. The conclusion swept her with the vigor of certainty. But instead of the relief for which she would have looked, that certainty gave her nothing but desolation. Until the moment when the expectation seemed to die she had not divined how it had grown into her days, as subtly as the growth of little cell and little cell. And now the weight upon her, instead of lifting, soaring in the possibility of the return of her old freedom, lay the more heavily, and her sense of oppression became abysmal. "Something is going to happen," she had kept saying. "Something has happened."

So she had got on toward her own door. There the swift relief was like an upbearing into another air, charged with more intimate largess for life. Now Mary sat in the stable in a sense of happy reality that clothed all her feeling—rather, in a sense of super-reality, which she did not know how to accept. So, slowly singing in her as she sat at her task, came that which had waited until she should open the way.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — The Island Where Dreams Come True.

Where All Sorts of Dainties Were Kept.

"KIDDIES, I'll tell you tonight about the island I used to visit when I was a little boy," said daddy.

"Oh, daddy, I didn't know you ever visited an island!" cried Evelyn.

Daddy's eyes twinkled. "It was an island of dreams, kiddies, where they all came true."

"I'd like to find an island like that," sighed Jack and Evelyn.

"Well, perhaps you can," said daddy. "Now listen.

"This island was a wonderful place. There were all sorts of toys on it, and when I was there no one ever forbade me to play with them, no one ever said to put them back where I found them, and if I broke anything no one scolded. But later when I wanted to play with them again, why, sometimes I couldn't find them.

"Then I could go to bed when I got sleepy and get up when I was rested. No one told me in the midst of some fascinating game that it was time to go to bed, and no one called me to get up when I was so sleepy I could hardly open my eyes, but I was always late to everything.

"Then there was a cupboard where all sorts of dainties were kept—candy and preserves and jam and pie and cake and cookies—and I could eat all I cared for."

"Oh!" cried Jack and Evelyn.

"Yes, but listen. I would eat and eat, and after awhile I would be very, very ill, and then there was no medicine to take, so I had to suffer.

"And I didn't have to wash my hands and face at all unless I wished to, but there were more clean little boys who used to visit that island at the same time that I did, and they wouldn't play with me when I wasn't clean.

"Then I did love to fight when I visited this island of dreams. I didn't wait for something to turn up. I just went about busily provoking quarrels.

"The boys were good fighters, and I got my nose smashed and my eyes blacked and my clothes torn a lot of times.

"No one told me it was wrong to fight. I could do just as I pleased. But after I had been terribly walloped several times by one big boy with whom I used to pick a quarrel I somehow lost my zest for picking quarrels.

"Then I didn't have to go to school unless I wished too, but when I found that two tiny little girls knew more about arithmetic than I did I was so ashamed that I went back to school and studied very hard."

"Well, I think we can find that dream island easily enough," laughed the kiddies.

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Now, girls, get the dishes done while I put the little fellows to bed. We have something important on hand for this evening," said Mrs. Mitchell as she picked up the baby and started upstairs, followed by the four-year-old boy.

The air of happy mystery spurred the girls to extra effort and before their mother had tucked the last youngster in bed they were seated by the library table. When mother came in she closed the door and seated herself between her half-grown daughters.

"Your father is so seldom away evenings that I thought this would be just the time to lay our Christmas plans for him and it is less than a month till Christmas, so every minute must be made to count. Dear, generous father was looking at an overcoat when we were down town last week. I urged him to take it, for he needs one badly, but he said, 'The girls need new coats worse than I do. We can't manage three in one year. I can wear my sweater under my fall coat in very cold weather and on occasions when I can't press my old winter coat into service. Times will be better next year, I hope.'"

"How good of daddy!" came in chorus from the girls.

"This afternoon," continued the mother, "while I was downtown I noticed that very coat in the window marked down $10 below the price charged last week, and I went in and bought it for father's Christmas present."

"Good for you, mother!" said the elder girl, squeezing her hand.

"Now this is what I wanted to talk to you about. I cannot possibly manage to pay for it out of my allowance. We must earn it together."

"How fine!" chorused the children. "Tell us how."

"I have an order for scalloping two pairs of pillow cases and working the initials on them," said the mother, undoing a package. "I am sure Agnes can do the scallop well enough, and they will bring $1.25 a pair. I am going to write to all the young ladies whose engagements are announced in the paper and ask if there is not table linen they would like to have hemmed for the bride-to-be, or sheets and pillow cases to be hemstitched."

"I can hemstitch," said Rachel excitedly.

"Yes, you can do that nicely after I get the threads drawn, and as it is white, we can all work at it in the evening without hurting our eyes," answered Mrs. Mitchell, folding the cloth to cut.

"And father will never guess we are making his Christmas present," laughed the excitable Rachel. "What fun it will be."

"Now, even if we get orders for all we can do, we cannot earn the coat that way before Christmas," said the mother, cutting off the last case. "I have been wondering if your leather work could not be pressed into service. I will buy the skin and help you cut out the articles, but you must do the rest, for I do not understand tooling. Mr. Scott, down at the book store, said he would gladly display such articles and sell them on commission."

"We can make all sorts of things from leather and if we can sell them we can earn a fine sum," said Agnes. "The calendars will bring fifty cents, the card cases seventy-five cents and one dollar, according to the work on them."

"Dear daddy; how I hope they will sell!" said Rachel.

"It will be such a big package. What will he think it is?" and the girls commenced to dance about the room.

"Now, girls, get the scallop pattern and we will mark these. Agnes and I can embroider while Rachel marks the rest," said the mother.

There was a scurrying for material and soon all were happily working.

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — SCOOP IS TOO THIRSTY TO WAIT — BY "HOP"

SCHOOL PHYSICIAN MAKES HIS REPORT

Dr. A. F. VanHorn Tells of Beneficial Work Being Accomplished.

Dr. A. F. VanHorn, the local school physician, read an interesting report at the meeting of the Board of Education held last night, in the High School, stating that the average health of Plainfield school children this year was very noticeably superior to the record of any previous year, and attributed this, in a large degree, to the fact that the regular inspection and attendance to each child by the physician of the Board of Education has given to the parent a far greater knowledge of the rules of health and hygiene than was the case when medical attention to school children was inaugurated. This leads to enforcing at home the habits of personal care and cleanliness, which do so much to promote general good health.

An important effect of the school inspection is that defects in the teeth and vision of the children are brought to the attention of the parents before they become serious, and while they are still comparatively easy and cheap to correct. The Board decided to hold a formal opening of the High School addition with appropriate exercises at a date in the latter part of January, to be later announced. Plans for this are now in the hands of a committee of the Board, and the program will include addresses by well known speakers from both in and out of Plainfield. An adjournment was taken to Wednesday night, when bids for the new school will be received.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE MEMBERS ENJOYED SOCIAL PROGRAM

The Woman's League of St. Joseph's church enjoyed an informal program following the regular monthly meeting, last night. Several important matters pertaining to the organization were transacted during the business session and Father Hart, who was present by special request, made an address.

The program enjoyed was composed of the following numbers: Piano duet, the Misses Helen and Nora Meaney; vocal solos, the Misses L. Pittingill, Mae Maag and Hilda Story; sketch, "The Unburied Woman," the Misses Nora and Rosana McDonough, Dorothy Jacot and Elizabeth Daly. The various numbers were ably given and thoroughly enjoyed. Refreshments were served in conclusion.

"THE STAR OF PROMISE."

"The Star of Promise," a cantata, will be given at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, Friday night, by the Cantata Chorus, under the direction of William Holmes. Part first of the program will be devoted to varied selections and part second to the cantata which promises to be the best yet undertaken by the chorus.

ADOPT PLANS FOR BOROUGH SCHOOL

Specifications of I. N. Pierson & Son, of Perth Amboy, Decided Upon.

TWO STORY BUILDING

Six Competitors for Construction of Harrison Avenue Structure—A Modernly Equipped Schoolhouse.

The plans submitted by I. N. Pierson and Son, Perth Amboy architects, were selected for the new Harrison avenue school building by the North Plainfield Board of Education at an adjourned meeting held last night. Both members of the firm were present at the meeting. There were six competitors but one set of plans were eliminated because they did not fulfill the mandatory requirements, failing to provide an assembly room. The one that was chosen provides for a two story structure of brick with five large rooms, an assembly hall and a teachers and principal's room. The building is systematically laid out, with the assembly room on the ground floor, the second story being taken up with three classrooms.

The building and grounds committee consists of J. A. Van Mater, chairman; F. L. Sill and Charles L. Holstein and this body spent much time on the plans. Two of those submitted were for one story buildings. Judd Stuart favored the single story structure because of the fact that it is to be occupied by little children in the primary grades and would be better adapted for them in case of fire or any other danger. The committee made a first, second and third choice. The building is 104 feet front by 48 feet side with provision for enlargement if necessary. There are two stairways leading from the second floor and there will always be four exits ready for use. The auditorium as it will be built will have a seating capacity of 250, but can be enlarged to hold about 600.

The specifications drawn up by the contractors were read at the meeting by J. A. Van Mater. The auditorium will rest on the grade made in the excavation. The basement will be of stone, brick and concrete and the upper walls of brick and stone. Plaster blocks or hollow tile will be used in the construction of the non-bearing walls and the building will be fire-proof. All classrooms will have a seating capacity of forty and will contain sanitary wardrobes. The furniture included in the contract consists of 200 pupils' desks, five teachers' desks, a principal's desk and chair, 250 assembly chairs, blackboards and electric fixtures.

The complete plans will be ready in about fifteen days and will probably be presented to the Board at its next regular meeting which will be held on Monday, December 21 instead of the 28th, which is the regular meeting night. The successful architects have done a large amount of work in this vicinity and recently completed the new school building in Bound Brook. The remodeling of the Dunellen school was the work of this firm. Also a Perth Amboy school which has just been finished.

A communication was read by District Clerk Frank Rowley from one of the borough citizens, asking that the Board allow one of the teachers of his daughter, who has lost much time recently because of sickness, to tutor her for remuneration. This is against the rules of the Board and the favor was not granted.

Charles Senger, of Sycamore avenue, who has been seriously ill at Muhlenberg Hospital, is reported to be improving.

CHILDREN TO PRESENT HAMLIN PIED PIPER

Browning's Famous Story to Be Acted by Local Talent.

There is a rare treat in store for children and grown-ups when Browning's famous story of the Pied Piper of Hamlin is presented in the Plainfield High School auditorium, Saturday evening. There is a gripping story for the children. The dramatic interpretation of the poem is in splendid hands. Miss Dorothy Roberts is doing notable work as the mayor of Hamlin. Miss Katherine Holt presents the character of the Pied Piper with grace and power.

Perhaps the most delightful part of the program will be the dancing of the children in the village green. Some unusual work is to be presented. The children are doing different dances with a spirit and finish which are surprising. Shubert's moment musical is to be interpreted by a little pipe dance executed by the Misses Stella Butler, Margaret Berk and Jane VanZandt. This is one of the interpretations given by Paulowa and the Russian ballet. It loses nothing of beauty and spirit as done by three dainty misses of Plainfield. The joy and grace and charm which their youth and enthusiasm lend to the interpretation bring forth rounds of applause at the rehearsals.

The special scenery and color schemes will add in no small measure to the success of the evening.

SUDDEN DEATH OF CHARLES C. BROWER

Well Known Horseman and Trainer Succumbs to Pleuro-Pneumonia.

Charles C. Brower, aged 65 years, one of the best known horsemen and trainers in this section of the country, died at his home, 75 Westervelt avenue, last night, following a few days' illness with pleuro-pneumonia. He was taken ill about a week ago with a severe cold and rapidly grew worse.

Mr. Brower was a native of New York State and had lived in Plainfield more than twenty-five years. For several years he owned a stock farm near Avon Park, where he trained horses At times he was associated with John Osborn, a well-known jockey and trainer. During his time, Mr. Brower had driven many famous horses on the trotting circuit and he was always a familiar figure at the meets at the big Eastern fairs. For the past year he had been in the employ of the Plainfield Cab Company.

There survives a wife and two sons, George Brower and Patrolman Harry Brower, of this city. The funeral will be held at the late home, Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

MANY WILL BE ENTERTAINED BY LOCAL B. P. O. E. MEMBERS

Plans have been completed for the reception and dance to be given in the Elks' Clubhouse on Watchung avenue tomorrow night, for members of the club and their friends. Invitations numbering close to 300 have been issued to members and these have in turn been distributed among friends.

Van Epps' banjo orchestra will furnish the program of terpsichorean music, which will be the feature of the program. A busy committee has been at work for several weeks arranging the details for the event, which promises to be one of the most auspicious of its kind ever given in the new clubhouse.

W. D. LEWIS WIDELY KNOWN AS A SPEAKER

William D. Lewis, principal of the William Penn High School of Philadelphia, who is to address the union meeting of Parent-Teacher Associations at the Plainfield High School tomorrow night, has a country-wide reputation in matters of education.

The Journal of Education, Boston, in speaking of an address by Mr. Lewis, says: "His talk bristled with the best thought to be given to an expectant audience.' School, a New York publication, said: "He impressed himself upon his audience as a man of magnetism and original ideas." All persons interested are cordially invited to hear Mr. Lewis tomorrow night.

CHILDREN STUDY IN WINTER AIR

Freezing Weather Has No Terrors for Youngsters in Open-air School.

WANT CHRISTMAS TOYS

Remarkable Benefits Being Derived from the Educational Work on a Modern Basis—Retinue of Work is of the Most Approved Type.

Eighteen or more little boys and girls are studying these days of freezing weather at the Open Air School maintained by the Anti-Tuberculosis League. Bundled up to their rosy chins and warmly hooded, the youngsters sit at desks in the open air, go through recitation and study periods, and then recline for rest periods, out of doors all the time, that they may never be shut away from the oxygen that gives health and strength. Noses and checks get pretty red in temperature well below freezing, but the cold weather only adds to the good effects that life out of doors has for little folks who are not strong and healthy or who are nervous and excitable.

Dr. Clara DeH. Krans, who is in charge of the Open Air School, keeps a conscientious professional eye upon the pupils, assisted by a nurse, who is an expert in the matters of diet, rest and bathing, which are the remedies for so many juvenile troubles, just as they are remedies for grown-ups. Periodical reports on the physical condition of the children in the Outdoors School have shown a consistent lessening or elimination of evil symptoms, such as fever, lassitude, etc., and gains in weight. Tested by the approved standards evolved by educators, children who have had the benefit of outdoor schooling have surpassed men-

CHIEF T. O. DOANE CHOSEN COMMANDER

Winfield Scott Post, 73, G. A. R., Honors Well Known Veteran.

Fire Chief T. O. Doane, one of the best known war veterans in the State, was last night elected commander of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., at the annual encampment held at headquarters in Reform Hall. The selection of Chief Doane was particularly pleasing to the veterans for it is the first time that they have had an opportunity of honoring him. Chief Doane is a charter member of the Post. He has always been deeply interested in the success of the organization.

The other officers chosen by the Post are as follows: Senior vice-commander, Dr. J. F. Berg; junior vice-commander, Josiah Unangst; quartermaster, Thomas B. Titsworth; chaplain, Nathan C. Pennington; officer of the day, I. L. McVoy; officer of the guard, Edward Vanderweg; trustees, William C. Smith, William Hand and I. L. McVoy. The officers will be installed the second Tuesday in January.

The Post also endorsed the petition of Co. K, the local militia organization, in its efforts to secure an armory for Plainfield, and pledged itself to do all in its power to help the company. There is a strong friendly feeling existing between the veterans and the militia and for this reason the former are only too glad to lend their assistance in such a movement.

MANY PROPOSALS FOR SEWER WORK

Borough Council Opened Thirty-six Bids on Two Contracts Last Night.

FIRMS REPRESENTED

Wide Range in Figures—Successful Contractor's Name Will Be Announced in a Few Days—Two Bids Rejected.

Representatives of thirty firms were present at the special meeting of the Borough Council, last night, at which time bids for work to be done on North Plainfield's sewerage disposal system were opened and read by Borough Clerk Charles M. Dolliver. Twenty proposals were filed for construction work on contract No. 1 and sixteen for work on contract No. 2. Firms as far south as West Virginia had representatives at the meeting and but two of the bids had to be returned to firms without reading because they were improperly drawn. Figures were announced per item and it will probably be impossible to secure the name of the successful bidder for several days, inasmuch as it will take some time to compute the many items.

After the bids had been publicly announced, Mayor Clark appointed the street committee, consisting of Alexander Milne and Julius Stahl, to take charge of the bids. This committee will work in conjunction with the sewer committee. A wide range of figures were presented by the various firms and several of the estimates created no little amount of surprise owing to their extreme lowness. This feature was assigned to the fact that the bidder had not thoroughly inquired into the conditions by which the successful contractor will be confronted and those who have thoroughly investigated all phases of the proposed work classed this as little short of ridiculous. A majority of the firms have had men in Plainfield working on the figures for the past week and one man stated last night that he had been in the borough for two and a half weeks investigating the contract.

The following firms made proposals for work on contract No. 1: Joseph L. Segretto & Co., Woodhaven, L. I.; Joseph & George Johnston, West New Brighton, S. I.; Pasquale-Mauriello, Orange; Kelley-McFeeley Co., Camden, N. J.; Peakskill Construction Co., Peakskill, N. Y.; H. C. Brooks Co., Martinsburg, W. Va.; John C. Schrade (Incorp.), Brooklyn; Cenendella & Co., Milford, Mass.; Caldwell-Wingate Co., New York city; Cantrell Construction Co., Philadelphia; Bruno-Pezzienti, Seneca Falls, N. Y.; Fusco Construction Co., Newark; D. Donigan Co., Brooklyn; Fred N. Lewis, New York; Frank Puglia, Paterson; Burke & Bonham (Incorp.), Plainfield; Schneider-Stelle Co., New Brunswick; Harrison-Burton Co., New York; Weldon Contracting Co., Rahway.

WILL SELL BONDS DECEMBER 22

North Plainfield borough will sell the two issues of bonds in connection with the new joint sewer on December 22. $50,000 worth of joint sewer bonds, bearing interest at 4 per cent., and maturing between the years 1915 and 1954, will be disposed of, and $100,000 worth of bonds to raise money for the construction of the collecting system will also be disposed of. These will bear interest at 5 per cent., and will mature during the same period as the others. It was stated in an earlier issue that the $100,000 series would be sold on December 24, but the twenty-second is the proper date, as is shown by the advertisement which has been published by the borough.

Dr. and Mrs. Olive W. Montford, who have been residing on Central avenue, have removed to their new home on Park avenue.

JAIL DELIVERY IS FRUSTRATED

Finger of Suspicion Points to "Ice Wagon" Connors and His Pals.

PROBE IS UNDER WAY

Hack-saw and Screw-driver Found in Cells—Believe Work to Be That of Gunmen Who Visited Notorious Prisoner Last Thursday.

An attempted jail delivery with the finger of suspicion for the preliminary arrangements pointing at Charles, alias "Ice-Wagon" Connors, awaiting trial on an indictment charging him with being implicated in the looting of former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman's home in this city, January 3 last, was foiled by Warden Dodd in the Union county jail in Elizabeth, Monday, and the circumstances surrounding the incident are now being probed by Sheriff Otto and Chief County Detective Galatian. Thus far their efforts have brought to light the fact that a dozen hacksaws and a screw driver had been smuggled into the jail last Thursday and that on Friday night a screen on one of the windows facing the old burying-ground of the First church had been pried loose with a bar from the outside.

The person or persons working for the freedom of those on the inside were evidently frightened away before completing their task, for the bar with which the job was done was found in the yard. Information obtained casts a strong suspicion on a number of prisoners, including Connors, who are being kept under strict watch and also has caused a number of their friends and known pals to be placed under surveillance.

The screw driver was found se-

PLAN TO BRIGHTEN CHILDREN'S HEARTS

Community Christmas Enterprise Launched Again and Many Will Be Helped.

Within a two-mile radius of North Avenue station there are children who might better be in Louvain this year, so far as gifts are concerned, unless generous citizens make it possible for the "Community Christmas" Committee to be their Santa Claus. This organization, of which H. M. Harris is chairman, and Dr. William H. Murray, secretary, has taken over the beautiful piece of work, which, until, last year, was done by the "Good Fellows." It co-operates with the Charity Organization Society so as to avoid duplication and waste, and it gives not only toys and turkeys, but coal, flour and warm clothing, where the need is distressing. Beter yet, it brightens the day for the forlorn family of the city at the Alms House, and its automobiles will carry loads of good cheer, creature comforts and sympathetic folks to the 120 patients, nurses, doctors and servants at Bonnie Burn.

The job is big enough and human enough to enlist the aid of anyone who has a touch of the true Christmas spirit, and, as Plainfield is peopled with just that sort, the committee ought not to have to beg for the wherewithal to carry out its masterly program of unselfishness. It is everybody's agent, and it is ready to do business.

The finance committee, consisting of F. W. Iredell, F. A. Weeks, J. R. Joy and Charles A. Rice, met last night and perfected plans for raising the necessary funds. It is expected that, in addition to the donations that are coming in from individuals, every church club and men's Bible class will help the enterprise along.

Since the first list was published the treasurer has received contributions from the following: Mr. and Mrs. Willard H. Hall, A Friend, Walter F. Manning's class in Monroe Avenue Methodist Sunday school, Adeline P. Whiton, William M. Sandford, Miss Florence Tweedy, Mrs. L. L. Manning, Miss Mary E. Tweedy, Mrs. Rufus P. Lincoln, Mrs. Fannie C. Cox, beginners' class in First Methodist Sunday school, Susan P. Barnhart, George E. Hall, Isaac W. Rushmore, Albert B. Beers, A Friend. Amount previously acknowledged, $218; total to date, $325.27.

All checks should be made payable to Charles A. Rice, treasurer, 836 West Seventh street.

CONVICT FOUR BOYS OF ASSAULT CHARGES

Youths Who Assaulted Gardner to Be Sentenced Next Friday in Elizabeth.

Four local boys were convicted of charges of assault and battery in the Elizabeth Court of Quarter Sessions, yesterday, and will be sentenced by Judge James C. Connolly next Friday. The youths are John and Patrick Long, Frank Diano and Andrew Bonizza and the complaint charged them with beating up Rudolph Vandrot, a gardener in the employ of L. V. F. Randolph, of East Front street.

It is alleged that Vandrot was standing guard in Randolph's apple orchard to prevent petty depredations and when the four lads attempted to make away with some of the toothsome morsels he is said to have seized one of them. This called for a combined attack on the part of his companions, which ended in Vandrot's being removed to Muhlenberg Hospital. Dr. B. VanD. Hedges and Dr. A. F. VanHorn testified as to the extent of the gardener's injuries.

CELEBRATION TO BE HELD IN CITY PARK

Huge Tree Will Be Illuminated at Christmas Eve Observance.

Plans for the public Christmas Eve celebration to be held in Plainfield are now well underway and the affair promises to be one of the most interesting ever held in this city. The celebration will be held in the City Park, where a huge Christmas tree with be illuminated. The arrangements include the necessary lighting of the tree, selection of carols and a general celebration by the Sunday school members of the city.

It is proposed to have the celebration Christmas Eve between the hours of 7 and 8 o'clock, and just as soon as the executive committee of the Sunday School Superintendents' Association, which has the affair in charge, complete the details they will be announced.

A committee from the executive body has also been named to make necessary arrangements to have the Sunday schools of North Plainfield included among those of Union county and when the arrangement is completed these schools will make their reports the same as those of Union county.

MISS PEARL WHITE MADE BIG HIT AT PROCTOR'S

Two of the largest audiences Proctor's Theatre has recorded this season were present last night, to hear Miss Pearl White, the Pathe Company's feature star, who posed for the heroine role in the great serial film, "The Perils of Pauline." The novelty of listening to a "screen" actress and personally deciding if she looked anything like her pictures appealed to the "movie" devotees and they turned out en masse.

Miss White verified all expectations, both as to appearance and the charming personality. The young woman gave a semi-humorous monologue in which she told of the hazards encountered by camera artists in making film plays. The "Pauline" series is one that required more than ordinary nerve for twenty ticklish situations. As Miss White said, there are times when the scene does not proceed as it was rehearsed and the actress figures in bona fide accidents that make her lot any but an envious one.

In connection with the artist's monologue, the nineteenth episode in "Pauline's" adventurous career was thrown on the screen and Miss White pointed out the perils encountered in the creation. The young woman's visit to the theatre was an added attraction and was keenly appreciated by the patrons.

Amsterdam Reports That Allies Are Trying to Inflict Heavy Loss.

HOT FIGHT IN RUSSIA

Lodz Was Evacuated Because of Peculiar Shape of Lines—Servians Making Progress, Says the French War Office.

Amsterdam, Dec. 9 (Central News Cable).—The German retirement from Flanders is continuing and the Germans have either left or are attempting to leave the advanced trenches, while the Allies are endeavoring to inflict as heavy losses as possible on them, according to the Dunkirk correspondent of the Tijd.

It is officially announced in Berlin that the Kaiser has been compelled to postpone his departure for the front. He is suffering from bronchial catarrh and has some fever.

A Brussels despatch says that King Frederick Augustus III, of Saxony, has arrived there.

Paris, Dec. 9.—Continued artillery duels, with little or no result for either side, are reported in the official statement issued by the French war office at 3 o'clock this afternoon. It says:

"From the sea to the Lys, during the day of the eighth, there were artillery duels. In the region of Arras, and farther to the south there is nothing to report. All the positions gained by us in the last two days have been organized and strengthened.

"In the region of the Aisne there were artillery duels, and with our infantry we made appreciable progress. Several German trenches have been captured. We have made progress along the whole front, except at a single point, where the enemy blew up one of our trenches with a mine.

"On the heights of the Meuse our artillery easily mastered that of the enemy. In that region, as also in the Argonne, we have advanced on the entire front and taken several of Irving-Jefferson Parent-Teacher Ass'n Hold An Interesting Meeting.

A large number of the parents belonging to the Irving-Jefferson Parent-Teacher Association met at the Irving School yesterday afternoon, and, following a social hour, a business meeting was held, when new officers were elected. Mrs. Juan A. Babcock was made president in place of Mrs. George O. Stevens, who has resigned, and Mrs. A. E. Force was elected treasurer in place of Mrs. W. T. Schmittman, who has removed to Hammonton.

After a most interesting talk given by Mrs. W. M. Sandford regarding the duty of parents toward the careful study of the welfare of their children, it was voted to join the federation of local Parent-Teacher Associations; also to attend the union meeting at the High School tomorrow night, when W. D. Lewis, of Philadelphia, will speak. Before closing Mrs. P. J. Cregar was elected one of the vice-presidents, after which refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. John E. Dunn, chairman of the committee. The next meting of this association will be held the second Tuesday in January at the Jefferson School.

POLICE ALARM SYSTEM IN NEED OF REPAIR

It was the local police alarm system that A. B. Wilson, of the New York Telephone Company, referred to in his communication to the Common Council, Monday night, as being sadly in need of repair and not the fire alarm system as stated.

The fire alarm system is taken care of by Allen B. Laing and Fire Chief T. O. Doane reports it to be in first class condition. The police alarm system has not been in good condition since the blizzard of last March and while the telephone company care for it under contract it is not responsible for its present condition, the equipment being worn out in many instances.

HELD ON A CHARGE OF STEALING CHICKENS

Arraigned before Judge R. P. F. Von Minden in the Borough Hall yesterday morning on a charge of stealing chickens from William Snyder, of Front street, William Poland who has been employed as a teamster by William Bragg, was placed under a $100 bond to await the action of the Grand Jury on the charge. Poland was unable to secure anyone to go his bond and he was taken over to the county jail at noon yesterday by Marshal I. V. Smalley.

Poland admitted having had the chicken in his possession on the night in question, but he told the court that he must have been under the influence of liquor at the time, as he was unable to recollect where he had secured it.

Poland was caught in Snyder's chicken coop at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night by Frank Golden, a neighbor of Snyder's. Golden had been attracted to Snyder's pen by an unusual commotion therein. Knowing that Snyder had been missing chickens one by one for three or four weeks back, Golden rushed over and found Poland in the pen with a huge hand around the neck of a well filled out rooster. "What are you doing here?" asked Golden. Poland replied, "I saw Snyder this afternoon and he told me to come around this evening and get a chicken that he had promised me." "Well, I don't believe you, but I cannot prove that you are lying to me now because the Snyders are not home now," replied Golden in permitting Poland to leave the premises with the bird.

On Sunday morning Golden apprised Mr. Snyder of what had taken place. Snyder swore out a warrant for Poland's arrest on Monday morning, and by 10 o'clock the culprit was housed in the borough jail, the arrest being made by Marshal Patrick Tarpey.

When questioned by the police as to what he had done with the rooster, Poland implicated Jeff Davis (colored) by stating that he had given it to him. Jeff was therefore arrested yesterday morning by Marshal Smalley on a charge of knowingly receiving stolen goods.

When arraigned with Poland before Judge Von Minden yesterday, Jeff swore that he didn't know that the rooster had been stolen. He said that he had been awakened about 12 o'clock on Saturday night by a knock on the door. The room was cold and Jeff did not at first go to the door. The knocking continued, however, and Jeff finally decided to find out what was wanted. Jeff was greeted by Poland, who handed him a rooster, with the words, "Here's the chicken I promised you on Thanksgiving, Jeff." "Where's the chicken now, Jeff?" asked the court. "Why, I done gone ate it up," replied Jeff with wide opened eyes. In an extra session of the court held last night, after being locked up all day, Jeff was released after solemnly swearing that he would have nothing to do with chicken from now on.

WILSON WILL OPPOSE THE GARDNER INVESTIGATION

Washington, Dec. 9.—President Wilson made it clear to callers today that he was unalterably opposed to any investigation of the military fitness of the country, such as has been proposed by Representative Gardner, of Massachusetts. He said that in common with all good citizens, he was desirous of having the military branch, both army and navy, established and maintained in the most efficient fashion possible, but declared that there is a right way and a wrong way of ascertaining the facts. The President intimated that Mr. Gardner's inquiry was prompted by partisan motives.

It was also stated today that the charges involving United States Minister Sullivan, of San Domingo, are to be investigated by the State Department. It was said on reliable authority that Paul M. Fuller, of New York, who investigated conditions in Mexico for the President, was to be sent to the island republic.

The administration's complete program, as outlined previously by President Wilson, will be put through at the present short session of Congress, and an extended session will not be necessary. This was the declaration made at the White House today by Senator Kern and Representative Underwood, leaders of both branches of Congress.

THOMAS M'NEILL INJURED IN ACCIDENT AT PONDS

Thomas McNeill, a machinist employed at the Pond Tool Works, met with a serious accident while at work in the plant, yesterday, that almost cost him his left hand. A piece of machinery known as a "rest" fell upon the member, smashing it almost to a pulp and holding him a prisoner until rescued by fellow-workmen.

The young man was hurried to the office of Dr. Pittis, where the physician found it necessary to amputate two fingers and the portion of a third. It will be several months before he will be able to return to work. McNeill's home is at 959 West Third street.

WESTFIELD GROCERYMAN DISAPPEARS FROM HOME

L. D. Eldemora, who, until last Friday, conducted Westfield's largest grocery store, is said to have left his home and his present whereabouts are said to be unknown. Rumor has it that marital troubles caused him to quit the town and leave the business in the hands of his son who is at present conducting it.

The groceryman is well known in Westfield, where he has carried on a flourishing business at 136-38 Broad street for several years.

WERE LOWEST BIDDERS.

Burke & Bonham, Inc., local contractors, were the lowest bidders for the contract of a fourteen mile stretch of gravel road that is to be made at Hammonton, N. J. There were a large number of bidders, but the Plainfield firm offered the lowest figures. The contract has not yet been awarded but the local company will undoubtedly get the work.

HELD MONTHLY PARTY.

The monthly Thimble party of the Pastor's Aid Society, of the First Presbyterian church, was held yesterday afternoon, and despite the weather there were about fifteen present. The afternoon was spent in sewing and a general social time was held. Tea and cake were served during the afternoon.

BRIGHTSIDE CIRCLE MEETING.

The Brightside Circle of the King's Daughters will hold its monthly meeting at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. A. Powlison, 203 Somerset street. A full attendance of members is desired as the Christmas work will be started.

Meditation.

In meditation we are free. We can consider one side and then the other without embarrassment. If we change our opinion because the weight of evidence has shifted there is no one to exult over us and make us ashamed. If we recognize that we have been mistaken in our assumptions there is no one to say, "I told you so." We quietly make the necessary adjustments to ever changing reality and go on with our business of thinking. We are not required to reach any predetermined conclusions. We have no nervous anxiety to catch any particular train of thought, as we are traveling on our own feet and are willing to put up wherever the night finds us; hence it is that, while discussions go on with great vigor and few are convinced execept of the righteousness of their own cause, meditation often brings unexpected results. When we meditate we sometimes change our minds. This is a beneficent achievement, for it renders it unnecessary for us to spend all our strength in attempting to change the order of the universe and the whole direction of human progress in order to get a sense of the fitness of things.—S. M. Crothers in Atlantic Monthly.

Tobacco For Hiccups.

In a Russian medical journal Dr. G. Tatevosoff draws attention to the excellent service which may be obtained from the ordinary snuff tobacco as a means for cutting short hiccup. He relates an instructive case of a patient with some chronic chest disease, accompanied by violent cough attacks, in whom the latter used to be followed by extremely obstinate hiccup. The common remedies, including cocaine, failing to exercise any controlling influence on the most distressing symptom, Dr. Tatevosoff at last decided to give a trial to the said old fashioned popular means, making the patient on each occasion thoroughly snuff into his nose a pinch of the powder until the appearance of lively sneezing. From the first treatment the effect was truly brilliant, the hiccup subsiding as if by magic.

Sunday Games In Old England.

Queen Elizabeth issued a license for the playing of games on the Sabbath. For thus runs her order of 1599 permitting "the shooting with the standard, the shooting with the broad arrow, the shooting at the butts, the leaping for men, the running for men, the wrestling, the throwing of the sledge and the pitching of the bar, with all such other games as have at any time heretofore or now been licensed, used or played." Sixty years after, however, all was changed. In 1625 a law made Sunday pastimes illegal. No meetings or assemblies of people were allowed "oute of their owne parishes on the Lord's day within this realme of England for any sports or pastimes whatsoever."—London Express.

MORE RESPECT FOR NATIONAL ANTHEM

Head of G. A. R. Requests its Elimination From All Medleys.

That the flippant and sometimes irreverent playing of the Star Spangled Banner in a medley of airs is distasteful to many people and especially the members of the G. A. R., was shown in an order received by Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., at its meeting, last night, from David J. Palmer, commander-in-chief of the organization. In this order, it is requested that the veterans do all in their power to bring about a discontinuance of the practice of playing this patriotic song with a medley of other songs.

Commander Palmer also requests that all societies in any way affiliated with the G. A. R. to use its influence to carry out the action of the National Encampment in this matter. The local Post will assist in this movement by communicating with bands in this vicinity. It is furthermore requested that whenever the Star Spangled Banner is played in a public gathering that all persons rise and bare their heads in respect for the national anthem.

In endorsing the petition of Co. K in its efforts to secure an armory in Plainfield, the Post took this action for the purpose of complying with the suggestion of President Wilson in his message that eligible men be encouraged in the proper use of arms.

MISS GRACE THORN ELECTED GUILD TREASURER

The Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild met in the Friends' meeting house last night, when Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, gave a talk. Reports were read at a business meeting. Mrs. L. M. Case, chairman of the distributing committee, read an interesting report.

Mrs. A. G. Negley resigned as treasurer of the organization because of many duties, and Miss Grace Thorn was elected treasurer pro tem. The meeting was adjourned until the second Tuesday in January.

BUTCHERS INVITED TO WITNESS DEMONSTRATION

Another demonstration is scheduled for the monthly meeting of the Plainfield Poultry Association, to be held Wednesday night, December 16. Last month a demonstration was given of killing fowl, and this month an exhibition of trussing and boning chickens will be given by Professor Huff, of New York city. Mr. Huff has for some time been connected with one of the big markets in England, and recently gave exhibitions at the poultry show at the Grand Central Palace.

A special invitation will be sent to all the butchers in this city to attend the meeting and see this practical demonstration of the work. This will be the night when the entries close for the local poultry show, which will start on December 28, and a large attendance is expected.

TRINITY C. E. SOCIETY GIVES ANNUAL BANQUET

The first annual banquet of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity church was held in the church parlors last night. The tables were arranged to form an "E," for Endeavor. William R. Kriney acted as toastmaster. Mrs. W. R. Kriney was chairman of the supper committee and was assisted by the social committee of the society, of which Miss Sadie Searing is chairman.

There were seven speakers, including Mr. Reynolds, president of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union, and Theodore Day, of Dunellen, president of the local union. Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of the Trinity church; F. E. Smith, superintendent of the Sunday school; Miss Marie Hahn, president of the Trinity Society; E. F. Sheppard and Russell Doeringer were the other speakers of the evening. All of the speakers dwelt on the work and the spirit of the society, and the good that is being accomplished.

MUTUALIZATION OF COMPANY APPROVED

Policyholders of Prudential Insurance Co. Overwhelmingly Support New Plan.

In an overwhelming manner and by a vote of conservatively estimated as representing about one-half of the total of 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 persons eligible to ballot on the subject, the mutualization of The Prudential Insurance Company of America was approved on Monday, December 7, by the policyholders of the big corporation. Only 208 votes were cast against mutualization while 940,797 offered themselves by proxy and in person as in favor of the movement to mutualize.

The next step was to make a report to the Chancellor of New Jersey, of the action taken at the policyholders' and recent stockholders' meeting, which was done yesterday. This report the Chancellor is directed to confirm, if he is satisfied the provisions of the enabling act have been fully complied with, and on this point he will grant a hearing on December 22. The appointment of a trustee or trustees by the Chancellor to serve until the stock of the company has been taken over, for the policyholders, and mutualization finally effected, will follow at that time.

General William C. Heppenheimer, of Jersey City, was selected as chairman of the policyholders' meeting. All the officers and directors of the company were present, as was also Commissioner LaMonte, of the New Jersey Department of Banking and Insurance. The report of the appraisers appointed by Chancellor Walker, which fixed the value of The Prudential stock at $455, on a par of $50, was first read, being followed by the report of the stockholders' meeting, at which unanimous endorsement of mutualization was given. The polls were then declared open, the large number of proxies received being voted by First Vice President John K. Gore and Directors Bennet Van Syckle and William J. Magie. At the end of an hour the polls were closed and the vote announced.

JAIL DELIVERY FRUSTRATED

creted in the bed-ticking in the cell ocupied by Richard "Dick" Dunn and the saws were found in an unoccupied cell. Who put them there and who received them when they were passed in are things the officials are anxious to learn and they are confident they will do so before many days have passed. It is known where and when the tools were purchased, but the person making the purchase last Thursday in the Kirby & Stack Hardware Co. store, on Broad street, Elizabeth, is unknown.

Connors is recognized as one of the most clever prisoners confined in the jail. He denies all knowledge of the tools and the window pried loose, but it has been recalled that a number of friends visited him last Thursday. They were among the first ones to call upon him since he has been in jail. His trial for the alleged theft of $15,000 worth of jewelry from the Ackerman home was to have come up yesterday, but has been postponed until next Monday.

HELPING BELGIANS TO LIVE.

Necessity for aiding the Belgians has not lessened one bit. Every dollar contributed will do its share toward carrying a ray of sunshine and hope into the ranks of 7,000,000 non-combatants. The people of Plainfield, as well as those of the rest of the United States, do not need an example of giving, when an appeal such as is being made for the Belgians goes forth, but were an example necessary it would be had in little Holland.

Confronted by the government's need of $100,000,000 which must be gotten by an increase in the national debt or a special war tax that would fall upon the rank and file of the plain people, Holland rejects a proffer of aid from the American relief to help it sustain hundreds of thousands of refugee Belgians who fled across the border to escape the terrors of shot and shell.

Of the 1,000,000 Belgian refugees who fled into Holland at the beginning of the war, 300,000 penniless ones remain. One-half of these are living in the two southern provinces of Brabant and Zeeland. The remainder are divided among 800 communities.

Winter is on them and these refugees are now being gathered together in specially constructed camps situated on the dunes and at other healthy spots. For this purpose a special budget of about $1,500,000 has been passed to cover the expense until January. After that a further credit of $3,000,000 will be given.

Holland's rejection of outside aid for those within her borders is not mere pride. It is the desire of the Dutch people to do the best they can. They want to give their share to the miserable millions who cry for bread. Holland wants to be known as having answered, to the best of its ability, the heartrending cry of humanity. It feels it can take care of its temporary wards and does not want to handicap the United States or other neutral agencies of relief in extending the helping hand to the 7,000,000 who remain in desolate Belgium. Let us supplement the work of Holland by giving now and generously.

American people have been reading with mixed feelings of resentment and disgust the accounts in the newspapers of alleged atrocities on the part of the Germans in Belgium, most of which have been disproven after a careful investigation. So titanic is the struggle abroad that the lesser conflict raging in Mexico has been almost forgotten. Colonel Roosevelt, in an article in last Sunday's New York Times, describes a condition south of the Rio Grande that should call forth a mighty protest, and a threat to interfere if conditions are not immediately improved. The outrages which have been committed upon priests and nuns of the Catholic Church are an affront to civilization and to religion, regardless of what church is represented. Last year the story of the mistreatment of one Jewish boy in Russia called forth columns of news matter and editorials, and now when hundreds, and perhaps thousands of representatives of a great church are submitted to the greatest indignities, some of them too awful to describe, the press of the United States is too busy watching the struggle abroad to make protest.

In commenting last night upon the acceptance of a fine for a crap shooter out of funds from a child's bank Judge DeMeza was criticised unjustly. It seems that the fine was not paid in open court, but to the sergeant at the desk after the court had adjourned, as is frequently the case and Judge DeMeza knew nothing about the source from which the money came until the next day. As was said yesterday, the action did not seem at all like the excellent work Judge DeMeza has done on the bench in the past. When he was spoken to about the matter yesterday morning prior to the appearance of the editorial, he was under the impression that the representative of the Daily Press was joking, and he therefore did not explain the circumstances. Had he done so our readers may rest assured that nothing of the character of the criticism of last night would have crept into our columns. As a result we took it for granted that the facts were as then stated, and we take great pleasure in correcting an injustice to one of the most faithful and efficient of the city's officials.

Some time ago attention was called in these columns to the necessity for a law preventing the use of blinding headlights on automobiles within the limits of any city in the State. Other newspapers have commented on the subject, and legislation will probably be introduced when the lawmakers gather next month, which will provide a remedy for this condition. The Public Service Corporation finds it practical to dim the bright lights on the Main Line trolley cars when within the city limits, and yet time and time again we see a car with a dimmed light running alongside of an automobile with a light so bright that the trolley is hardly noticeable. The bright lights in use within the city limits, where autos are not supposed to travel faster than twelve or fifteen miles an hour, are not needed to make the work of the chauffeur easier, if he is obeying the speed laws. Correctional legislation cannot come too soon.

It is indeed gratifying to know that local contractors, John S. Dahl and B. S. Tallamy & Brother, have so successfully completed the work at the High School building, which was so inauspiciously started by a firm which went bankrupt on the job. Plainfield men are fully as capable of doing the work as are out of town firms, and they should be given every consideration possible under the law in the awarding of municipal contracts in the future. The concerns mentioned have proved that "Plainfielders Know How."

Some idea of the prosperity which is on the way for this country may be gained from the fact that the export of merchandise from the port of New York for the week ending last Saturday amounted to $20,061,744, as compared with $17,284,503 the preceding week, and $16,769,428 for the corresponding week last year. Since January 1, the exports have amounted to $830,622,996, as compared with $817,929,854. Surely things are getting brighter for this country, and the business depression cannot continue much longer.

Have you made your contribution to the Community Christmas movement? The response thus far has been good, but more is needed than ever before. The idea of having a municipal Christmas tree on Christmas eve, which has been proposed, and which we are advised will probably materialize, is a splendid one, and it will give hundreds of children a chance to be reminded that there really is a St. Nick, who otherwise would have no cause to believe it.

The conglomeration of misinformation which has been appearing in the New York Sun recently regarding New Jersey politics is surprising, when the high standing of the Sun as a newspaper is considered. The writer of the lastest diatribe shows that he knows little or nothing about the actual condition of affairs in Trenton.

There's some consolation for the people who have the big tax bills to pay. December 20 falls on a Sunday, so there's one more day to pay the bill. It's a safe bet that plenty of Plainfielders will take advantage of the opportunity to pay their taxes in four installments, presented this year for the first time.

HERE'S A CHRISTMAS RIDDLE FOR PRESS READERS

The following Christmas riddle was prepared by a twelve-year-old girl. Guess it if you can.

First of all, I am a small piece of paper nearly one inch square, and I carry on my back something which will make me stick closer to you than a sand burr.

My face is red and green and white, as all things should be at Christmas-time, and I remind you of snow and sleighs and Christmas-trees and Santa Claus. I am very neat and trim, for I am scalloped all the way round my edge like Christmas cookies.

I have had my picture taken, and there are now over 100,000,000 of me in almost every State; in fact, all over this country there are people who know me and send for me to come and help them make their friends happy.

You may burn, tear, cut me up, or throw me away, but although I may be destroyed my meaning never can be lost. It is something that will last forever, and it is stamped right on my face, where you can see it the first thing. It has helped many, many people, and it will help many more.

I bring happiness and cheer to every place I go besides the pleasures of the givers when they wrap up their Christmas packages and then put my little face where it will be seen. I am usually put on the back of the package right beside the name of my sender, but I am also found on the inside, too.

I was born about the first of August, but you don't see me until December, when I make my first appearance. By New Year's Day I shall have spread my wings and flown away and you won't see me again till next year at about this time. Then I shall appear again with a smiling, cheerful face, but just a little bit changed, for you know that will be a year later, and age changes one's face quite considerably.

You may find me yourself at Christmas-time—that is, if you will know me from my description, and I hope you will, because I want you to understand my message.

TOYLAND is JOYLAND

First of all, Christmas is a time for children and therefore we lay great stress upon Toyland, and it is indeed a Joyland. We believe in a Toyland made a perfect Joyland for the kiddies; and that's what we have, and that's why mothers bring children from miles around to see the toys. That's why fathers come in here, with half a dozen youngsters tagging on behind, and they will tell you they are there to amuse the kids—But all over their faces is the smile that betrays the pleasure they are geting out of it.

The Suffrage table here given is the latest revised form. The list of Suffrage States is changing so significantly and so fast in these days that one who wishes to keep abreast of the times needs a ready reminder where she may cast her eye over it frequently. Cut out this table and thumb-tack it to your writing desk where you will be sure to see it every day. Also enclose New Jersey and New York, 1915, in brackets as an eye-aid to your mental and moral concentration on the campaign in our own and our sister State.

Suffrage and the Simple Life.

"The New York College of Agriculture has found that in four towns of Tompkins county 9,077 acres of farm lands are owned by women."

Just what an investigation as to ownership of land by women alone in any one section of New Jersey might reveal I do not know. But under Jersey law the wife of any man owning real estate here is joint owner in such holdings and the man may not dispose of them by sale without his wife's written consent. This is a protection to the wife, especially the farmer's wife, who has frequently worked hard to help pay for the land thus owned. It would be still further a help to her and a recognition of her identity if she had also her share in the making of the laws that impose taxes on the land in which she is half owner; that decide the standard of the milk she handles for sale; that decide what sort of road she must travel over to her market town; that decide whether her children shall be transported over a murderous grade crossing every school day of their precious lives. These and many other matters vital to her, the woman on the farm might help solve by means of that simple device known as the ballot. Incidentally besides being joint owner in the farm acres she would doubtless choose to be joint owner as well of her own children—a privilege that up to the present writing New Jersey has not seen fit to accord its mothers.

National Grange Unanimous for Suffrage.

Considerations like these resulted in the adoption by the National Grange at its annual session of the following unanimous resolution:

"Resolved, That this 48th session of the National Grange declare emphatically and unqualifiedly for woman's suffrage."

New Jersey State Grange for Suffrage.

Among the State Granges that have endorsed equal suffrage are those of California, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, Michigan, New York, New Jersey, Oregon, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Washington and Vermont.

Secretary Bryan's "Discovery."

"After years of study of the essentials of good voting I have decided that two things are essential to make a person vote well. They are intelligence and morality. I discovered a few days ago that there are 354 men and 5 women in our State Penitentiary. I have noticed that women outnumber the men in the churches. If women have sense enough to keep out of the penitentiary and morals enough to go to church it follows that they will make good voters."

Secretary Bryan's discovery is especially applicable to women in the country districts who are invariably of the church-going, jail-avoiding type.

Farmer Stubbs a Subject For Conversion.

Farmer Stubbs, of Raritan, was looking over The Press last Wednesday:

"Woman's sphere," he said to himself, "they've been havin' a great to-do about it out West. I guess that's a wild country out there. I see some folks says the trouble ain't that women mayn't be as good as men—only they're different. The way of it is there's a sphere that's woman's and one that ain't; and women should be satisfied with what's theirs and not want to usurp men's sphere—like votin' for President and Congress."

"Who says votin' for President and Congress is men's sphere?" asked Mrs. Stubbs.

"Why, everybody," was the answer.

"No," said Mrs. Stubbs. "That can't be so. If everybody said it was, there'd be no to-do about it. Somebody must be sayin' it is and somebody else that it isn't or else we shouldn't be discussin' it at all. Let's know where we are. Who says men's sphere is votin' and women's isn't?"

"Now, wife, you know as well as I do," answered Mr. Stubbs, "some folks says it is and some says it isn't."

"I know all about that," said Mrs. Stubbs. "But what I want to know and what you haven't told me yet is who it is as lays down the law as to what women's sphere is, by keepin' them out of votin'. Somebody's doin' it, or else they'd have a vote, and wouldn't have to fight for one. Who is it then, that says votin' isn't their sphere?"

Farmer Stubbs scratched his puzzled pate.

"You wear me out, wife," he said, "with your 'who says this 're 'who says that.' But it's always like that with women. You can't agree with 'em. They always go ramblin' all over the lot, and never stick to the point!"

STUDY IN OPEN AIR SCHOOL

tally the average of children attending indoors schools, where high temperatures and poor ventilation often combine to dull the perceptions of little folk.

The Open Air School is one of the fascinating institutions of Plainfield. It profited by a "donation tea," held in October, under the management of Mrs. B. Van De Hedges and Mrs. E. W. Balkley. The tea was successful both in the number of people who attended and in gifts, which showed interest in the school. There were gifts of groceries, amounting in value to $50, and of vegetables, $18. All through the fall there were donations to the school of fresh fruit and gegetables, largely because of the efforts of Miss Sarah Van Boskerck, who interested people in the school, generally by asking them to contribute what they had to spare from their gardens. Plainfield gardens were prolific this year because of good rains right up to August 1. The Open Air School pupils were abundantly supplied with fruit and vegetables, which fact enabled the school managers to cut down the cost of the nourishing diet supplied to 12½ cents a day per child. Dr. Krans, reporting on Miss Van Boskerck's work, said the school was fortunate in having her aid, as she gave much time and thought to purchasing and preparing food.

The attendance at the Open Air School is somewhat irregular because parents failed to comprehend the advantages of teaching and nursing administered in the open air. The frequency of national holidays, saints' days and religious holidays of the foreign born adds to the irregularity. Attendance figures would average higher, but that the careful medical oversight frequently dictates that children should be sent to Muhlenberg Hospital for minor throat and nose operations, such as the removal of adenoids. Such medical oversight is responsible largely for the improvement in physical health and mental capability of pupils.

The Anti-Tuberculosis League, of Plainfield, in addition to its work in this city and North Plainfield, has extended such assistance as it could from its scanty treasuury to the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. At its last meeting $25 was appropriated toward the pay of field secretaries to advance the difficult work of educating the public to the simple precautionary methods that, if universally known, would put an end to the white plague.

Contributions of dolls and toys for the Christmas entertainment at the Open Air School on Muhlenberg place, and contributions of any kind for use in connection with the work, are very much wanted by the members of the committee of the Anti Tuberculosis League, which has the school in charge. While the entertainment will not be held until Christmas, it is especially desired that anything which Plainfielders may wish to give, either new or old, may be sent now. Persons wishing to help make the holidays brighter for these children may send contributions to Mrs. E. W. Bulkley, 683 West Seventh street, or to the school. Those who are not able to send articles may notify Mrs. Bulkley, and provisions will be made for getting them to the school.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The much-heralded novelty offering, "The Mystic Bird," will be a feature of the bill at Proctor's Theatre for the last half of the week commencing tomorrow. It features a young violinist who is acknowledged master of the instrument, and whose selections are accompanied by a marvelous singing canary, the warbling of the bird harmonizing perfectly with the strains from the bow. Another big number on the bill will be Miss Grace De Mar, listed among vaudeville's highest salaried singing comediennes, who will give her delightful repertoire of song numbers, with costume changes. An acrobatic act very much out of the ordinary will be given by the Six Navigators, a sextet of performers who have gained international fame with their remarkable feats. A comedy sketch, entitled, "Who is She?" by Theodore Ducet and company, and a comedy skit by Barrett and Earle complete the five numbers of the promising program. The first episode of the new serial film, "Zudora," will be shown this afternoon and tonight. No patron of Proctor's should fail to see this sensational series, which will be in twenty episodes, with Wednesday as the day.

Not a home in this city but has its quota of discarded furniture, rugs, stoves perhaps, a wheelbarrow maybe.

A few cents for a Press want ad and some one who needs the very article that lies rotting in your garret will call and pay you for it.

You are better off—new owner is pleased—and the article itself is contributing to the reduction of the high cost of living.

COUNTRY LIFE IN AMERICA

HOW PINTO WON THEATRICAL SUCCESS

Plainfielder Has Prominent Part in the Production of "Life."

How Effingham Pinto, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Pinto, of this city, who now has one of the leading parts in "Life" the spectacular theatrical production, achieved success, is told in the following interesting story which appeared in the New York Sun:

"Effingham Pinto came almost to being the victim of his own success. Before he had his pinfeathers, dramatically speaking, he became a Broadway favorite in 'The Climax,' which was his first appearance after graduating from Leal's dramatic school. At the conclusion of the run of 'The Climax' the young actor was so thoroughly stamped with 'type' that the only reply he could get from managers to whom he applied for work was "There is no Italian pianist in this play.'

"It was in this crisis that he got a chance to play a real comedy 'lord' with Percy Haswell's stock company in Toronto, and that first play started Pinto on his upward course. So well was he received that he had other chances for showing versatility, each time with real success.

"Not contented with out of town praise, however, Pinto last year determined to make one final splurge to show what he really could do if he tried and just exactly how far he could get away from Italian boy parts and still be successful. His chance came when he was selected to play the part of Passion, one of the most ultra feminine characters in George Hobart's 'Experience,' the play presented by the Lambs Club last year. It may be remembered that he was one of the most notable actors in a fine cast.

"'Why,' he asked when it was all over, 'should not an actor impersonate a woman as well as an actress impersonate a man? It is all a matter of study and observation, and an actor can be a perfect lady if he studies and tries just as easily as he can be an Apache. The biggest part, of course, is to look the role, and that I did by studying fashion papers, picking out garments which looked good to me and telling a dressmaker to go ahead. The rest was accomplished with a few wigs, rouge and six coats of white paint. It was lucky for me that this was an uncorseted year.'

Now, though, having thoroughly demonstrated his versatility and that he is an actor and not a 'type,' Pinto has gone back to playing the sort of part he likes best, and the sort of part that holds most of sentiment for him, inasmuch as he came right out of school to play it. This Dago Mike in 'Life' is one of the hits of the play, and Effingham Pinto is once more a young Italian boy, though this time instead of a piano player he is a dancer.

"One of the strangest parts of all this to the public who have come to know the young actor and thought he was portraying the role of one of his countrymen, is the fact that he is not an Italian at all, but a real old-time New Yorker, in whose veins flows much Spanish blood. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Pinto, whose old family home, in which dwelt Effingham's grandfather, the late Gen. Pinto, also was for years on West Eighth street. The family moved to Plainfield, and have been commuters, since the father, a New York broker, and the son, an actor, must both come to New York daily.

"It was never the intention of the young man's parents to make an actor of him. They intended him to be a broker at first, and when he showed no special aptitude for that told him to take his choice of professions and he went to Yale for one year with the idea of being a lawyer. Ill health put a stop to that, however, and when he found he could not do the things he had intended he finally took matters in his own hands and went to Henrietta Crosman and asked for a place in her company. It was on the advice of the actress that Pinto went to a dramatic school, and with study the ill health disappeared about the time success came around."

BY MORRIS MILLER

Grover Cleveland Alexander, rated by many critics as the best pitcher in the National league—and his work with the shattered Phillies just about bears out the statement—was passed up by some keen judges of players, and might have languished in the minors for a year or two more but for the fact that Patsy O'Rourke saw in him traces of future greatness. Four years ago Alexander was pitching in semi-obscurity for Syracuse in the New York State league. Clark Griffith, who was then handling the Cincinnati Reds, confided in the manager of the Syracuse team that he would slip him a personal present of $1,000 if he would send him or tip him off to a young pitcher who was the real article. This manager, now dead, wired back that he didn't know of a man in the league who looked the part of a good prospect. It so happened that Patsy was playing in the New York State league, and scouting for the Phillies on the side. About the time that Griffith was informed that the league was a wilderness as far as good pitchers were concerned, O'Rourke recommended Alexander to the Philadelphia club. The Phillies took the tip, and landed him that fall for $750, that being the draft price. Place Alexander on the block tomorrow and he would easily bring $20,000.

John McGraw figures the addition of two good men to the Giants will make his club a pennant factor, possibly a pennant winner, next year. So the Giants are going to spend $48,000 next spring in the hope of getting the men wanted. If the players are produced, the investment will be considered a good one. In spending the money McGraw will take 52 players to the training camp at Marlin. Of these 32 must be released shortly after the season gets under way. Training expenses for these 32 men will run about $200 each, totaling $6,400. Signing them cost on an average of about $2,000 each, making their total cost to the club, including training expenses, $70,400. When the time comes for cutting down, McGraw will be lucky to get $700 each for the men. Money realized from the sales probably will amount to $22,400, making the experiment cost $48,000.

Matty Baldwin, the veteran lightweight, who was hurled from an automobile last week, may never be able to box again, according to his physician. It is still feared that one of the splintered bones pierced the boxer's lungs.

Cincinnati club owners have decided to drop their scouts. This will be a blow to other National league teams, who always depended on the Reds to find good material and turn it over to them when the youths were developed.

Jim Buckley, who manages Gunboat Smith, isn't able to figure out why some people say that Gunboat lost his title of "white hope champion" by being knocked out by Sam Langford, the negro heavyweight. "Of course, there's no denying the fact that Gunboat was knocked out," says Jim. "But by winning the fight Langford didn't win the white hope championship, did he? If he didn't win it, it still belongs to Gunboat, doesn't it?"

The Federal league announces that it will re-establish a major league scale of prices: Charging 50 and 75 cents to see 19-cent ball—and that it has adopted "a system of rebuilding that will develop many young players"—all on the basis of 20 men to each payroll. Up to date, however, the Federals have not given the slightest sort of answer to the general inquiry: "How will you take care of your extra players?" Having first announced that economy would prevail; then that the rolls would be cut to 20 men, and also that "everybody would be taken care of," the Feds have apparently adopted the clam-policy as to explaining how all these wonders could jibe together. The major and minor leagues have sternly put up the barriers. There is no place for the extra Feds to hide in. The outlaw league must either pension them of break its promise. What's the answer?

Plainfield Senior Elk pinners dropped the odd game to the New York team on the latter's alleys last night. The home bowlers outplayed the local team in the first and last games, several two hundred counts helping to get the decisions. Most of Plainfield's scores were below 180 and not one of the local players succeeded in getting up in the 200 class. Kiely and Captain Nash each scored 195, which were the highest marks credited to the locals.

A. Westphal hit the wood for 208 in his first roll and immediately after him came Starr with 221 and Lee Johns, who made high score, 224. The team total for this game was 1006, while Plainfield tallied 845. Sixty-six pins separated the two scores in the second game, the local pinners having the majority. Blatz led off with a 164 and Kiely followed, going that score seven points better. Vail, Nash and Campbell scored 184, 180 and 185, respectively, and totalled 884 against their opponents' 818. In this game the home team fell way down but came back in the last and won out by 11 counts.

Plainfield chalked up three scores in the "900" class in the deciding roll, but Johns' 212 helped his team out considerably in the totalling. Nash hit for 195 in this game, while Vail was next high with 199. The scores were 927 to 916.

P. C. C. GREENS NOT FAVORED FOR EVENT

President Kingsley, of M. G. A., Urged Holding of Junior Tourney Elsewhere.

The sting of the annual meeting of the Metropolitan Golf Association was in its tail last night, in New York when at the very end the president of the United States Golf Association called attention to the importance of clubs signifying their wishes as to approving the amateur status as now defined or declaring that it should be changed.

He declared there was a beehive buzzing in the matter throughout the West and many parts of the East, too. He also complained that New York clubs were the slowest of all in returning national handicap statistics.

No club actually applied for any one Metropolitan championship, but five declared themselves receptive for anything, Apawamis, Fox Hills, Sleepy Hollow, Garden City and Wykagyl. By anything is meant the amateur, open and junior. It will be seen no New Jersey club is included.

These officers were chosen: President, Darwin P. Kingsley, St. Andrews; vice president, Mortimer Buckner, Garden City; secretary, E. Mortimer Barnes, Englewood; treasurer, J. A. Stillman, National; executive committee, the foregoing with J. Frank Shanley, Deal; George H. Barnes, Apawamis; Arthur H. Pogson, Fox Hills; Howard F. Whitney, Nassau, and Paul Moore, Morris County.

President Kingley urged that the association take more interest than has been manifested in the past in the junior championship, and said that some club other than the Plainfield Country Club should take the junior event next season, a sentiment which was echoed by a delegate from Plainfield, which has entertained the youngsters three times.

The review of the year showed that sixteen tournaments were held, two more than in 1913, and in every case there was a record entry. The membership is now seventy-two, the largest ever recorded.

HOPE CHAPEL TEAM WILL PLAY IN NEWARK NEXT

The Hope Chapel basketball team will take its first out of town trip tomorrow night, when the locals are scheduled to play the High Street Presbyterian team, of Newark, at that place. All of the regular players will not play in this game, but Coach Martin will take a team that will put up a good fight.

The Hope Chapel schedule does not call for many games off the Fourth street court, but the team may do more traveling during the week this year than last. One game that is always played on an opponent's court is the first game with the Y. M. C. A. and that will be staged on the association court Christmas night.

WHITE TEAM TAKES HONORS IN COLOR LEAGUE EVENT

The running hop, step and jump event was run off in the Color League of the Y. M. C. A. last night, and Karlberg, captain of the White team, came out a winner, his distance being 32 feet 4 inches. Campbell and Clark, both of the White team, were second and third respectively. There were four other members of the White team that took part. The results:

Karlberg, White	32.04
Campbell, White	30.07½

HIRSH ELECTED LEADER.

Aaron Hirsh has been elected captain of the senior class basketball team of the Plainfield High School for the coming season. Hand was chosen to book the games. Hirsh was a substitute on the first team last season and is a good player, centre being his position. The team will take part in the interclass league for the school championship.

CONNIE MACK TO MANAGE YANKEES

Colonel Jacob Ruppert, Jr., Will Be the Next Owner of Club.

Colonel Jacob Ruppert, Jr., a New York brewer millionaire, will be the next owner of the New York Yankees, and he will not only buy out Devery's stock in the club, but will take over the stock of Frank Farrell and the other present owners of the club as well. The negotiation may be completed this afternoon.

Rudolph Hynicka, close friend of Ruppert, Garry Herrmann, Max and Felix Fleischman, acted as the intermediary for the parties interested, which led to the story that Hynicka was the man who was buying the club. Hynicka is head of the Columbia Amusement Company, with a string of theatres all over the country and headquarters in New York.

The Ruppert deal calls for Connie Mack as manager of the Yankees, as the American Leage magnates appreciate that New York needs a manager of the winning, constructive type, more than a club owner. Mack, in all probability, will buy an interest in the club, as well as manage it. Harry Davis is slated to succeed Mack as manager of the Athletics.

The deal has been under consideration for some time—in fact, ever since Ban Johnson made his mysterious visit to New York two weeks ago. It is said the deal will be closed before Ban Johnson leaves New York, and that a difference of $100,000, which may be compromised, is preventing its consummation.

the enemy's trenches. It has been the same in the forest of LePretre.

"In the Vosges we have repulsed numerous attacks to the northwest of Sinones. In the rest of the Vosges section, the enemy did not make any serious effort to attack."

Regarding the situation in Russia the statement says:

"The stubborn attacks of the Germans against the front of Ilow, Lowicz, Strykow, Lodz and a line running from north to south, six kilometres to the west of Piotrokow, have been repulsed. Nevertheless by reason of the arrow shaped position of the lines, the Russians have felt it necessary to evacuate Lodz.

"In Galicia the Austrians who seem to have been reinforced by the Germans, have again taken the offensive in the region of Neusande.

"In Servia the Servian armies are making progress in the high valleys of the Western Morava, and on the left bank of the Ljig River. They have taken the heights of Meljen, capturing numerous prisoners and cannon of the enemy. In the region of Kasmaj they are in contact with the Austrian troops."

A German taube type aeroplane, which flew over Bar le Duc yesterday, was brought down near Chaumont by a shell from a 75-metre gun. The three German aviators were incinerated.

The mastery of the seas has been realized by the Allied fleets, declares the French Minister of Marine in an interview given to the Petit Parisien. The commercial fleet of the enemies, Germany and Austria, representing twenty-five per cent. of the world's maritime traffic, has been annihilated, he says.

Petrograd, Dec. 9.—Continued fighting in East Prussia between the Germans and Russians is reported in an official statement issued by the general staff today, which says:

"Engagements which have developed in the region of Przasnysz and Ciechanow (east of the East Prussian border and Mlawa) have not yet terminated.

"In the fighting which took place in the region of Piotrkow we were only partially successful.

"The battle which commenced December 5 southeast of Cracow, in the region of Wieliczka on the river Deriuty, has developed in our favor. After having courageously forced the passage of the Rounaets river in the vicinity of Nowy Sandec our reinforcements pursued the offensive and inflicted a serious defeat on the German troops which had formed in the valley of Lososzyna. The German right wing, which was pursued, was turned.

"The Twenty-fourth German Corps, transported here from Belgium, opened this combat with an automobile battery in its advance, which was partly disabled and partly put to flight without striking a blow. Following this we successfully put out of action several pieces of heavy artillery, silenced five field batteries and captured several cannon.

"The German prisoners affirm that their units sustained enormous losses, some of the companies being reduced to forty men. We are pursuing the offensive.

"On the morning of December 7 the Turkish cruiser Breslau was discovered in the vicinity of Sebastopol. Our cruisers and hydroplanes started in pursuit, but before an attack could be made the Breslau disappeared out to sea."

Advices from Salonika state that the Sublime Porte is preparing a pamphlet for Parliament calculated to refute the view taken in certain quarters that Turkish subservance to the German arms caused Turkey to enter the war.

The Russian withdrawal from Lodz was for strategic reasons, says an official statement issued from the army headquarters, which admits for the first time the advance claimed by the Germans. The Russian line in the region of Lodz will be reformed, and reinforcements will strengthen it to hold the German advance until the campaign against Cracow can be pushed to its completion and the Germans compelled to evacuate that city or surrender.

London, Dec. 9.—A despatch to the Daily Mail from Rotterdam says that a bombardment of the Belgian coast between Ostend and Nieuport began at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in conjunction with land operations.

The Daily Express hears from the Belgian frontier that the German divisional headquarters was removed from Roulers when shells began to fall in the town after the British had recaptured Passachendaele, eleven miles northeast of Ypres. This indicates a distinct and important advance by the Allies.

Rome, Dec. 9 (Central News Cable).—Following the resumption of the offensive by the Servian armies under the leadership of King Peter in person, the Austrians are retiring to the north, says a despatch from Nish to the Messagero. The Servians have recaptured Tajdau and Suvobor and are now marching on Valhavo.

An official announcement from Constantinople says that the Turks have invaded Persia, occupying Santschbulak.

The Messagero's correspondent at Petrograd says that the Germans almost destroyed Lodz in bombarding it and that its occupation does not represent a success on the part of the Germans, as they were driven toward Lodz by a Russian offensive movement which they could not resist.

It is officially stated in Berlin that the German government has telegraphed the government of South Africa that Germany engages to commit no further acts of hostility in South Africa if the government addressed pledges itself to a similar course. Germany also says that if South Africa proclaims its independence, she will immediately recognize the new state.

BERLIN, Dec. 9 (by wireless, via London.)—The following official statement was given out by the German army headquarters late yesterday afternoon.

"On the coast of Flanders the bad condition of the roads, made worse by the recent torrential rains, is causing great difficulty to the movements of our troops. To the north of Arras we have made some slight progress.

"The war hospital at Lisele was burned yesterday, probably being set on fire. No lives were lost.

"The statement made by the French regarding an advance in the forest of Argonne is not in accordance with the facts. For a long time no French attacks whatever have taken place there. On the contrary, we are continually gaining ground slowly.

"The day before yesterday a French position at Malincourt, east of Varennes, was captured. The greater part of the garrison fell on this occasion. The remainder, two officers and about 150 men, were taken prisoners.

"A French attack on our positions to the north of Nancy was repulsed yesterday.

"No special reports are at hand from the East Prussian frontier. In Northern Poland the German troops are closely pursuing the retreating enemy to the north and east of Lodz. Besides the extraordinarily large and sanguinary losses reported yesterday, the Russians have lost up to the present about 1,500 prisoners. In Southern Poland nothing special has happened."

AROUND THE WORLD IN NINETY MINUTES

Harry C. Ostrander, the well-known lecturer, will be the attraction at the Washington School tomorrow evening, and his illustrated lecture on strange corners of foreign lands is expected to draw a large audience to the fourth of the Board of Education's free entertainments for this season.

The lecture is called "Around the World in Ninety Minutes," and carries the audience through practically every European and Asiatic country in the world. Many beautiful stereopticon slides, taken by the lecturer himself during his extensive travels, are used, and Mr. Ostrander's account of the scenes thus vividly presented to the audience include several hair-raising adventures in which he himself participated while journeying through the countries which he describes.

The doors of the auditorium will open at 7:30, and the lecture begins promptly at 8 p. m.

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant, this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding it a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the store that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods and you will be building business for yourself.

JAPAN'S FAT WRESTLERS.

Outside of the Arena Eating Is Their Most Important Task.

The most envied men in Japan are the wrestlers, who are fat and bulky. The first requisite of a Japanese wrestler is that he be fat. Their stomachs are their proudest possessions. The fatter the man the more money they will bet on him, even though a bedslat can throw him clear out of the ring. As a fat wrestler walks down the street a crowd gathers around him, hoping that he will turn into some restaurant. If he does they gather in the doorway to watch him eat. They would rather hear a Japanese wrestler eat that go to a three ring. A wrestler never disappoints them—he plows through astounding quantities of food, turning everything under except a few radish skins and turnip tops. It's unbelievable how much noise they make when eating, by smacking their lips, sucking up their tea with the open exhaust and picking their teeth with the cutout on.

The champion eaters of them all—the wrestlers—have long hair, but instead of letting it hang down on their shoulders, as one would naturally expect, they do it up in knots until they look like a gigantic kewpie. Whenever you see a man in Japan going around with a large sized walnut on his head you may know that he follows the ancient and honorable profession of wrestling. Their wrestling consists of the men standing upright in the ring making a rush at each other and trying to push each other out. Every time two wrestlers come together they give a prodigious grunt. When one of them finally succeeds in pushing the other out the crowd bursts forth into mighty applause, while the victor modestly pats his stomach to show where the praise is due.—Homer Croy in Leslie's.

COLOSSAL CANOPUS.

If It Were Our Sun It Would Take Over Eight Hours to Rise.

Of all the twenty first magnitude stars the inherent glory of Rigel and Canopus is the greatest. Only two are farther than they, while the other sixteen are very much nearer.

Estimates give the light of Rigel as equal to that of 22,000 suns and that of Canopus as 55,000.

Assuming that their general surface brilliancy is the same as that of the sun and recalling that Rigel has at least 22,000 and Canopus 55,000 times the light of the sun, the square root of these figures gives us Rigel's diameter as 150 and Canopus' 235 times that of the sun.

Whereas the sun's diameter, as seen in the sky, measures one-half a degree, Canopus', at the same distance, would measure 117½ degrees of the 180 that reach from horizon to horizon, and its disk would cover 55,225 times the sky area occupied by the sun. Canopus would be nearly eight hours in rising.

With such a globe brought so near, all life on the earth would instantly perish, seas would be converted into steam, and the very mountains would melt with fervent heat and flow like molten iron. Beside such facts our corner of the universe seems diminutive, dull and insignificant.

These two marvelous orbs have been found among a group of twenty to which they belong. Out of the million million stars known to exist only twenty, for aught we know, might yield similar specimens. Nothing proves that such worlds are rare.—Scientific American.

The Critic Scored.

"I have just sold that picture for $2,000!" said the jubilant artist.

"I congratulate you on your ability," replied the critic.

"Thank you. It makes a difference, doesn't it?"

"Makes a difference? I don't understand you."

"I mean that it makes a difference when a man succeeds. Up to this time you have never uttered a word of praise or encouragement to me. Two or three times you have made slight references to my ability as a painter. Now that I have sold a picture for a good price you begin to see that I have artistic talent."

"Oh, I'm not congratulating you on your artistic talent, but on your ability as a salesman."—Chicago News.

Sir Galahad.

The most conspicuous of the Knights of the Round Table was Sir Galahad, the son of Launcelot and Elaine. The familiar words, "There Galahad sat, with manly face, yet maiden meekness in his face," sufficiently indicate the qualities for which the knight was famous—to wit, lion hearted courage combined with humility and meekness of spirit, the strength of the oak with the soft beauty of the lily.

WORKED BOTH WAYS.

A Ruse That Attracted as Well as Diverted Attention.

One morning Mrs. Wilmington's attention was attracted by a strange spectacle coming up the street. At that distance she could not quite make it out. It appeared to be some sort of animal with a headlight fastened to its forehead. As it came nearer it resolved itself into the shape of a human being—perhaps some sheik with a red fez. But in another moment Mrs. Wilmington recognized Martha Maria Sophrina Smith, the seventeen-year-old colored girl who came every Monday for the laundry.

Martha Maria had a flaming red ribbon four inches wide round her head. It was tied in front into a huge bow, the wings of which stood out four inches beyond her forehead.

Mrs. Wilmington was surprised, for, although she had noticed some of the signs of pride of dress in Martha Maria, the girl had more than the ordinary amount of good taste.

"Why, Martha," exclaimed Mrs. Wilmington, as the girl came round the porch, "what in the world are you wearing that bow for?"

A slow grin widened the girl's mouth as she said:

"To attract attention, missy."

"To attract attention? Why do you want to attract attention?"

"I don't, mah'm."

"Then why are you wearing that awful bow on your forehead?"

"So folkses will look at mah haid."

"Why do you want them to look at your head?"

"So they won't look at mah feet—I got holes in mah shoes."—Youth's Companion.

GOLD LETTERED SIGNS.

None of the Leaf Used In Making Them Is Ever Wasted.

"On the matter of domestic economy in the American household, which, it is asserted, the housewives and the boys and girls of the family no longer practice, it is interesting to know that if economy be a lost art at home it is pursued with a great deal of care in many lines of business," remarked Henry A. Shields of New York. "I was impressed a few months ago by the observation of a sign painter, who informed me that he could not deliver a sign I had ordered on a certain day because in the intervening time he would have the quarterly clean up day. I was curious to know what clean up day meant, and he told me.

"It appears that in the making of signs a great deal of gold leaf is used, and necessarily some of it is wasted, just as it is when gold letters are placed on show windows. I had never noticed that when the painter is at work putting the leaf on he is careful to conserve all the leavings. Just so in the shops. All refuse there is carefully brushed into a pile and kept. In three months' time there will be a great deal of what appears to be rubbish around a sign painter's shop, but the painter knows its value. This rubbish is cleaned up, stowed in bags and sent to Philadelphia, where it is screened and the particles of gold leaf extracted. My friend informed me that it is not unusual to get as high as $90 out of one shipment of rubbish, all of which goes to the workmen in the shop and not to the owner."—Washington Post.

When Charlemagne Took a Bath.

Like so many of the European warm springs and bathing places, Baden-Baden was first appreciated by the Romans. The Emperor Caracalla in especial honored it by his patronage and adorned it in various Roman ways. With the fall of the empire and the arrival together of the barbarians and Christianity, bathing and, above all, bathing in warm water, fell into disuse all over Europe as an enfeebling and immoral practice. It was only when Charlemagne, whose name was one to conjure with, dipped his imperial person in the hot springs of Aix-la-Chapelle that bathing, after seven centuries of disuse, became again permissible, if not almost desirable. From that time on, with varying fortunes, Baden-Baden was a health and pleasure resort.—Harrison Rhodes in Harper's Magazine.

Looking on the Bright Side.

Somebody passed a counterfeit dollar on old Uncle Mose, which nearly broke his heart. Weeks later he related his troubles to his employer. "Ah done gib up lookin' fer de man whut gimme it," he said. "Ah reckon it ain't no use tryin' fer to find him." "Well, it looks pretty good for a counterfeit," remarked the other. "Why don't you try to get rid of it?" "Yes, sah; yes, sah. Sho' does look thataway. Some days Ah think mase'f it's good. Guess Ah'll jes' wait fer one of 'em good days an' jes' pass it erlong."—Argonaut.

Language Mixed.

"That," said the physician, as he examined the lump on the man's neck, "is the remains of an old boil that started to come and then became encysted there."

"Well," said the unlettered patient, "it sure has encysted on stayin' there."—Chicago Post.

CHRISTMAS CANDIES.

Fondant—Two cups sugar, three-fourths cup water; put in granite pan, stir until it boils, then add two drops acetic acid. Wet cloth and continually from side of pan wipe any sugar which may have splashed there. When boiling point is reached cover and boil rapidly three or four minutes. Remove cover and let boil rapidly until a soft ball. Wet platter and pour mixture on, but do not scrape pan nor let last bit drip from pan. When nearly cold, take ladle or knife and scrape candy from sides to middle of platter until it forms a solid mass. Cover with dampened cloth and let stand at least a day. Can keep it a week if you keep cloth damp.

Make two batches of fondant. When ready to make bonbons, break off enough fondant from one batch to nearly fill several small jelly glasses. Set in a pan of warm water till fondant melts; to one add chopped nuts, to another chocolate, and to a third cocoanut. When cool enough to handle form into little candies, any desired shape, and let harden, placing on waxed paper. Into several more jelly glasses put the rest of the fondant; melt and add vegetable color paste till the desired color. Dip candies into this and let dry on waxed paper. On some put half a walnut or half an almond.

Melt baker's bitter chocolate and into it dip pieces of candied cherries and pineapple. Get Brazil nuts, shell, and dip meats into the fondant.

This isn't as much work as it sounds to be, and for a small sum you can have several pounds of delicious candy which you know is pure. Also, it makes nice Xmas gifts.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

To Remove Scars—Put one-fourth teaspoon boracic acid into tumbler of warm water. Apply to scar with a soft sponge as often as possible until the scar disappears.

For Sudden Attack of Indigestion—Relief can be had by eating as much salt as one can hold between the thumb and finger.

For Sour Stomach—Get a five-cent cake of magnesia and take, dry, a small chunk the size of two peas. This has often given instant relief. It can be taken as often as needed without injury in any way.

For Pneumonia Symptoms—Grease chest well with sweet oil and apply pulverized lobelia thickly; cover with a soft cloth, and within a few hours the symptoms will disappear.

For Jumping Toothache—Make vinegar hot. Take small piece of cotton, dip in vinegar and apply in hollow tooth. Also take a flannel cloth dipped into the hot vinegar and apply to cheek; will give quick relief.

To Prevent Chapped Hands—Use this lotion: One-fourth ounce tragacanth, one ounce rosewater, two ounces glycerine, one ounce alcohol, five drops oil geranium. Soak tragacanth in pint of cold water 48 hours. Beat and add slowly to rest of mixture.

FOR HOME SEAMSTRESS.

In basting long seams, a long, slim darning needle is more desirable than an ordinary sewing needle, for speed.

Let one who has trouble in threading needles try basting this way: After using length of thread in basting, let needle remain until seam is stitched. If full length of seam isn't basted, use other needle or needles in same way until basting is finished. Object in having thread double is to keep needles threaded while stitching is being done. After seams are stitched, then cut off knots and with needles pull out basting threads and knot again and keep using over and over again (till thread is worn out) without having to thread needles.

Shirtwaist or dressing sacque made in less than half hour from husband's discarded shirts—When husband's shirts are worn out around neckband and are discarded by him, cut off the sleeves, neckband and yoke in the back, lay shirtwaist pattern on material, using back of shirt for back of waist and front for front of waist; cut the sleeves the required length, using sleeve pattern to shape top of sleeve. The "French" cuffs, the boxplait in front, and all buttonholes being already made, and buttons sewed on, all to sew are the shoulder and side seams and collar band.

In the stable there was that fusion of shadow and light in which captive spaces reveal all their mystery. Little areas of brightness, of functioning; then dimness, then the deep. Brightness in which surfaces of worn floor, slivered wall, dusty glass, showed values more specific than those of color. Dimness in which gray rafters with wavering edges, rough posts, each with an accessory of shadow; an old harness in grotesque loops, ceased to be background and assumed roles. The background itself, modified by many an unshadowed promontory, was accented in caverns of manger and roof. The place revealed mystery and beauty in the casual business of saying what had to be said.

Mary filled her arms with hay and turned to the manger. The raw smell of the clover smote her, and it was as sweet as spring repromised. She stood for a moment with the hay in her arms, her breath coming swiftly.

Down on the marsh, not half an hour away, he was coming to her, to be with her, as she had grown used to imagining him. She had thought that he was not coming, and he was almost here. She knew now that she was glad of this, no matter what it brought her—glad as she had never known how to be glad of anything before. He was coming! There was a thrill in the words every time that she thought them. Already she was welcoming him in her heart, already he was here, already he was born into her life.

With a soft, fierce rush of feeling not her own, it seemed to her that her point of perception was somehow drawn inward, as if she no longer saw from the old places, as if something in her that was not used to looking looked. In the seat where her will had been was no will. But somewhere in there, beyond all conflict, she felt herself to be. Beyond a thousand mists, conditions, little seekings for comfort, reflections at toil, the cryings of personality for its physical own, she stood at last, herself within herself. And that which through the slow process of her life and of life and being immeasurably before her had been seeking its expression, building up its own vehicle of incarnation, quite suddenly and simply flowered. It was as if the weight and the striving within her had been the pangs of some birth. She stood, as light of heart as a little child, filled with peace and tender exaltation.

These filled her on the road which she took to meet him—and took alone, for she would have no one go with her. ("What's come over Mary?" they asked one another in the kitchen. "She acts like she was somebody else and herself too.") The night lay about her as any other winter night—white and black—a clean white world, on which men set a pattern of highway and shelter; a clean dark sky, on which a story is written in stars, and between—no mystery, but only growth. Out toward the drawbridge the road was not well broken. She went, stumbling in the ruts and hardly conscious of them. And Mary thought:

"Something in me is glad.

"It's as if something in me knew how to be glad more than I ever knew how alone.

"For I'm nothing but me here in Old Trail Town, and yet it's as if something had come, secret, on purpose to make me know why to be glad.

"It's something in the world bigger than I know about.

"It's in me, and I guess it was in folks before me, and it will be in folks always.

"It isn't just for Ebenezer Rule and the city.

"It's for everybody, here in Old Trail Town as much as anywhere.

"It's for folks that's hungry for it, and it's for folks that ain't.

"It's always been in the world, and it always will be in the world, and some day we'll know what to do."

But this was hardly in her feeling or even in her thought; it lay within her thanksgiving that the child was coming and he only a little way down there across the marsh.

CHAPTER XV.

Merry Christmas.

IT seemed quite credible and even fitting that the mighty, rushing, lighted express, which seldom stopped at Old Trail Town, should that night come thundering across the marsh and slow down at the drawbridge for her sake and the little boy's. Several coaches' length from where she stood she saw a lantern shine where they were lifting him down. She ran ankle deep through the thinly crusted snow.

"That's it!" said the conductor. "All the way from Idaho!" And swung his lantern from the step. "Merry Christmas!" he called back.

The little thing clasping Mary's hand suddenly leaped up and down beside her.

"Merry Christmas! Merry Christmas! Merry Christmas!" he shouted with all his might.

Mary Chavah stood silent, and as the train drew away held out her hand, still in silence, for the boy to take.

As the noise of the train lessened he looked up.

"Are you her?" he asked soberly.

"Yes," she cried joyously. "I'm her!"

Their way led east between high banks of snow. At the end of the road was the village, looking like something lying on the great white plate of the meadows and being offered to one who needed it. At the far end of the road which was Old Trail road hung the blue arc light of the town hall, center to the constellation of the home lights and the shop lights and the street lights. There, in her house, were her neighbors gathered to do no violence to that Christmas paper of theirs, since there was to be no "present trading," no "money spending." Nevertheless they had drawn together by common consent, and it was Christmas eve. She knew it now. There is no arbi-

"Are you her?" he asked soberly.

trary shutting out of that for which Christmas stands. As its spirit was in the village, so its spirit is in the world—denied, indeed, put upon, crowned with mockery, dragged in the dirt bearing alien burdens, but through it all immaculate, waiting for men to cross the threshold at which it never ceases to beckon to a common heritage. Home of the world, with a thousand towers shining with uncounted lights, lying very near—above the village, at the end of the Old Trail road upon the earth at the end of a yet unbeaten path—where men face the sovereign fact of humanhood.

But all this lay within Mary's dumb thanksgiving that the child was running at her side. And the vision that she saw streamed down from Capella, of the brightness of a hundred of our suns, the star that stood in the east above the village where she lived.

Lanterns glowed through the roadside shrubbery, little kindly lights, like answers, and at a bend in the road voices burst about them, and Buff Miles and the children, Gussie and Bennet and Tab and Pep and little Emily, ran, singing, and closed about Mary and the child and went on with them, slipping into the "church choir Christmas carols," and more, that Buff had been fain to teach them. The music filled the quiet night, rose in the children's voices like an invocation to all time.

One for the way it all begun,
Two for the way it all has run,
What three'll be for I do forget,
But what will be has not been yet.
So holly and mistletoe,
So holly and mistletoe,
So holly and mistletoe,
Over and over and over, oh!

Between songs the children whispered together for a minute.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—Old King Snow And His Pretty Snow Sprites.

King Snow Has Everything His Own Way.

"OLD KING SNOW is very fond of Christmas," said daddy as he snuggled the kiddies close for the evening story, "because then his winter kingdom is usually at its height."

"Tell us about King Snow, will you, daddy?" asked the children.

"King Snow's summer kingdom," began daddy, "is away up in the arctic region, where his sway is not disputed by the sun king. For years King Snow has only reigned part of the year in the temperate zone. The other part of the year is taken by King Sun.

"But up in the arctic region King Sun's reign is very feeble and King Snow has everything about his own way.

"And the little snow sprites are very happy up there because they know they are immortal.

"But every year around Christmas time, usually a little before Christmas, King Snow selects some of his snow sprites to go down to the temperate zone with him and establish his kingdom.

"This is considered a great honor, of course, but it is an honor which is attended by danger since the snow sprites know that only a few of their number will return. The others are killed when King Snow and King Sun have their annual spring battle for supremacy.

"So before starting for the temperate zone each autumn the little snow sprites give a wonderful party.

"They gather around a big table made out of a great slab of ice—ice so clear and beautiful that the ferns and moss frozen in it can be very plainly seen.

"Then the snow sprites clothe themselves in their very prettiest frocks, which, of course, are of spun frost, and in their hair they wear snow crystals for ornaments.

"King Snow sits in his great carved ice chair, and as they file past him to their places at the table he touches each one gently with the tips of his scepter.

"This causes each one to glow and glimmer and shimmer from top to toe like diamonds.

"Then the snow sprites have their feast and dance afterward to the music of the north wind.

"But the music made by the north wind is not nearly so merry as it might be, and so some of the snow sprites weep a tiny bit before they go away to prepare for their southern journey."

"Good-night, kiddies."

"Good night, daddy."

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Why, Mrs. Parker, what is the matter?" asked Mrs. Hull, going up to her neighbor who was sitting on the back steps of the farmhouse with her face in her hands. Deep convulsive sobs shook her frame and tears trickeled through her fingers. It seemed as if the long agony of years had broken all bounds and the deluge had washed away from her all semblance of self-control.

As she did not answer, Mrs. Hull sat down on the steps beside her and put a comforting arm on her shoulder, waiting for the storm to spend itself.

"Now tell me what is the trouble; perhaps I can help you," she said as the sobs subsided.

"You are very kind, but no one can help me. I thank you, though, from my soul," came from behind the wet handkerchief.

"All things are capable of change this side of the grave. What you need is a fresh viewpoint. I can give you that, perhaps," and Mrs. Hull smoothed the hair from the hot forehead.

"You know Marian is to be married in two weeks. She had her heart set on a pretty home wedding, but the house looks so I am ashamed to have anyone see it. I wanted to paper the parlor and get a new carpet and curtains, and have the girl take away one pleasant memory of her home. She has been shut off from the pleasure of young society, for she never had anything to wear or a decent place to invite anyone to, but we had to give that up for her father wouldn't hear to it. He finally consented to buy her a white dress to be married in. She has gone over to Elson's Corners to get the dress, and will make it over there. Her cousins will help her with it.

"I thought as long as I couldn't get the house fixed up I would at least get a dress to wear. I would like her to be able to think of me in something besides blue calico and black cashmere. Pa always buys all my dresses, two blue calicoes a year and my black cashmere is six years old. I have been black and blue ever since I was married," she added with a bitter laugh.

"So just before they started I asked him to let me go to town with them and pick out a dress, but he said as I wasn't going to get married my dress would do. Marian went off with tears in her eyes and I—well I've been sitting here ever since," and she leaned her head on her hand, spent with the fury of the tempest.

Mrs. Hull was silent for a while. Finally she said:

"I have it. You can get the dress yet. You get on your black dress and hat and come home with me. After we see him drive past our house on his way here I will hitch up and take you to town. Get what you want and charge it. You have credit. Then come to my house and stay while Marian is away. We will make the dress and get you all fixed up for the wedding."

Mrs. Parker sat staring at her as if she saw a spirit. "What would he do here alone?" she breathed.

"Why, I hope he would learn to appreciate you at last. Let him think he has lost you. It will do him good."

A wild light shone from the tear-stained face. "I'll do it," she said firmly, rising and going into the house.

"And about the wedding," continued Mrs. Hull, following her friend. "Why not have her married in the new church parlor? We could decorate it, and I will give the bridal feast in my pretty dining room."

While she talked she helped the fumbling fingers to fasten the black dress and soon the two women were on the way to the neighbor's house a quarter of a mile up the road.

TELLS OF MISSION WORK IN MEXICO

Miss Bonine Addresses Home and Foreign Societies at Crescent Ave. Church.

Under the auspices of the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, of the Crescent Avenue church, a union missionary meeting was held in the parlors of the church, yesterday afternoon, at which time Miss Bonine, a missionary teacher in Mexico, addressed the gathering. She brought some of the latest information concerning the work of missionaries in that country, emphasizing especially that being accomplished by those employed by the Presbyterian Board of Missions.

Miss Bonine told of the excellent opportunities now offered to carry the gospel to the people of Mexico and her story of what already has been done in spite of many difficulties was encouraging to the missionary societies. Mrs. E. G. Read, president of the foreign society, and Mrs. I. C. Pierson, president of the home society, presided at the meeting. Following the address, there was a vocal solo by Miss Mary Runkle. There was a social hour during which tea was served.

MACRORIE WILL GET NEW TRIAL

Deposed Mt. Horeb Minister Granted An Appeal From Three Months' Term.

ON THREE EXCEPTIONS

Was Sentenced for Alleged Relations With Nineteen Year Old Girl July 11, 1913—Has Been Out on Bail.

As a sequel to a sentence of three months in the Union county jail imposed on him by Judge James C. Connolly, July 11, 1913, Rev. Willis S MacRorie, the deposed pastor of the Mt. Horeb and Springdale M. E churches, who was found guilty of improper relations with nineteen-year-old Edith Nelson, one of his congregation, was today granted an appeal on a writ of error to Chief Justice Gummere, of the New Jersey Supreme Court, and was granted the right to a new trial. His demand for retrial is based on the strength of three technicalities as follows:

First, that the testimony regarding the girl's confession should have been stricken out in the summing up because it was excluded from the evidence; second, that Prosecutor Stein, in cross-examining Dr. Bullman, allowed the latter to read an extract from Gray's "Anatomy," and it was held that the rule of the court barred the use of medical books as incontrovertable evidence; and third, that Judge Connolly, in his charge to the jury, instructed that body to go back as far as November 19, 1912, in considering the case. It was maintained that the latter date included offenses alleged to have been committed in Essex and Somerset counties, over which the Union county courts had no jurisdiction.

Following the administration of sentence, MacRorie was admitted to $1,000 bail furnished by Manning F Coddington, one of his loyal champions, and is at present at liberty on this bond. Clarence E. Case is the defendant's counsel.

Following his arrest in 1912, MacRorie was cross-examined in the office of Police Chief Kiely and there made a signed confession in which he is said to have admitted his culpability in the wrong done to the Nelson girl. Miss Nelson at first corroborated the minister's confession of his wrong-doing, but when placed on the witness stand asserted that their relations had only been as a "loving pastor to a member of his flock." He was thirty-seven years of age at the time of the alleged commission.

Miss Nelson's father died when she was four years of age and her mother was married a second time to Dennis Mason, who is a farmer with a place near Martinsville, hence the bringing of the name Gertrude Mason into the case in many instances. MacRorie was formerly a veterinary surgeon but deserted the alleviating of equine suffering for the work of bettering human souls. He studied for the ministry at Drew Seminary, near Madison. For three years he had charge of little churches at Mt. Horeb and Springdale and insisted on delivering his weekly sermons on several occasions after the serious charge had been made against him by the girl's mother, Mrs. Amelia Mason.

The reversal of the decision by the New Jersey Supreme Court means that it will be retried at a date which will be announced later.

ELKS' RECEPTION TO BE HELD TONIGHT

Local Lodge Will Entertain Members and Friends in Grand Style.

All is in readiness for the informal dance to be given by the local lodge of Elks to its members and friends at the clubhouse on Watchung avenue, tonight, and indications point to a record attendance, if the demand for invitations can be taken as a criterion.

The ball-room has been decorated in an elaborate manner by means of American flags and bunting, and the committee of arrangements has left nothing undone to add to the comfort and pleasure of those who may take this opportunity of spending an evening of unalloyed happiness with the Best People On Earth."

The announcement that music for dancing will be furnished by Van Epps' celebrated banjo orchestra, with the famous Victor drummer, is enough in itself to assure those who attend that the music for dancing will be of the very best obtainable During intermission an elaborate collation will be served under the direction of the club steward in the banquet hall.

The committee having the affair in charge consists of Dr. Chalmers L Crist, John V. Todd, Elmer D. Cutting, John H. Cose and Charles W Leonard.

THEATRE-GOERS LIKE ONE ACT PLAYS

Yale Association Will Present Four of Them Here on New Year's Eve.

There seems to be an increased interest of late on the part of the theatre-going populous for one-act plays. This is, perhaps, largely due to the appeal made by the "movies." Today one can see as much action in one reel of a photo-play as could formerly be found in a prolonged melodrama.

But even among the devotees of the drama in the more literal sense, one-act plays are receiving more attention than they did several years ago. The Princess Theatre, in New York, has met with success in producing nothing but one-act pieces. In vaudeville appear the names of prominent actors who are putting their efforts into shorter pieces.

The Yale Dramatic Association, realizing this change of taste, presented last winter three one-act pieces that were warmly received wherever presented. This year, the association will continue its policy and present an entertaining bill of four one-act plays, as follows: "St. Bartholomew's Eve," a romance of F. W. Tuttle; "The Ghost of Jerry Bundler," by W. W. Jacobs and Charles Rock; "Behind the Beyond,' a dramatic adaptation from Stephen Leacock, by J. R Crawford, and "The Stranger," a tragedy, by A. F. Jenks. The plays will be given at the Plainfield Theatre New Year's Eve.

FREDERICK BREEM DIED FOLLOWING LONG ILLNESS

Following a long illness, Frederick Breem, for many years a resident of this city, died yesterday, at Bonnie Burn Sanitarium, where he had been a patient. He was born in Brooklyn and moved to Plainfield with his parents when a boy. In 1893 he entered into partnership with John Doyle in the fish business under the name of Breem & Doyle, and later joined the first paid fire department. For seven years he was stationed at headquarters.

Leaving the employ of the city he became manager of the Central Livery Stables and left there to become superintendent of a horse exchange and sale yard in Morristown. He was a member of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, I. O. F.

Mr. Breem is survived by a widow, one brother and a son and daughter. The services will be private.

CHARMING PLAY BY COLLEGE CLUB

"The Rose and the Ring" Delights Large Audiences at Hartridge Auditorium.

AN EXCELLENT CAST

Thackeray's Pantomime Converted Into a Clever Farce Is Given With a Zest Characteristic of College Larks.

"The Rose and the Ring," or the history of "Prince Giglio and Prince Bulba," was given by members of the College Club, last night, at the Hartridge Auditorium, following an afternoon performance of children. Miss Margaret McCutchen who, as "Fairy Blackstick," was "responsible for everything" in the play was also, it was whispered, responsible for the converting of Thackeray's pantomime into a clever farce which the college girls gave with a zest characteristic of college larks.

Before the curtain rose, "Fairy Blackstick" gave the audience the gist of the matter in a rhymed prologue. Then the business began, the magic rose and ring causing all kinds of trouble in two royal households. Miss Ralston as "Princess Angelica," was very charming and princessly both with and without the ring and in the breakfast scene showed true daughterly characteristics in the treatment of her royal father, "King Valoroso," Miss Helen Besler. The humor of this kingly part was irresistible and Miss Besler created a sovereign after Thackeray, the satirist's own heart.

"Prince Giglio" and "Prince Bulbo," enacted by Miss Wells and Miss Ellen Burk respectively, were first

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE IN CYCLE ACCIDENT

Young Man and Machine Hurled by Train at Lackawanna Crossing Today.

Suffering from injuries sustained in an accident on the Lackawanna Railroad crossing at Madison shortly after 6 o'clock this morning, Elmer Gayle, twenty-two years old, of Vine street, North Plainfield, is a patient in the All Souls' Hospital at Morristown, suffering with a broken leg. Gayle's escape from instant death was little short of miraculous. He was crossing the tracks on his motorcycle when a passenger train bore down on him, hitting the lighter vehicle in a manner that hurled motorcycle and rider a distance of thirty feet. The young man was picked up in an unconscious condition and at first it was thought that his injuries were of a more serious nature.

He was given first aid treatment at Madison and later removed to the Morristown hospital. At that institution this afternoon, it was said that he was resting at easily as could be expected, although it will be some time before he is able to return to his home. The hospital authorities notified the victim's father, H. E. Gayle, a local hardware dealer, and he left immediately for Morristown

The details of the accident delivered to the man's relatives here were meagre and it is not known just how the mishap occurred. He is known to be a careful and thoroughly experienced motorcyclist and is familiar with the road over which he was traveling.

He left here yesterday afternoon for Morristown and after spending the night at the home of a friend set out on the return trip this morning.

IS HELD UP AT DUTCH FRONTIER

A. S. Cochran, Brother of Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, Not Permitted to Proceed.

INVESTIGATING CAUSE

Recently Made Official American Dispatch Bearer Between Berlin and London—Ambassador Gerard to Act at Once.

Alexander Smith Cochran, of Yonkers, brother of Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, of this city, who was recently made the official American despatch bearer between Berlin and London, is held up at the Dutch frontier, according to advices received by Ambassador Gerard in Berlin, despite the fact that he is carrying American diplomatic despatches and has full credentials. An investigation is being made to ascertain why the German authorities will not permit him to proceed.

It is understood here that Mr. Cochran left London several days ago with the diplomatic pouches. The embassy in London recently selected him as official courier to make regular trips from London to Berlin and from London to Paris. Previously American diplomats had been dependent on occasional travelers whom they might trust with their despatches. This was an unsatisfactory system, principally because of its irregularity.

Mr. Cochran was in London and volunteered to do the work, despite his millions. He was put on the pay roll at a small salary and was officially made a Government employe.

Mr. Cochran, who is widely known alike for his wealth, his interest in sports, and his philanthrophies, was recently reported to have gone to Belgium on his own initiative to investigate the needs of its distressed population. He sailed from New York on November 14. He is the principal owner of the Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Mills, of Yonkers, and the owner of the yacht Vanitie, which entered the trials to determine which boat should be the America's Cup defender against Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht.

PLANT SHUTS DOWN FOR FALL REPAIRING

Century Rubber Company is Now Engaged in Taking Account of Stock.

For the purpose of overhauling its machinery and taking account of stock, the Century Rubber Company, whose plant is located on North avenue, laid off forty-five of its ninety employes December 4, and will run on part schedule until the first of the year when the plant will be put into full operation again. This is an annual custom of the company and has not been inspired by conditions resultant from the present business depression felt in some other industries.

In an interview with a Daily Press reporter this morning, one of the officers of the concern said that there was no cause for alarm in the laying off of men and declared that all would be taken back again January 1. He claimed that the rubber tire industry as a rule slackens up at this period of the year and the concern takes advantage of this condition to put its factory in first class running order for the beginning of the busy season.

Several disinfections were made and 30 cases were diagnosed.

There are twenty-eight communicable diseases and during the month there were 28 deaths, 41 births, 13 marriages.

BIG REDUCTIONS IN SCHOOL BIDS

Re-advertising Fully Justified as Evidenced by Proposals Last Night.

MEANS LARGE SAVING

Comparison of Offers Made Last September with Those of Last Night—$3,169 Off General Contract for New Evergreen Avenue School.

Interest ran high at the meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education in the High School last night, when the bids for the new Evergreen Avenue School were opened. The room was crowded with bidders and the reading of bids was followed with close attention.

The policy of the Board of Education in refusing all the proposals submitted at the meeting last September and readvertising the contracts was fully justified by the reduction shown in the amounts of all the bids.

ONE LOST, TWO MISSING IN $5,000,000 FIRE

West Orange, Dec. 10—The body of one man has been found in the ruins of the $5,000,000 fire, which destroyed the plant of the Thomas A. Edison Company here late yesterday afternoon. William Troder lost his life in an attempt to save some valuable property, and his body was discovered by searchers in the ruins of the film inspection building this morning. One man and a girl are also reported missing.

The fire started from an explosion in the film building and destroyed nineteen of the twenty-five buildings in the establishment, burning miles of moving picture films, thousands of phonograph records and pieces of scientific apparatus and machinery which it will take years to replace.

The inventor, his wife and their sons, Charles and Theodore, joined in the work of fighting the flames and saving what could be saved of the rare materials and delicate instruments. The fire departments of seven New Jersey cities joined in the attempt to save the plant, as thousands of persons gathered to watch.

As one building after another caught fire, with its stored chemicals and explosives, blasts of flames of all colors of the rainbow shot high into the air, illuminating the neighborhood for a half mile in every direction.

The exact cause of the original explosion has not been determined. The 5,000 or 6,000 workmen in the establishments were warned of their danger by four telephone girls, who remained at their posts until they had called up every department of the great plant. The explosion occurred at 5:30 o'clock, and the operatives were about ready to go home, anyway.

The Edison plant consisted of twenty-five buildings, supposed to be fireproof, spread over an area equal to three city blocks. The buildings ranged in size from one to five stories and were of wood and concrete construction. In them were housed the manifold activities which have grown from the genius of the great inventor.

From one to another of these the flames darted, fanned by a strong wind, the inflammability of the chemicals and other materials overcoming the soaked condition of the buildings, due to the rain and snow of the last few days.

GREAT NAVAL VICTORY OVER GERMANY IN SOUTH PACIFIC CHEERS THE BRITISH NATION

WARSHIPS THAT SUNK GOOD HOPE AND HAVE MADE TROUBLE IN THE PACIFIC ARE DESTROYED, WITH GREAT GERMAN LOSSES.

FRENCH REPULSE ENEMY IN MANY ATTACKS

Left Wing of Russian Army in Poland Has Been Re-inforced and the Advances of the Germans Have Been Checked—Fourteen Carloads of German Prisoners Pass Through Minsk.

London, Dec. 10—All England is jubilant today over the great naval victory won by a squadron under command of Vice Admiral Sir Frederick Sturdee, chief of the war staff, in which a German squadron under Admiral Count Von Spee was nearly wiped out. The battle took place on Tuesday, off the Falkland Islands in the South Atlantic. The victory was reported by the Admiralty late yesterday afternoon.

The armored cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the protected cruiser Leipzig, three of the German warships which had been menacing British shipping, and part of the squadron which sank the British cruisers Good Hope and Monmouth in the Pacific on November 1, were destroyed.

The cruisers Dresden and Nurnberg, the two other vessels which composed the German squadron, fled, but are being pursued. Two colliers were captured.

The announcement of this engagement and victory, which was the most important naval engagement of the war with the exception of that off Helgoland last August, was made in a statement by the Admiralty as follows:

"At 7:30 a. m. on the 8th of December the Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Nurnberg, Leipzig and Dresden were sighted near the Falkland Islands by a British squadron under Vice Admiral Sir Frederick Sturdee.

"An action followed, in the course of which the Scharnhorst, flying the flag of Admiral Count Von Spee, the

VERDICT IS SET ASIDE BY COURT

Case of J. T. Mount Against J. D. Loizeaux and J. E. Dunn to Be Tried Again.

Codington & Blatz, representing J. D. Loizeaux and John E. Dunn, of this city, against whom James T. Mount, of Orange, obtained a judgment for $25,000 in May last, received word yesterday from the Supreme Court, before the appeal was argued in June, that the verdict has been set aside. The case will now be tried again. Judge James F. Minturn wrote the decision setting aside the verdict.

Mr. Mount purchased some stock in a Canadian lumber company, which had been organized by Mr. Loizeaux and Mr. Dunn, and he afterward claimed misrepresentation on the part of the two Plainfield men, brought suit and obtained a verdict for $25,000. It was the contention of the defendants that there was no misrepresentation, that Mr. Mount was fully cognizant of the property in which he purchased stock and that his son even investigated the property, recommending to his father that it was a good proposition.

FOUR LEGGED ROBBERS SELECT BEST POULTRY

Watchung Farmers Are Being Troubled by Nightly Visits of Dog Thieves.

The wholesale slaughter of poultry owned by farmers at the base of the Watchung Mountains has caused considerable agitation of late among residents of that section and Constable Edward Canning today started a probe of the mysterious circumstances surrounding the disappearance of choice chickens and geese of late. Last night, John O'Rourke, owner of the Gordon Farm, located back of Johnston's Drive, lost twelve of his finest Plymouth Rocks, and Rev. Dr. C. E. Eaton's farm was minus a number of geese a few nights ago. Gerard Underhill lost fifteen hens one night last week.

In every case the bones of the feathered beauties together with feathers have been found scattered around the yards and it is thought that the depredations are the work of stray dogs. The identification of the owner is now being sought and if he is located he will have to pay for the loss of the poultry. Otherwise the owners will put in claims to the Township Committee and it will be up to this body to reimburse the losers. Theodore Luersen and Herbert Cleaves today visited the homes of farmers who have suffered losses with a view to estimating the damage and to make settlements in behalf of the Committee.

ARTHUR YOUNG TO SPEAK.

H. K. CORBIN & COMPANY WERE THE LOWEST BIDDERS

Of the twenty-three bidders on Monday evening for the contract of constructing the borough's collecting sewerage system the three lowest were H. K. Corbin & Company, 170 Broadway, New York, $82,604.20; Bruno Pizzementi, Seneca Malls, N. Y., $84,115, and the DiNapoli Construction Company, Hackensack, $86,805. The highest bid is said to have been in the neighborhood of $140,000. The bid of H. K. Corbin & Company is about $10,000 under the estimate of the borough's engineers.

If the Corbin company qualifies on the required bond, $40,000, the total cost of the sewers to the borough will not, however, be covered by the contracting firm's bid of $82,604.20. To that amoupt in order to arrive at the actual total cost must be added engineering expenses, which will amount to $5,000 or over; the cost of the borough's sewerage inspectors, which will be covered by a $1,000, and finally the cost of the permit to tunnel under the six tracks of the Central railroad at Grove street, and the six tracks at Chestnut street at a permission fee of $3,600. These extras will make the cost of the collecting sewerage system total approximately $92,000. This amount will be provided for by the proceeds of a $55,000 bond issue, bids for which will be opened at an adjourned meeting of the Council to be held on December 21, and the balance of approximately $37,000 by direct assessments.

When asked last night when he thought the work on the system would be started, Mayor Latham said, "The contract calls for the work to be commenced between April 1 and April 15 of the coming year, but I am desirous of having work started this winter if possible, for two reasons, viz.: (1) To furnish work for some of the present local qualified unemployed. (2) To have the pipes laid and covered up along our three automobile arteries, New Market road, Grove street and North avenue, by the first of May when the heavy traffic commences."

"AMATUER NIGHT" ATTRACTS MANY TO LOCAL THEATRE

A Dunellen audience had another opportunity of greeting Professor Goodwin Lawrence in the local theatre on Tuesday evening, which was "Amateur Night." Introduced to the audience as "Prof. Lawrence" in the role of the "Sea Wolf," Goodwin as per his usual custom clogged out onto the stage and took his station in the glow of the footlights. After giving his audience the "once over," Goodwin, as has been his want in his appearances, commenced the type of clogging which he alone appears to be the master. The first prize that was awarded by the acclamation of the audience to the most popular actor was won by Percy Vroom, the local juvenile acrobat. The second prize was won by Engler and VanNorden, of Plainfield, who gave a very creditable performance in hand balancing. Charles Doyle and James Greenhalgh, as "Dask and Disbisco," the juvenile wrestlers, won third prize. Doyle won the match, by the way, forcing Greenhalgh's shoulders to the mats two time out of three. If there had been another prize offered it would have surely been taken by LeRoy Huff, who as Dunellen's Shakespeare, recited a few lines. Among the other "would-be" actors were Dewey and John Vroom, who under the stage name of McNeil and Adams, endeavored to reproduce a scene from the "Old Homestead." They didn't do much "reproducing," however, as their presence was only tolerated for a short space by the critics from this their own home town. Prior to the amateurish program the novel, "The Sea Wolf," by Jack London, was reproduced in seven reels of motion pictures. The acting in this reproduction was so realistic that a woman in the audience was seized with hysterics and was obliged to leave.

The entertainment will start at 8 o'clock. The program of the entertainment is a most attractive one. Messrs. Richards and Kirchner, the well-known base and tenor soloists of Plainfield, will take part, as will W. W. Giddes, the local tenor. An instrumental musical trio from New Brunswick will be present as will the well-known duet singers, Mrs. and Miss Allen, of Plainfield. Prof. Jesse Rogers, the local magician, will amuse the audience with his sleight-of-hand performance. In addition there will be recitations by Mr. and Mrs. John Manley, of New Brunswick, and by E. Burton Smith, an elocutionist, with a reputation hereabouts. After the entertainment the floor will be cleared for dancing, which will be free. The degree teams of the following councils will be present in full uniform: Franklin and Somerset Councils, of Plainfield; Goodwill and Good Intent Councils, of New Brunswick, and the Charles L. Walters Council, of Milltown. In addition the degree team of Camp of the Patriotic Order of Sons of America, will in all probability be present in their regimentals.

It has now been decided by the Union County Principals' Association to have several townships form teachers' associations, and it has been decided that this township will be in the association composed of Westfield, Fanwood, Mountainside and Clark township. Westfield will be the meeting place and S. Dana Townsend, principal of local schools, has been appointed to look after the organization in this division. The idea of forming the associations is to have the teachers of the grammar schools all over the county become acquainted and to meet at intervals and listen to lectures.

S. Dana Townsend, supervising principal of local schools, attended a meeting of the Union County Principals' Association held in Elizabeth, yesterday. The next one will likely be held in Plainfield.

Since the killing of the dog by Marshal Logan that is credited with destroying all of the chickens in the borough, other residents that did not present bills to the Council have come forward and if the owner of the canine is ever found the bills staring him in the face will reach the half century mark. A. R. Neilson lost several valuable ducks and Frank Gifford has missed several fowl, while the Lincoln Park Poultry Farm was also visited by the animal. L. J. Garda, Charles Sheelen and Charles Sternheim, the three that complained to the Council, and Walter Slocum, who went to the Township Committee, are the others known to have been visited by the dog and were the heaviest losers.

Rutgers Neilson has been entertaining Reginald Raleigh, of Westfield.

PRAISES WORK OF ITS CORRESPONDENT

Cyril Brown, Former Plainfielder, Achieves Success in Covering the War.

The readers of the New York Times have no doubt been interested in the reports published in that paper by the staff correspondent in Germany. It is of interest to Plainfield people to know that these reports were written by a Plainfield boy, a graduate of the High School in the class of 1903, Cyril Brown. An editorial in the Times has this to say about Mr. Brown's work:

"In these days of telegraphic communication, with and without wires, not for emergency use, but as the routine and almost exclusive method of news distribution, it is no small achievement to make mailed dispatches rival in both interest and importance their more rapidly traveling rivals for attention. This, however, is what has been accomplished by the representative of The Times, whose report of observations in Berlin was printed yesterday under date of November 1. The same correspondent did the same thing before when, by a combination of enterprise, courage, and good luck, he managed to reach, and for several days to remain at, the great headquarters of the German army in the West.

"It may be worth while to note the fact that this remarkably successful invader of the mystery in which the Germans have chosen to veil their military operations, and especially the movements of the Kaiser, is not a veteran follower of wars, experienced in eluding the rigors of censorship, but a young reporter who came to The Times staff fresh from college—Yale, by the way—hardly more than two years ago, and had since done, until his transfer to our London office a year ago, only regular local work as assigned in ordinary course."

AN ECCENTRIC RUSSIAN.

Zaharin Was a Clever Doctor, but He Had Funny Ways.

Dr. Zaharin was one of the most famous as he was also the most eccentric of physicians in Russia.

Even when he was summoned to attend Czar Alexander III. in his last illness Dr. Zaharin required the same preparation for his visit to the imperial palace as to any of his less exalted patients' homes—that is to say, all dogs had to be kept out of the way, all clocks stopped and every door thrown wide open.

Following a process of gradual undressing, he left his furs in the hall, his overcoat in the next room, his rubbers in the third and, continuing, arrived at the bedside in ordinary indoor costume. This was only one phase of Dr. Zaharin's golden theory that "you should take a rest before you are tired." Accordingly he sat down after walking every few yards and every eight steps in going upstairs.

From the patient's relatives and every one else in the house he required absolute silence until he spoke to them, when his questions had to be answered by "Yes" or "No" and nothing more. To the actual patient, however, he was courtesy and consideration in the highest degree.

HENS IN WINTER.

They Stop Laying Eggs Because They Acquire Too Much Fat.

That hens stop laying as winter progresses is a fact known to every farmer and chicken fancier; also, indirectly, to every housewife through the rise in the price of eggs. The reason is explained by the Revue Scientifique, which says that the egg producing organs degenerate through too much fat. This condition is the consequence of too great abundance of food during the winter, coupled with lack of exercise, due to the narrow limits of the ordinary chicken run.

The fat invades the liver and piles up in the heart; the blood becomes sluggish and the lungs do not take up enough oxygen to insure combustion of the fat.

"The obvious remedy," says the Scientific American, "is to give less food to hens which stop laying." Mr. Brochemin, in an article in L'Acclimatation, advises that starchy foods, such as corn, rice and barley, be limited, while an abundance of such green food as cabbage, boiled clover, sorrel, etc., be given. Also the hens must be made to take exercise by giving them a large run and by mixing their food with straw, etc., so that they will have to work for their food.

Lawyers on Strike.

In 1789 John Scott, earl of Clonmell, who was lord chief justice of Ireland, made some insulting remarks from the bench to Mr. Hacket, a member of the bar, who was conducting an argument before him. A general meeting of the bar was called, a severe condemnation of his lordship's conduct voted with only one dissentient and an unprecedented resolution passed that until his lordship publicly apologized no barrister would either take a brief, appear in the king's bench or sign any pleadings for the court. This strike experiment was actually made. The judges sat, but no counsel appeared, no cause was prepared, the attorneys all vanished, and their lordships had the court all to themselves. There was no alternative, and next day Lord Clonmell published a very ample apology by advertisement in the newspapers and made it appear as if written on the evening of the offense and therefore voluntary.—London Law Times.

The Curse of Mexico.

Xochiti, the beautiful Indian maiden of 900 years ago, is responsible for the Mexican national drink, pulque, pronounced poolkay. She was the first to drink the sweet liquid from the maguey plant, cousin of the aloe, that blooms once in 100 years. The drink in its fresh state is quite harmless, but the modern Mexicans have debased it by fermentation, and it has now become the curse of Mexico. It appears to have much the same effect as some other national drinks, for it softens the brain, ruins the digestion and paralyzes the nerves. So disastrous a hold has pulque upon the poorer classes that employers of labor avoid workers from the maguey fields if they can get labor elsewhere.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

A Shocking Story.

"What's the show?" asked the man with a large hat and long hair.

"'Hamlet,'" replied the man in the box office.

"What's it like?"

"Well, a man murders his stepfather out of revenge for the murder of his own father. At the finish there is a mixup with swords and poison and"—

"That'll do. I guess I'll stroll out and see a cabaret. I'm tired of these crook plays."—Washington Star.

The Better Way.

"So you have decided to forget all party grievances and forgive your enemies?"

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "It is better to let bygones be bygones than take chances on being a has been."—Washington Star.

MOISTURE AND DUST.

Why This Rain Combination In the Air Shows a Red Sun.

An old weather proverb runs, "A red sun has water in his eye," and the condition which gave rise to it is explained by Professor W. J. Humphreys of the United States weather bureau in a discussion of some useful weather proverbs.

The condition that most favors a red sun is a great quantity of dust—especially smoke particles—in a damp atmosphere. Smoke alone in sufficient quantity will produce this effect, but it is intensified by the presence of moisture.

The blue and other short wave length colors of sunlight are both scattered and absorbed to a greater extent by a given amount of dust or other substance, such as water vapor, than is the red, and this effect becomes more pronounced as the particles coalesce.

Hence when the atmosphere is heavily charged with dust particles that have become moisture laden we see the sun as a fiery ball.

It has been known that this dust has much to do with rainfall, since it was proved by the physicist Aitken years ago that cloud particles, and therefore rain, will not under ordinary conditions form in a perfectly dust free atmosphere, but will readily form about dust motes of any kind in an atmosphere that is sufficiently damp. A red sun, therefore, commonly indicates the presence of both of the essential rain elements—that is, dust and moisture.—Rocky Mountain News.

COURT TRIALS IN FRANCE.

Three Judges and Two Sets of Jurors In Each Criminal Case.

Most interesting indeed is it to watch the trial of a criminal in Paris, especially when defended by a woman. French procedure is quite different from ours.

There are two sets of jurors, who must sit throughout the trial, so that any mishap to any juror in the group selected to determine the facts is prevented from retarding the trial by the immediate substitution of one of the jurors from the second group. Three judges always sit in all the assizes at every trial.

The prosecuting attorney, beginning with the words "I accuse," reads the indictment to the prisoner and does not speak again. The presiding justice does all the questioning, and there seem to be no rules of evidence to restrict his questions. The defending attorney at the close of the trial addresses the jury. He has the last word before the judge's charge.

A word here about the criminals of France. I have never seen a worse looking lot than those "Apaches." I was told that they are the descendants of criminals, and they looked it. Comparing them with our criminals, I was led to state that the United States had no criminal class, and it will be our own fault if we permit a criminal class to exist.—Mary M. Lilly in Case and Comment.

The Blushing Tree.

The blushing tree gets its name from the change of hue it assumes when the rain falls on it. As the drops drench the leaves, gradually but unmistakably the green tint gives way to pink. In a few minutes the green fades from sight. Only in a few half hidden spots beneath broad branches and on its trunk is there a tinge of green to be seen. After an hour or more, when the shower is over, the tree assumes its familiar green once more. Certain tiny insects, and not the tree itself, change color. These peculiar parasites are possessed of the power of chameleons. In the warm sunshine they are greener than the tree on which they live, but when the chilly rain falls upon them they contract their tiny backs and become a pretty pink in tint. Millions of these change the entire appearance of the tree and make it seem to be blushing.

Anti-suffragistic.

Southerners are notoriously fond of hot rolls, but they have a confection called Sally Lunn which is even more highly prized among them. It is not the sort of thing one has every day. It is for special occasions.

"Uncle William," said the housewife to the much spoiled old family servant who presided over most of the domestic arrangements—"Unc' William, don't you think it is about time for us to have some Sally Lunn?"

"Naw'm, Miss Ma'y, naw'm. Don't let's have none er dat. I ain't never had no fancy for dat female bread!"—New York Post.

Truth or Fiction?

"Ah, what a difference there is," remarked the cynic wearily, "between courtship and marriage! Courtship is made up of soft nothings—marriage of hard facts."

REGISTERING BY MAIL.

Governor-elect Charles S. Whitman, of New York, it is reported has decided to recommend to the Legislature of that state that the election laws be amended, so that commercial travelers will be able in the future to register for the general elections by mailing an affidavit to their election boards in their home municipalities.

The proposal rests upon a sensible foundation, and might well be made an issue in New Jersey. The registration laws are designed to prevent fraud at election, not to make voting more difficult. If under the operation of those laws a large number of citizens are disfranchised every year or the exercise of the elective franchise is made unnecessarily burdensome and expensive to them, the law may be easily modified to correct this fault, without opening the door to fraud.

The Democratic proposition to allow the voter to select his place of stay is open to serious objections which do not apply to registration by mail. If the elector, whose business keeps him away from home on registration day, files the statement required and deposits it with the Registry Board before the date of personal registration, this process being surrounded with all the safeguards that the ingenuity of the Legislature may devise, there is all the protection against fraudulent voting that comes from personal registration.

The prime purpose of registration is to have placed on the roll the names of all prospective voters so that there may be the fullest inquiry before election day. If the elector answers all the required questions and gives his place of residence, filing it all under oath before the registry polls open, going in person to a judicial officer to make his return if this course is decided to be necessary, there is no obstacle placed in the way of this inquiry. There is no opportunity for fraud that may not as easily be committed under the system of registration in person. And the convenience of a large number of voters is served.

Although the creed of the Quakers forbids the taking of life a courageous part is being played in the war by English Quakers, and, as might be expected, it is in connection with the hospital service. There is a Young Friends' ambulance corps, the leader of which is Philip J. Baker, son of a member of Parliament, and a recent scholar and famous athlete at Cambridge. With him are associated in the actual work some eighty other Oxford and Cambridge men, who, while not prepared to enlist or carry arms, are eager to risk their own lives in the work of saving others. How desperate is the need is shown in a private letter recently received in Plainfield telling how the Quaker corps when it got to Dunkirk found 3,000 wounded already there who had had nothing done for them since they fell save the barest stopping of flowing wounds. Before they reached Dunkirk the Quakers had come in the moment of need to the drowning crew of the cruiser Hermes, torpedoed in the channel.

Newspapers, as everyone knows depend largely upon advertising for their existence, and yet they give columns and columns of free publicity to every worthy object which they are asked to aid. At this time of the year, and especially this year there are constant demands for space, and there seems to be an almost unceasing stream of appeals all for worthy causes. The Belgian Relief Fund, Community Christmas, Red Cross Seals, Salvation Army, unemployed and other causes all ask for and receive publicity in Plainfield. And yet how many people who ask this help from the papers stop to think that they can be of the greatest aid to the papers by patronizing those merchants who contribute so largely to the support of the publications. Help home trade.

The Saturday editorial will have something to say about the Community Christmas. It will tell Plainfielders just what is needed to make the lives of hundreds of children bright on a day which otherwise would be the saddest of the year for them. But don't wait until you read the editorial to send your contribution to Charles A. Rice, the treasurer. Nothing gives him greater pleasure than acknowledging contributions to the cause. List of contributors have been printed twice. See to it that your name appears with the next lot.

Asbury Park has adopted commission government, by a vote of 810 for, to 468 against. Thus the list of progressive municipalities in the State grows and grows. As the modern method of government is adopted by more and more cities, Plainfielders will realize that there are no two ways about it, and our people will make the change.

If the treatment which the metropolitan papers are giving the Secretary of the Navy really reflects honestly upon the way in which Mr Daniels is conducting his department, we are quite sure that any job which has to do with water is no place for a newspaper man.

Don't forget that the Red Cross Seals are on sale at many places about town. If you can't find them, phone the Charity Organization Society, and they will tell you where to make your purchases.

Chief Doane's warning about fire prevention at the Christmas season, which was printed in the Press on Tuesday was both timely and well expressed.

Those who were crying for a taste of real winter, wanted the kind with sunshine, not a lot of slush and unpleasantness.

M'ADOO SAYS YEAR HAS BEEN SUCCESS FOR U. S.

Washington, Dec. 10.—Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, in his annual report on the state of Government finances, made public yesterday reviews the financial aspects of the European war crisis. He told of the steps taken by the department immediately following the close of the New York Stock Exchange, when he and other federal officials conferred with leading bankers in New York.

In speaking of the federal reserve board, the Secretary says that it has taken hold of the many problems confronting it with "vigor, loyalty and intelligence and I believe it will render services of the greatest value to the country."

Interest on crop moving deposits for the fiscal year of 1914 totalled $1,409,426, compared with $122,219 in 1913. Revenue collections for the year ended June 30, the Secretary says, show a success of the tariff act as a revenue measure, actually producing $22,329,015 in excess of the estimate of $270,000,000. The income tax law brought in $28,253,533 on individual incomes and $43,127,740 on corporations.

SHOULD PURCHASE FOWLS UNDRAWN

Government Tests Show That They Keep Better Than Dressed Chickens.

DANGER FROM BACTERIA

With the Feet Removed the Housewife Loses Easiest Method to Determine Whether a Bird Is Old Or Young.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 10.—The poultry handling specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture are urging housewives to buy their chickens undrawn and with their heads and feet still on. An undrawn chicken, they say, shows its lack of freshness or its unfitness for food much more clearly than does a fully dressed bird, in the dressing of which certain significant signs can easily be removed by the crafty poultry dresser.

Moreover, by actual government tests as reported in Circular No. 7 of the Bureau of Chemistry, full drawn poultry with head and feet removed, decomposes the most rapidly while undrawn poultry keeps much better than does poultry either wholly or partly drawn. This is because once a chicken is opened for cleaning, the delicate tissues in it are open to the bacteria of the air, which multiply very rapidly and soon destroy the flavor of the chicken, even if they do not bring about actual putrefaction. The undressed chicken is far less likely to be contaminated in this way, as the outer skin is a protection against the inroads of such bacteria.

When the feet of chickens are removed, the housewife loses one of the easiest methods of determining whether the bird is young or old. Young chickens have smooth, clean feet and shanks. Old birds have caly, rough legs and buttons or purs. The head of a dead chicken gives very clear indications of staleness. The head of a chicken that is not fresh will show a greenish color below the bill, sunken eyes, and a darkening or discoloration on the neck, all of which indicate decay.

The housewife should require that the entrails of a chicken be not drawn, or at least should have the butcher draw them in her presence. Moreover, the entrails of the chicken often show diseased conditions that are not evident after the bird is fully drawn. The appearance of the entrails will help her to tell whether the chicken is fresh and whether it has been properly handled. Entrails in a good chicken should be almost empty, round, firm in texture, and showing little red veins here and there. If the intestines are full, the bird was not starved for 24 hours before killing, as it should have been, or else sand was fed to it to increase its weight and work a fraud on the buyer. If the animal heat was not removed quickly and completely, the roundness of the intestines will be lost and the folds of the intestines will stick together. There also will be an undue amount of sliminess and an unpleasant odor which is not found in a properly chilled bird. There is, of course, always some odor when the body cavity of a bird is opened, even if it is just killed, but this odor is quite different from the pronounced smell which comes with decay. An unscrupulous dealer cannot foist bad birds on the housewife who dresses the chickens herself and knows how to interpret what she sees and smells.

The skin of a chicken will tell the housewife whether the bird has been properly "dry" picked and "air chilled" or whether it has been "scalded" in order to remove the feathers. The skin of a dry-picked chicken is flexible, translucent, with the feather papillae plainly visible and contains short hairs which have to be removed by singeing. If a chicken has been scalded, the skin is hard, thick, close to the muscles underneath and almost free from the hairs. The skin of a dry-picked chicken which has been chilled in water has lost the powdery look which is characteristic and is shiny thicker than when air chilled, and it is scarcely possible to see the pink muscles underneath as one should be able to do. A water chilled chicken is also a fraud to the buyer because it absorbs water, which is charged for at chicken prices.

Housewives should insist on a dry picked chicken, because any wetting of a chicken, and especially scalding, lessens or destroys the delicate flavor of the meat.

POLICE LOOKING FOR A FORMER CONVICT

Alleged to Have Entered Three Places in the Business Section Last Night.

Two houses and one store, all in the business section of town, were entered by burglars last night, and investigation conducted by Chief Kiely and Sergeant Higgins, this morning, indicates that the crimes were perpetrated by the same individual. Shortly after 7 o'clock last night, Manager John Hardy, of the Singer Sewing Machine Company's store on East Front street, opened the store and was startled by the shuffling of feet. He ran to the street and there met John A. Gaffney and the two went into the store and started an investigation. Police headquarters was notified and a search of the store revealed a large cold chisel, a candle and a number of rags in front of the safe. The thief had evidently been trying to pry open the safe and had been scared away by the return of Mr. Hardy. A cellar window had been pried opened and the thief made his way up the stairs into the main store.

Joseph Penz, of 145 West Second street, reported to the police, this morning, that a gas meter in his home had been pried open some time during the night, but nothing was taken, as far as could be learned.

Mrs. Edward Bowman, of 313 West Second street, made the third report to the police. She told of having been aroused by a noise in the house and saw a tall, thin man leave the yard. He stole a mackintosh from the house.

It was soon learned that one Harry P. Griffen, alias E. R. Williams, who has been boarding at the Penz house had designs of robbery on a number of business places, yesterday, and the police are looking for him. This information was gained through Herbert Overland, a seventeen-year-old youth, who also boards in the Penz place. Overland, who five days ago was discharged from the Union county jail after being given a suspended sentence by Judge James C. Connolly following his conviction, together with two other Plainfield boys, on a charge of having robbed the store of J. Laurie and Company, on West Front street, said that a man by the name of Williams had come back from Elizabeth with him for the purpose of locating in Plainfield in the hopes of being able to "pull" several "big jobs." Williams was arrested in Elizabeth early in the fall and sentenced to thirty days in the county jail for robbing a store. His term expired on the day Overland was released.

Overland says that the man drank heavily yesterday, and was preparing to commit robberies about the city last night. According to Overland, the man urged him to join in the depredations, but the boy says he refused. The police, however, are of the opinion that Overland accompanied the man on at least one of the expeditions and he is now being held a prisoner in the police station awaiting further developments.

A coat belonging to Williams was found by the police. This was covered with ashes and it is thought that the marks were gathered when he crawled in the Singer store's cellar window. Sergeant Higgins has been detailed to the case and is making a thorough search of the city for Williams, who is described as being about thirty-five years of age.

Sergeant Maurice Higgins and Patrolman Charles Wicht, this afternoon, arrested Williams on the strength of a description furnished by Overland. He was taken into custody in the West End section of the city. He had made no attempt to get away after the occurrences of last night. Williams is being held a prisoner at police headquarters and will be examined by Chief Kiely to determine his part in the depredations committed. Overland charges the man with framing up the robberies.

WOULD PREVENT TRADE WITH WARRING NATIONS

Washington, Dec. 10—Senator Works introduced a bill in the Senate today providing that it shall be unlawful for any person, corporation or association doing business in the United States to contract or sell or furnish to any nation engaged in war any food, clothing, supplies, arms, ammunition, etc., or war supplies of any kind whether the same be contraband of war or not. The bill fixes a penalty of not less than $5,000 fine or more than $100,000 for each offense.

The Young People's Society held a "Conundrum" Supper last night, which was a novel affair.

EDITOR OF "POWER" TO ADDRESS INDUSTRIAL HEADS

Charles H. Bromley, an associate editor of "Power," of New York city, will address a special gathering of the owners, managers and superintendents of local industrial plants, as well as the accredited representatives of local institutions in Coward Hall, tomorrow night.

The meeting will be held under the auspices of the local branch of the National Association of Stationary Engineers, and has been arranged for those who are interested in "Better Efficiencies and Higher Economics in Boiler Rooms and Power Plants." Stereopticon views will be used to illustrate modern practice in the engine room.

AUTO ENGINE COMING SOON.

Fire Chief T. O. Doane is in receipt of a telegram from the Nott Manufacturing Company, of Minneapolis, stating that Plainfield's new auto engine is practically completed, only the painting remaining to be done. It will be placed on the cars for shipment on or about December 23, and should arrive here a few days later. The official tests before acceptance will be conducted by the Councilmanic fire committee and the Chief.

Gneisenau and the Leipzig were sunk.

"The Dresden and the Nurnberg made off during the action and are being pursued.

"Two colliers also were captured.

"The Vice Admiral reports that the British casualities are very few in number.

"Some survivors have been rescued from the Gneisenau and the Leipzig."

The statement make reference to some survivors rescued from the Gneisenau and the Leipzig, but no mention is made of any of the crew of the Scharnhorst, which was the flagship of the German Admiral, being saved, and it is thus presumed that Count Von Spee, his officers and men went down fighting.

The British casualties were light, but beyond the fact that the British squadron was commanded by Vice Admiral Sturdee no information is given out regarding the ships engaged.

The greatest enthusiasm prevailed in London over the victory, and the general impression is that it will be completed, as the Admiralty would not be likely to send ships that could not overcome the Dresden and Nurnberg, which are 24-knot and 23-knot vessels respectively, and probably even slower after their long service. They are at a disadvantage also because of their small coal capacity.

The British squadron which engaged the Germans left England without the knowledge of the general public, and until his name was mentioned it was believed that Vice Admiral Sturdee was serving in home waters.

The fact that he was taken from the post of chief of the war staff is indicative of the determination of the British Government to clear the Pacific and South Atlantic of all the German warships, and it is therefore believed the British commander is at the head of a formidable squadron.

In addition to the Dresden and Nurnberg only one German warship, the Karlsruhe, is now unaccounted for in those waters.

A despatch from Amsterdam says that the Berliner Tageblatt publishes a statement that the battle in South Poland is developing favorably for the Germans and Austrians. The Russians have been repulsed at all lines.

London, Dec. 10 (Central News Cable).—It is officially announced that the Indian and British troops have had a succession of victories in Turkey in Asia that have given the British control of the country from the junction of the Rivers Tigris and Euphrates to the sea, and also the richest part of the Delta.

Paris, Dec. 10.—The French War Office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"The day of December 9 passed quietly in Belgium as well as in the region of Arras, where the enemy made no attempt at a resumption of offensive operations. Further to the south in the region of Le Quesnoy and around Andechy we made advances varying from 200 to 600 yards. Our gains were maintained and consolidated in the region of the Aisne and in Champagne there has been no change. The German artillery, over which we gained the advantage during the last few days, yesterday evidenced increased activity but was again mastered by our heavy artillery."

The statement further said: "Our artillery in the neighborhood of Rheims forced the Germans to evacuate several trenches. This evacuation took place under the fire of our infantry. In the region of Perthas the enemy, by two counter attacks, tried to recapture the trenches that he had lost on December 8. He was again repulsed. The ground won by us has been well organized. Throughout the whole of the Argonne our advance continues. We have captured fresh trenches and repulsed the enemy fully in six counter attacks. Furthermore we have full control of the ground won from the enemy."

President Poincare will transfer his residence to Paris today and a cabinet meeting will be held Friday. The Journal official will also begin its publication here Friday morning. An extraordinary session of the French Parliament has been called for December 22 and the election of a new Government is anticipated soon.

London, Dec. 10.—The left wing of the Russian army in Poland has been reinforced and the advances of the Germans on Piotrkow have been checked, says a despatch from Petrograd to a news agency here. On the north of the battle line before Warsaw the Germans continue their assaults in considerable strength, but are repeatedly repulsed. The movement of the Russian army in western Galicia continues to the south of Cracow, with a view of investing that city. The bombardment from the heights to the east and southeast continues. Fourteen train loads of German prisoners passed through Minsk yesterday.

Amsterdam, Dec. 10 (Central News Cable).—The Lokal Anzeiger asserts that the Turkish ambassador to Rome in a recent audience with King Victor assured the latter that the holy war which has been proclaimed by the Sublime Porte will not apply to Italy or her possessions.

A despatch from Berlin says that Emperor William of Germany is suffering from pneumonia. His condition is complicated by nervous depression, caused by over-exertion.

An epidemic of cholera is spreading rapidly in Germany and Austria, particularly in Galicia, according to a statement in the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant.

The losses in the Prussian army corps from the beginning of the war to November 30 total 603,100, in officers and men killed, wounded and missing, according to a despatch from Berlin to the Handelsblad. The loss of officers has been 17,100, of whom 5,000 have been killed, 11,000 wounded and 1,000 missing. Ninety thousand men have been killed, 380,000 wounded and 116,000 are missing.

Nish, Dec. 10 (Central News Cable).—The following official statement has been issued by the War Office:

"The fierce offensive of the Servian army is meeting with complete success along the entire front. The enemy is retreating everywhere, leaving a large number of prisoners, war material and guns.

Berlin, Dec. 10 (Wireless).—In an official statement issued here, it was said that the French attacks in the district around Sousain and on the villages of Varennes and Vouquers in the eastern part of the forest of Argonne were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy.

DEFEAT PROPOSITION TO BUILD NEW SCHOOL

At a special election held in the New Market Schoolhouse, last night, the voters of Piscataway township defeated the proposition to appropriate $12,500 for an addition to the school building at South Plainfield. Owing to the bad weather only fifty-two votes were cast, of which twenty-one were in favor of the appropriation and the others against it. John M. Dayton was chairman of the meeting and Everitt Marshall, the school clerk, acted as secretary.

A plot of ground was purchased at South Plainfield two years ago in anticipation of an addition to the present building and it is believed that last night's action will result in the South Plainfield citizens returning with another request in a short time, asking that the money for an entire new structure be voted them.

Coming Back.

"Repartee," said Colonel J. W. Zevely of Muskogee, "is useful in its proper place, but should not be indulged in in a courtroom. Down in our country a judge sentenced a malefactor to a year in prison.

"'Huh!' said the prisoner flippantly. 'I can do that standing on my head.'

"'Is it possible?' inquired the judge. 'I am astonished. But, in order that you may not be compelled to maintain that undignified attitude all the time you are in prison, I hereby sentence you to an additional year, which you may do standing on your feet.'"—Exchange.

One Would Do It.

"You know what I'm going to do?" whispered the girl as she looked around at the crowd that was beginning to be so sleepy and that still stayed on. "I'm going to give a party and start the Chinese fashion of telling them when to go. I'm going to get up as they do and say: 'I'm sorry, but it's time for you to go home. Here's your hat.' I think it will be a mighty fine thing. So few people know when to go home. Don't you think so?"

"Mighty fine," he answered, "but you don't intend ever to give but one party then, I see."—Exchange.

The Whip in the Boot.

In some parts of Siberia a bridegroom on arriving home commands his wife to take off his boots. In one is a whip and in the other a purse. The contents of the boot she first selects for removal presage whether he is to be generous or the reverse to her. A very kind husband will put a purse in each boot and omit the whip to make her believe that her choice is auspicious.

If There Were No Flowers.

Can we conceive what humanity would be if it did not know the flowers? If these did not exist, if they had all been hidden from our gaze, as are probably a thousand no less fairy sights that are all around us, but invisible to our eyes, would our character, our faculties, our sense of the beautiful, our aptitude for happiness, be quite the same? We should, it is true, in nature have other splendid manifestations of luxury, exuberance and grace; other dazzling efforts of the superlative forces; the sun, the stars, the varied lights of the moon, the azure and the ocean, the dawns and twilights, the mountain, the plain, the forest and the rivers, the light and the trees and, lastly, nearer to us, birds, precious stones and woman. These are the ornaments of our planet. Yet but for the last three, which belong to the same smile of nature, how grave, austere, almost sad, would be the education of our eye without the softness which the flowers give!—Maurice Maeterlinck.

A King as a Prisoner.

In these days no prisoner of war is likely to be so well treated as King John I. of France, who, after his capture at Poitiers, was lodged first at the palace of the Savoy and subsequently at Somerton castle, in Lincolnshire. Before being removed to Somerton John had to dismiss forty-two members of his suit, but even then there remained about forty persons in attendance on him. Among these were two chaplains, a secretary, a clerk of the chapel, a physician, a maitre d'hotel, three pages, four valets, three wardrobe men, three furriers, six grooms, two cooks, a fruiterer, a spiceman, a jester, a barber and a person entitled "le roy des menestereulx," who appears to have been a maker of musical instruments and clocks as well as a minstrel. He was also allowed to keep gamecocks, falcons and greyhounds and to go out hawking and coursing.—London Chronicle.

Charms of the Roman Farmer.

Curius Cresinus, a freedman who had much larger crops upon a small field than his neighbors had upon their extensive farms, was greatly envied and accused of withdrawing the produce of the people's fields by witchcraft.

Being brought to trial and fearing that he would be condemned, immediately before the question was put he produced in the forum all his laboring utensils and brought along with him a stout daughter, well fed and clothed, his iron tools of the most excellent construction, large spades, heavy shares and oxen in the best order.

Then he said: "These, Romans, are my charms. Nor can I show you or bring into the forum my night meditations, my watchings and my toils." He was unanimously acquitted.—Pliny.

Quintilian's Bereavements.

No event in literary history is more impressive than the fate of Quintilian. It was in the midst of his elaborate work, composed to form the literary character of a son, his great hope, that he experienced the most terrible affliction in the domestic life of genius—the death of his wife and one child after the other. It was a moral earthquake, with a single survivor amidst the ruins. An awful burst of parental and literary affliction breaks forth in Quintilian's lamentation: "My wealth and my writings, the fruits of a long and painful life, must now be reserved only for strangers. All I possess is for aliens and no longer mine." The husband, the father and the man of genius utter one cry of agony.

The Victim.

A line of ragged little boys was ranged down the center of the school for exercise.

"Toe the line!" commanded the master.

A shuffling indicated obedience. The master inspected the line approvingly until his eye rested on an urchin so far behind the others as to be almost out of sight.

"Price," he shouted, "why don't you toe the line?"

"Pleath, thir, I am toeing it," lisped the boy, "but I got dad'th boot'th on!"—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Shakespeare's House.

Gastrell was the name of the clergyman who, having purchased Shakespeare's house in 1756, soon afterward pulled it down because he thought the town assessment on it was too high. He had previously cut down the celebrated mulberry tree planted by Shakespeare's hand because it subjected him to answer the frequent importunities of travelers. Gastrell's name is immortalized by these acts of literary vandalism.

Congress and the President.

The president has the power to prorogue congress. The constitution (article 2, section 1), says "that in case of difference between them (the two houses of congress) with respect to the time of adjournment he may adjourn them to such time as he thinks proper."

That Drew Her.

"Mrs. Lotarot, won't you draw some pictures for me?"

"Why, my dear child, I can't draw."

"Yes, you can; father says you're a designing woman."—Buffalo Express.

VISIONS PAST AND PRESENT

MAN'S VISION AS BROAD AS NEWSPAPER HE READS

Every man's vision is as broad as that of the newspaper he reads. The country newspaper, if he lives in the country, is indispensable to give him a clear view of his immediate complement. No man can be well-posted nowadays unless he keeps an eye on what the whole world is doing. Therefore he needs bi-focal newspaper glasses—the home newspaper for the little world around him, the city newspaper for the big world beyond its sphere of service.

"The Philadelphia Record" is a world-newspaper. Its service extends to every quarter of the globe. Its representatives are in every foreign capital; its live wires connect with every city, town and hamlet in forty-eight States. Its business is to gather in the world's history day by day; to sift it, discarding the chaff; to boil down and condense the residue, and to present all that is worth while, in space proportioned to its importance, in such shape that intelligent people will derive profit or enjoyment, or both, from reading it.

"The Philadelphia Record" is a newspaper for men, women and young folks; for farmers and merchants and housekeepers and mechanics; for sages and students; for all sorts of people in every walk of life, provided only that they take a human interest in the news of the day, and prefer cleanliness, truth and accuracy to the other kind of journalism.

You will get all the news that's worth while, and you will exclude the objectionable and the undesirable, if you make "The Philadelphia Record" your family newspaper. It has a larger family circulation than any other daily newspaper published in Pennsylvania.

Trade In Plainfield and Grow With Us

The growth of a city depends largely on the amount of money spent within its borders. Are YOU buying in Plainfield? Are YOU selecting our own men to do your work instead of outsiders? Are YOU helping Plainfield to grow? Ask yourself this question. Are you?

Plainfield is one of the prettiest cities in New Jersey. She can point with pride to her magnificent High School, excellent graded schools, elegant homes and beautiful streets. What have you done? If you take Plainfield money and spend it in other cities, are you helping Plainfield to grow? Spend your money home where you and your children are enjoying the splendor of our city. Do YOUR part for a better and bigger Plainfield.

Interesting to Men--But to Women

The question of cultivation of good taste in a home means the purchase of whatever improves the appearance, comfort and welfare of every one connected with it. The woman is the purchasing agent of the American home; keenly interested in high grade merchandise and table goodies; the kind presented by Plainfield merchants, backed by prompt courteous attention, a stock of large variety to select from, and prices that are no higher than the stores of other cities.

Trading in Plainfield is the easiest, safest, and most profitable, and when you purchase an article that is not entirely satisfactory you experience no difficulty in having it exchanged or your money refunded. On the other hand, can an article purchased in stores in these other cities afford you the same protection as our Plainfield merchants? Sometimes an article can be exchanged, but then it is necessary to have it travel 20 or 25 miles back to the store where you purchased it, and the second selection forwarded to you, and if you wern't fortunate enough to make a second selection on the day you did your shopping you are either obliged to make it from a catalog or take another trip yourself to straighten the matter out. Do your shopping in your home town and avoid any unnecessary risks or delays. Help your city to grow.

"The rating of the Dartmouth eleven by football critics will be one of the interesting features of the coming post-season football chatter," says William J. Slocum in the New York Sun. "As a scoring machine the Big Green eleven holds first place among eastern teams, considering, of course, the caliber of the teams against which it played. Some may argue that Princeton defeated the Hanoverians and therefore must rank above Dartmouth. On the other hand Princeton failed to get more than two touchdowns in any of its eight games, while Dartmouth averaged 40 points per game, and got at least two touchdowns in every game, including that with Princeton. The scoring power of the New Hampshire eleven, as displayed in its last three games against Amherst, Tufts and Pennsylvania, stamps Coach Cavanaugh's team as one of the best of the year."

Despite the walloping they received at the hands of the Harvard football team, Yale men haven't given up the idea that the Canadian rugby pass is a big winner. Yale adopted the lateral pass and numerous variations of the Canuck peg at the beginning of the 1914 season. As soon as the New Haven gridders mastered the art, Yale startled its opponents by Hinkey sleight-of-hand tactics. The ball shifted three and four times on most every run. But Harvard easily put the skids under Yale's passing game. Something was wrong. Now Coach Hinkey is trying to discover the loophole. Last Saturday Hinkey and Captain Talbott witnessed the Argonaut-Hamilton Tiger rugby game at Toronto for the championship of the "Big Four." The Argonauts won, 14-4, and exhibited many new tricks Hinkey believes will prove effective in American football. Hinkey plans to attend other championship matches at Toronto this season.

"Rabbit" Maranville, the speedy and astute shortstop of the Boston Braves, is an ingenious little cuss, according to Bert Whaling. Maranville, it seems, is the first athlete to discover that the human stomach is a valuable aid in catching a baseball. Other players have struggled along life's rocky road catching the ball in their hands and utterly ignoring their stomachs. But not so with Maranville. When called on to tackle a fly ball the "Rabbit" places his hands firmly against his manly little front at a point just below his diaphragm, and with great precision adjusts himself under the descending sphere. Fans and fellow-players uncouthly laughed at Maranville when he broke into the big league because of his peculiar manner of catching a fly. But he refused to be swerved from his purpose, and proved that he was right by making a pronounced success of the "stomach catch."

Yale has a veteran baseball nine all ready for the opening of the 1915 season. The players available for next year were collected by Captain Lou Middlebrook, and many of them took part in a series of summer games on Long Island for three weeks this fall. Plans for opening next season make it likely that the team will line up as follows: Pitchers, Way, Underwood, Walsh and Watrous; catchers, Hunter and Shaffer; first base, Bush and Pumpelly; second base, Milburn; shortstop, Le Gore; third base, Reilly; outfield, Hanes, Easton, Vaughn and Captain Middlebrook.

Cornell is happy. The Ithacans retain all but four or five members of their 1914 football squad. The mighty Charlie Barrett, who is the general choice for All-American quarterback, will be back in college again next season, and is in line for the captaincy. Halfback Collins, who flashed in several big games, will also be in the squad. He did not play football in 1913 on account of parental objections.

Out of all the players Jack Dunn sold from the Baltimore team, only two made good. Dunn, however, peddled something like $60,000 worth of ball players before he was through. Birdie Cree and Pitcher Shore, sold to the Yankees and Red Sox, were the only players who repaid the clubs which purchased them.

LEAL SCHOOL FIVE GETS A TROUNCING

Locals No Match for Strong Montclair Academy Team on Latter's Court.

Coach Garrison's Montclair Academy basketball team got off to a good start yesterday, when it won the opening game of the season played against the Leal "Prep" School five, of this city. The score of the contest, which took place in the Montclair gymnasium, was 40 to 9. The Montclair boys outclassed their opponents from start to finish and the outcome was never in doubt.

Homer Hazel played the best game for the Montclair team, locating the net for nine baskets. His accurate goal shooting was easily the feature of the game. Scudder, who played at centre, outjumped his rival every time and also scored ten points. He shot four field goals and was credited with two points on free throws. Schneider, the Leal centre, shot one field goal and scored twice on free throws.

TWO POINT BEATING IN FIRST CONTEST

P. H. S. Dropped Game to Somerville in the New Gymnasium.

The boys' basketball season was opened yesterday afternoon in the Plainfield High School gymnasium when the team lined up against the team from Somerville High School. The game proved to be harder and faster than the local team expected, with the result that Plainfield came out on the short end of a score of 25 to 23. This is the first time that a Plainfield team has been beaten by Somerville in the past four years. The visitors all proved to be as big and heavier than the Plainfield boys and their shooting was accurate and swift, while the Plainfield team's shooting was far from what it should be. Plainfield's team work was superior to that of Somerville and managed to keep the ball well down in their part of the court, but when it came to the point of caging the ball the locals fell down.

The Plainfield boys opened the scoring when Captain "Dan" McNamee caged a goal from the foul line and "Benny" Rosenson followed this with a goal from the field. Somerville was not to be left in the dust for Captain Van Pelt soon caged a foul goal. Plainfield held the lead throughout the first half and when the whistle blew led by the small margin of three points, the score being 15 to 12.

Neither team scored for the first few minutes of the second period, then VanPelt dropped in a field goal. About the middle of the second period the game became very fast and Somerville came out at the big end of this spurt, having passed the Plainfield team and now led by the score of 23 to 19. Another goal by VanPelt ended the scoring for Somerville, but Rosenson soon caged one for Plainfield. Coach Patch substituted Ryder for Wheelan and Coudray for McNamee. Coudray immediately caged a basket, but before another was scored the whistle blew, ending the game.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Plainfield High School basketball stock will have to undergo a thorough renovation between now and the time for the opening of the Interscholastic League if the Ninth street boys want to be in the running for the title. Taking the game yesterday as a criterion, we fall far short of being impressed with the playing ability of the local basketball unit. The entire squad passed shots and handled the ball in the crudest fashion imaginable and failed to exhibit any of the old time red and blue snap ability. A regrettable lack of coaching was plainly in evidence. When the players got the ball they held it like dummies, and time and again when the forwards were loose under the baskets the guards took long slams at the goal. Every player on the team was guilty of the poorest kind of basketball and each lent his slipups to the fracas making it one of the most listless ever played against Somerville. The fact that Somerville, a team that has been defeated in four successive years, triumphed over the Plainfielders, is enough to arouse a rumpus, but the added fact that the locals put up such an indifferent article of basketball stirs up added apprehension among the faithful supporters of the red and blue. A thorough overhauling by competent handlers is needed and the sooner it comes the better. This comment on yesterday's game is not meant in a spirit of discouragement, but rather with the object of arousing the players and coaches to the seriousness of the situation with the hope that some radical changes will be made. The present material is good, in fact it looms up as the best the school has had in several years, but the five men perform in an individual style and neglect the finer points of the game.

After making an auspicious debut on the basketball court this year the Leal School squad has suddenly put on the reverse and appears to be slipping. Yesterday's game at Montclair was an overwhelming defeat for the private school lads. The opposing forces, however, were fast and knew the game and it is doubtful if any of the basketball fives in this section could have turned the tables on the Montclair aggregation. The rejuvenation of Leal School basketball to which we have been looking forward does not seem to be forthcoming and the private school boys will also have to take on some steam to be in the league race with N. P. H. S. this year.

Roselle High School basketball authorities cancelled their game with N. P. H. S. at the last minute yesterday afternoon giving as their reason the school regulation that male and feminine athletic forces are not allowed to play out of town on the same date. The Roselle girls played in the borough yesterday. This reason may have been a bona fide one but to the boroughites it appears pretty flimsy and a slight suspicion remains that Roselle is afflicted with "cold feet."

Leal School put "one over" on the Roselle squad last week and they evidently thought it wise to steer clear of the "Canadians."

Right on top of the cancellation we read that Roselle was treated to a walloping on the Newark Normal School court yesterday afternoon. Whaddayamean play out of town? Newark happens to be just as much "out of town" as Plainfield.

WEEKLY BASKETBALL TILTS AT Y. M. C. A. AND HOPE

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team will meet the St. Peter's five, of New Brunswick, on the local court Saturday night. This should be a good contest, as the locals lost to this aggregation earlier in the season on the New Brunswick court and are looking for a chance to even matters.

The Hope quintet is scheduled to meet the M. E. church, of Milltown, on the local court for the week-end attraction and this game, like the Y. M. C. A., will be preceded by a preliminary.

ELKS, EAGLES AND MASONS ARE SCHEDULED FOR TONIGHT

The only bowling match that was scheduled in the Elks' Junior League for tonight between the Plainfield and Paterson "Bills," has been canceled, but two will be played in the Senior circuit. Jersey City is due to meet Hoboken on the latter's drives and Rahway will play at Rutherford. The Plainfield team will be idle until one week from today when it is scheduled to meet the Jersey City team at that place.

Eagle and Masonic pinners will be in action, Anchor Masons, of this city, playing on the Essex drives. Two Newark teams in the Eagles League will play, the Newark five playing at Progress.

N. P. H. S. AT WOODBRIDGE.

Manager Duclos VanMater has scheduled the Woodbridge High School team tomorrow night, at that place. If the weather conditions are favorable the team will take the trip via the stage route and will be accompanied by a large number of rooters. A return game will be played with the Woodbrige team in Saengerbund Hall later.

CONNIE MACK TO STICK WITH PHILADELPHIA CLUB

Philadelphia, Dec. 10—"I won't leave Philadelphia," said Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics, yesterday, when his attention was called to a report that he might manage the New York American League baseball team next year.

"I am well satisfied here," he added, "and I am laying plans for the 1915 season. I may have to build up a new team, but I have done that before. It may be a little harder work than the last team I built up, but I will have a team that will be in the 1915 race all the time."

RUTGERS ELEVEN GUESTS OF BRUNSWICK CITIZENS

The citizens of New Brunswick tendered a banquet last night in the name of the city to the Rutgers football team, coaches and management, at the Hotel Klein. Those alumni of the college most instrumental in bringing about the recent athletic revival which has been so fruitful this fall, giving the Scarlet eleven a high rank among the football machines of the country, and various metropolitan writers of football also were hosts. In all 240 covers were laid.

Suspended from the ceiling of the banquet hall and set off by streamers of scarlet and black were the various footballs which Rutgers has won during the season just completed, each inscribed with the game's result.

Mayor Austin Scott presided. Dr. W. H. S. Demarest, president of the college; Judge Peter F. Daly, Coach George Foster Sanford, Capt. Toohey and Captain-elect Talman were among the speakers. Among things discussed was the prospect of a stadium for Rutgers. Capt. J. P. Toohey, variously designated All-American and All-Eastern tackle, got a present of a gold watch.

The Elizabeths rolled 814 in the first game, Rahway being there with 904, but they came back with tallies of 950 and 971, and the visitors were distanced. H. COOMBS RELEASED.

Philadelphia, Dec. 10—Jack Coombs, the Philadelphia American League pitcher, was given his unconditional release yesterday. Coombs was injured while pitching in a world's series game against the New York Giants in 1911, and since then has done but very little work on the mound. Recently Manager Mack asked waivers on Coombs, Plank and Bender. The latter two pitchers have signed Federal League contracts.

TWO POOL DEFAULTS.

Henry Welle and C. William Bingeman were awarded defaulted verdicts in the Y. M. C. A. handicap pool tournament and are now qualified for the second round. The former won from J. E. Manning and will meet Gus Engler in the second round, while C. William Bingeman won from J. E. McLoughlin and will meet Mr. Blanchard. Second round matches are due to be finished by next Saturday.

GAME AND DANCE.

Another Saturday night game has been booked for the North Plainfield High School fans this week, when the girls' sextet will play the Y. W. C. A. five on Saengerbund Hall court. The locals have won the last three games played, dropping their only game to Roselle Park the first of the season. The games will be followed by a dance.

N. Y. U. L. S. TEAM MAY NOT PLAY LOCAL FIVE

Y. M. C. A. basketball fans who have been awaiting the appearance of the New York University Law School basketball team will probably not get a chance to see this fast quintet perform here this season as the Student Athletic Council of that institution has ruled that the team cannot play any more of its scheduled games as a result of the trick played on the manager of the varsity team in scheduling a game with the Army five at West Point.

Last season this team played two good games in the local gym which were among the best attractions of the year. No official notice of the cancellation has yet reached the local management, but the game will probably not be played unless that aggregation starts independent games.

Y. M. C. A.'S OPPONENT IS NOW IN FAST COMPANY

When the Y. M. C. A. basketball team played against the Newark P. S. A. A. five on the local court in the second game of the season, they played against a crack who has recently come into the limelight in Newark and vicinity. That player is "Porky" Flynn, the guard on the visiting team that played here.

Flynn's playing all season has attracted attention and he has been signed to play with the Harrison Big Five and is trying for the All-New Jersey team. Tonight he will play in a professional game with the West Hudsons against the Troy aggregation, of the New York State League.

N. P. H. S. GIRLIES TRIM CONQUERORS

Roselle Sextet Forced to Take Smaller End of 25 to 12 Score.

The North Plainfield High School girls' sextet scored another victory, yesterday afternoon, when they defeated the girls' team of Roselle Park High School in Saengerbund Hall by a score of 25 to 12. A few weeks ago the Roselle Park delegation defeated the borough maidens in an interesting game at that place, and judging by the good playing of the home team yesterday, they certainly made a great improvement in their work of the earlier part of the season.

Although the game was not an exciting one, as the borough players were in the lead from the start and always managed to keep a safe distance ahead of their opponents in the scoring line, they were given a good fight for it.

A good many fouls were called during the game on both sides, but Roselle Park failed to make as many of them good as North Plainfield and out of the twenty-five points scored by the home team, thirteen were made by free throws, Miss Marjorie Burtis hardly missing one and making 12 out of the 13 made by N. P. H. S.

North Plainfield started the scoring when Miss Burtis caged a neat field goal from the side in the opening half, and this was quickly followed by a foul before the visiting team had a chance to score. The visitors then registered a basket, but before they could go much further the boroughites had gained a good lead by a few more fouls and some good shooting by Miss Burtis. The half ended 12 to 7 in their favor.

In the second half the Roselle girls could not make even as many points as in the first, while their opponents made thirteen, or one more than they registered in the opening half. In this half Miss Holland, who was put in in place of Miss Walther, shot a pretty field goal from near the middle of the floor for the opposing delegation. The half ended 13 to 5 in favor of the victors, Miss Burtis making two field goals and seven fouls and Miss Spencer registering one of the two-point variety. For Roselle Park, Miss Holland made two goals and Miss Hale scored one free throw.

Miss Burtis and Miss Spencer did all the scoring for North Plainfield High School, Miss Burtis making five baskets and twelve fouls and Miss Spencer making one basket and a foul. Miss Debele played a good game at guard.

Miss Holland and Miss Hale were the main point scorers for Roselle Park and both played fairly good games at forward.

STANDINGS OF THE TEAMS.

The Juniors defeated the Sophomores in the opening game of the Inter-Class League of North Plainfield High School in Saengerbund Hall, yesterday afternoon, by a score of 39 to 22. The game was played as a preliminary to the Roselle Park-N. P. H. S. girls' game and proved an interesting one.

Although the Sophomores set a good pace and scored several points before the Juniors could get started, they could not hold their lead and the 1916 boys soon caught up and passed them. It was not until the latter part of the game, however, that the Juniors managed to get a safe lead.

In the first half the Juniors scored only three more points than their opponents and the half ended 11 to 8. But in the last half every man on the team played a better game than in the first half, and although the Sophomores made 14 points they could not keep up with the scoring of the third year men, who registered 28.

Kirch scored the most points for the winners by making seven baskets and two fouls and Dawe came second with five baskets and one foul. Dilts and McDonough played good games at guard.

For the Sophomores, Force was high point scorer with five field goals. Causbrook also played a good game at forward.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.—Adv.

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure, and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

Both teams made poorer scores in the second game and the locals were twenty-seven points behind their opponents. E. R. Honeyman was high score man for the home team in this game, his mark being 158. Essex eased up slightly in the last game and their opponents put one over on them, winning by the score of 756 to 712.

HAWKS WIN TWO AND GO TO SECOND PLACE

Crows Won Last Game in Match With Hawks at Columbus Club.

By winning two out of three games from the Crows in the Columbus Club five-man tournament last night, the Hawks maintained a second place tie with the Robins and now have a record of four victories and two defeats. They easily annexed the first two rolls in the match last night, and they were defeated in the last by the Crows' cheering section that was led by "Packay" McDonough. This body arrived on the scene of battle too late to help their favorites win two. This double defeat still keeps the Crows in last place with four other teams.

Hillman started off well for the Hawks and chalked up a 207 while the best score their opponents made in the initial roll was 201, credited to Pasch, the scores being 873 to 779 in favor of the Hawks. Hillman again led the attack in the second game when he hit the wood for a 224, which was high score of the match. On top of this Gueterman registered a 215 and the team score was 947. Murry, of the Crows, fell down to 92 and their score was only 758.

In the third game the crowds arrived and began to yell for the unfortunate blackbirds. This encouraged them and also encouraged by McAfee's 211, the Crows won the game handily. The scores were 953 to 865. Tomorrow night the Doves and Robins will meet.

MUSIC AS A TONIC.

It Is Good Not Only For the Body, but For the Soul as Well.

To what are the beneficent effects of music due? Darwin, who never rested until he could explain a thing, if it were explainable, could nevertheless no more explain why musical tones in a certain order and rhythm afford pleasure than we can account for the pleasantness of certain odors and tastes. "We know that sounds more or less melodious are produced during the season of courtship by many insects, spiders, fishes, amphibians and birds."

After all, says the Journal of the American Medical Association, we need go no deeper for an adequate explanation than that influences, such as music, which are agreeable are therefore salutary, and music is agreeable because its component tones are regular, periodic vibrations, even auditory waves, precisely so many to each note, being in this regard unlike noises, which are irregular, dissonant, conflicting vibrations. Sound waves impinge on the hearing sense, whence the perception is conveyed to the brain.

The benignant influence of music physically is by the transmission of its influence from the cerebrum through the sympathetic system, which directs the various organs. Thus not only is music physic for the soul, dissipating mental depression, soothing psychic perturbations, but this influence may also enhance nutrition, further digestion (as by the "liver music" of the French) and restore organic equilibrium. Indeed, the entire working of the human mechanism, physical and mental alike, may be lubricated by a stream of music, which art and science should therefore have a place in the medical armamentarium.

BADGES OF BRAVERY.

Rewards of Some European States For Valor In Battle.

All the great powers of Europe have some reward for conspicuous valor and bravery on the field of battle, and, although the plain bronze Victoria cross is the youngest of such decorations, dating back only to the Crimean war in 1856, it is the most valued possession in many a home in England today. The Austrian cross, on the other hand, is the oldest.

A similar reward in Germany is the iron cross, instituted by King Frederick William III. of Prussia in the year 1813.

Russia gives as a decoration to its heroic soldiers the cross of St. George, which was founded by the famous Empress Catherine II. in the year 1769, and, while the Victoria cross is of bronze and the iron cross, as its name implies, of iron (which is edged with silver), the Russian order is of gold with a beautiful medallion of St. George killing the dragon.

In Austria the cross is of gold and was instituted in the year 1757 by the Empress Maria Theresa soon after her accession to the throne. It bears the same inscription as the British Victoria cross, the British having in English "For Valour" and the Austrian in Latin the word "Fortitudine."

The Order of the Legion of Honor, which is the reward in France, was instituted by the great Napoleon, and he decreed that every soldier who was decorated with that honor should have the additional distinction of being entitled to receive a military salute from officers, noncommissioned officers and private soldiers.—London Tit-Bits.

A Prayer.

Purge out of every heart lurking grudge. Give us grace and strength to forbear and to persevere. Offenders, give us the grace to accept and to forgive offenders. Forgetful ourselves, help us to bear cheerfully the forgetfulness of others. Give us courage and gayety and a quiet mind. Spare us to our friends, soften us to our enemies.

Bless us, if it may be, in all our innocent endeavors. If it may not, give us the strength to encounter that which is to come, that we be brave in peril, constant in tribulation, temperate in wrath and in all changes of fortune and down to the gates of death loyal and loving one to another.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

The Sleeping Top.

A spinning top "sleeps" in obedience to a law of nature. The top at the period of its spinning called by boys "sleeping" has the centrifugal and gravitative forces acting upon it in a nearly balanced degree. Obeying chiefly the rotary force imparted to it by the player, the top seems for a little while, until that force is overcome by gravity, to be in a state of comparative rest.

the rival suitors of "Angelica," but later, fortunately, "Betsinda," Miss Helen Joy, "apparently a chambermaid," proved to be a princess, too, so both couples could live happily ever after. Not but the old "Countess Gruffanuff," Mrs. H. C. White, didn't perform the function of an obstacle to happiness and make the issue doubtful for awhile. There wasn't any doubt about the audience enjoying this clever characterization, however. Mrs. White's voluble villiany more than once "brought down the house." Prince Bulbo was no less killing.

In short the whole play was as full of fun as two hours would hold. "Captain Hersoff" and the "Hangman," Miss Townsend and Mrs. Boardman in every day affairs, even lent an element of terror to offset the mirth and they were re-enforced by Mrs. Patch and Miss Harris as two grim soldiers and a howling mob, examples of militarism, all and each which should illuminate a great deal of current fiction in the newspapers.

Still another contrast, those of dignity and beauty, were the parts of the "Queen," Mrs. Williams, and "Princess Rosalba," Miss Joy. In the final scene, especially where a real old-fashioned quadrille was danced, the "Pricess Rosalba" wore a mid-Victorian wedding garment of white silk and old lace that made some mothers and fathers in the audience remember and some were even heard to murmur that they thought the style as becoming as the present, and the quadrille—well, no less modest than the Tango.

But when the grown-ups get satirical just like Mr. Thackeray its time for the college girls to say good night. So the "Archbishop," Miss Beebe, "handy for weddings or funerals," showed her professional perspicacity in pronouncing the document to be a document, and the wedding of "Prince Giglio" to the crafty "Gruffanuff" was about to take place, when "Fairy Blackstick" produced "Jenkins Gruffanuff," in the person of the versatile Miss Egerton, formerly a page. That settled poor old "Griselda's" hash and in spite of a gallon of smelling salts she succumbed while "Giglio" the good, but stupid prince wed his beautiful and virtuous "Rosalba," and the band played "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," the national anthem of "Paflagonia."

REDUCTIONS IN SCHOOL BIDS

Plumbing contract—George J. Tobin, Plainfield, $2,598; Den. J. Galbraith, Plainfield, $2,878.

Electrical work—Commercial Construction Co., New York, $1,373; George W. Ord, Plainfield, $1,532; Allen B. Laing Co., Plainfield, $1,568; L. R. VanWoert, New York, $1,592; Paul H. Jaehnig, Newark, $1,860; Cortlandt Engineering Co., New York, $1,976.

These bids were all referred to the building committee for action at their meeting next Wednesday night, before which time no announcement of the award of the contracts will be made.

There is some uncertainty as to the final award of the contracts, particularly that for the general construction in which in addition to the general bid, nineteen alternate bids were called for. The variation of the figures for these alternates may possible determine the real low figure for the work to be any of the three or four lowest bids submitted.

As compared to the bids of last September it is estimated that about $5,000 was saved by the new figures.

The low bid for the general contract is now $59,354 as compared to $62,523, which was the lowest bid last September. The new low plumbing bid is $2,598 as against $2,772 in September; the electrical bid is $1,373 instead of $1,592.

The heating and ventilating contract will be completed for about $200 less than would have been the case if the low September bid had been accepted. The bid of Mr. Tobin last night was the lowest submitted and is $12,991.50. This includes the temperature regulation which at the last advertisement for heating bids was separately estimated and not included in the general bid for the work.

Including this, the previous low bid for the heating contract was $14,926, which makes the present bid of $12,991.50 effect a saving of nearly $2,000 over the first figures.

Household Hints

CHRISTMAS CANDIES.

Hickorynut Taff. — Two cups granulated sugar, one cup corn sirup, one cup boiling water, whites of two eggs, lump butter the size of walnut. Put all ingredients in kettle but eggs and boil till some dropped in ice water will form a soft ball. Now take out about one and one-half cups sirup, pour over beaten whites of eggs, and beat about five minutes. Now pour all into kettle together, set on fire and boil till it will thread when dropped in water. Stir all the time to keep from burning. Have nuts in buttered pans; pour taffy over them.

Fondant—Place in kettle two cups granulated sugar, half cup boiling water, one-fourth teaspoon cream of tartar. Boil till it forms soft ball in ice water, then remove from fire to become lukewarm. Stir until it looks creamy and begins to harden on top; remove paddle and knead with hands. This is a foundation for all kinds of candy, such as chocolate drops, fixed with English walnuts, etc. Split dates filled with this are fine.

Chocolate Caramels—Three cups sugar, one cup grated chocolate, one cup boiling water, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon vanilla, a pinch of salt. Boil 10 minutes, stirring constantly; take from fire, add flavoring, pour into buttered pans. When thick, cut in squares.

Ice Cream Taffy — Four cups granulated sugar, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon cream of tartar. Mix together and add one cup water; then boil until some of the sirup will harden in cold water. Do not stir after sirup commences to boil. Pour onto buttered plates, and when cool enough, pull until very white. Cut into small chunks and wrap in oiled paper.

Popcorn Cakes—Put nicely popped corn through a clean coffee or meat grinder, then stir it into molasses candy, using as much corn as will make sirup very stiff. Spread on a greased slab and roll an inch thick with buttered rolling pin. Cut into cakes and let become cold. The molasses sirup only wants to be boiled until it forms a stiff ball in cold water.

THE TABLE

Baked Noodle With "Smeer" Cheese—Boil three-fourths pound noodles until soft; drain and put a layer in deep pan. Add to one pound of "smeer" cheese four well-beaten eggs, one-half cup cream; beat thoroughly until smooth, then add a layer of this mixture over noodles, then a layer of noodles; continue till pan is full (grease pan with butter). Bake 30 minutes.

Potato and Onion Dish—Take enough potatoes for the meal; take two large onions and a little parsley. Put a layer of potatoes, then a layer of onions, etc., until baking dish is full, then season with pepper, salt, parsley, and a tablespoon of butter; add enough milk to cover and bake in oven about one hour. This makes a good dish for dinner for anyone that likes onions.

Quick Waffles (good)—One pint milk, three cups flour, one teaspoon salt, two heaping teaspoons baking powder, three eggs, one tablespoon butter. Beat yolks of eggs until light, then add milk, flour and salt; give the whole a good beating (beat until smooth), add butter (melted) and last the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth, and the baking powder. Mix thoroughly. Bake quickly. Serve with maple or sugar syrup.

"What's the new little boy's name?" asked Tab.

Nobody knew. That would be something to find out.

"Well," Tab said, "tomorrow morning, right after breakfast, I'm going to bring Theophilus Thistledown down and lend him to him."

"Ain't we going to bury Sandy Claus right after breakfast?" demanded Gussie.

And all the children, even little Emily, answered:

"No; let's not."

They all went on together and entered Mary's gate. Those within, hearing the singing, had opened the door, and they brought them through that deep arch of warmth and light. Afterward no one could remember whether or not the greeting had been "Merry Christmas," but there could have been no mistaking what everybody meant.

* * * * * * *

At his gate in the street wall lined with snow bowed lilacs and mulberries Ebenezer Rule waited in the dark for his two friends to come back. He had found Kate Kerr in his kitchen methodically making a jar of Christmas cookies. ("You've got to eat, if it is Christmas," she had defended herself in a whisper.) And to her stupefaction he had dispatched her to Mary Chavah's with her entire Christmas baking in a basket.

"I don't believe they've got near enough for all the folks I see going," he explained it.

While he went within doors he had left the hobbyhorse in the snow close to the wall, and he came back there to wait. The street had emptied. By now every one had gone to Mary Chavah's. Once he caught the gleam of lanterns down the road and heard children's voices singing. For some time he heard the singing, and after it had stopped he fancied that he heard it. Startled, he looked up into the wide night lying serene above the town and not yet become vexed by the town's shadows and interrupted by their lights. It was as if the singing came from up there. But the night kept its way of looking steadily beyond him.

It came to Ebenezer that the night had not always been so unconscious of his presence. The one long ago, for example, when he had slept beneath this wall and dreamed that he had a kingdom; those other nights when he had wandered abroad with his star glass. Then the night used to be something else. It had seemed to meet him, to admit him. Now he knew, and for a long time had known, that when he was abroad in the night he was there, so to say, without his permission. As for men, he could not tell when relation with them had changed, when he had begun to think of them as among the externals, but he knew that now he ran along the surface of them and let them go. He never met them as "others," as belonging to countless equations of which he was one term, and they playing that wonderful, near role of "other." Thus he had got along, as if his own individuation were the only one that had ever occurred and as if all the mass of mankind—and the night and the day—were undifferentiated from some substance all inimical.

Then this vast egoism had heard itself expressed in the mention of Bruce's baby—the third generation. But by the great sorcery wherewith nature has protected herself, this mammoth sense of self, when it extends unto the next generations, becomes a keeper of the race. Ebenezer had been touched, relaxed, disintegrated. Here was an interest outside himself which was yet no external. Vast, level reaches lay about that fact and all long unexplored. But these were peopled. He saw them peopled.

As in the cheer and stir within the house where that night were gathered his townsfolk, his neighbors, his "hands." He had thought that their way of meeting him, if he chose to go among them, would matter nothing. Abruptly now he saw that it would matter more than he could bear. They were in there at Mary's, the rooms full of little families, getting along as best they could, taking pride in their children, looking ahead, looking ahead—and they would not know that he understood. He could not have defined offhand what it was that he understood. But it had, it seemed, something to do with Letty's account book and Bruce's baby.

Gradually he let himself face what it was that he was wanting to do. And when he faced that he left the hobbyhorse where it was under the wall and went into the street.

He took his place among the externals of the winter night, himself unconscious of them. The night, with all its content, a thing of explicable fellowships, lay waiting patiently for those of its children who knew its face. In the dark and under the snow the very elements of earth and life were obscured, as in some clear wash correcting too strong values. He moved along the village, and now his dominant consciousness was the same consciousness in which that little village lived. But he knew it only as the impulse that urged him on toward Jenny's house. If he went to Jenny's, if he signified so that he wished not to be cut off from her and Bruce and the baby, if he asked Bruce to come back to the business, these meant a lifetime of modification to the boy's ideals for that business and modification to the lives of the "hands" back there in Mary Chavah's house—and to something else.

"What else?" he asked himself.

Mechanically he looked up and saw the heavens crowded with bright watchers. In that high field one star brighter than the others, hung over the little town. He found himself trying to see the stars as they had looked to him years ago, when they and the night had seemed to mean something else.

"What else?" he asked himself.

The time did not seem momentous. It was only very quiet. Nothing new was there, nothing different. It had always been so. The night lay in a sovereign consciousness of being more than just itself. "Do you think that you are all just you and nothing else?" it was seen to be compassionately asking.

"What else?" Ebenezer asked himself.

He did not face this yet. But in that hour which seemed pure essence, with no attenuating sound or touch, he kept on up the hill toward Jenny's house.

* * * * * * *

Mary Chavah left ajar the door from the child's room to the room where, in the dark, the tree stood. He had wanted the door to be ajar "so the things I think about can go back and forth," he had explained.

In the dining room she wrapped herself in the gray shawl and threw up the two windows. New air swept in, cleansing, replacing, prevailing. Her guests had left her early, as is the way in Old Trail Town. Then she had had her first moments with the child alone. He had done the things that she had not thought of his doing, but had inevitably recognized—had delayed his bed going, had magnified and repeated the offices of his journey, had shown her the contents of his pockets, had repeatedly mentioned by their first names his playmates in Idaho and shown surprise when she asked him who they were. Mary stood now by the window conscious of a wonderful thing—that it seemed as if he had been there always.

In the clean inrush of the air she was aware of a faint fragrance, coming to her once and again. She looked down at her garden, lying wrapped in white and veiled with black like some secret being. Three elements were slowly fashioning it, while the fourth, a soft fire within her, answered them. The fragrance made it seem as if the turn of the year were very near, as if its prophecy, evident once in the October violets in her garden, were come again. But when she moved she knew that the fragrance came from within the room, from Ellen Bourne's Christmas rose, blossoming on the table. Above her eye fell on the picture that Jenny had brought to her on that day when she had all but emptied the house, as if in readiness. Almost she understood now the passionate expectation of those who in her dream had kept saying "You."

There was a movement in her garden and on the walk footsteps. The three men stepped into the rectangle of lamplight—Abel Ames and Simeon, who had left the party a little before the others and, hurrying back with the gifts that they planned, had met Ebenezer at his gate, getting home from Jenny's house. In Abel's arms was something globed, like a little world; in Simeon's, the tall, gray gowned St. Nicholas taken from the Exchange window, the lettered sign absent, but the little flag still in his hand, and Ebenezer was carrying the hobbyhorse.

"Has the boy gone to bed?" Abel asked without preface.

"Yes," Mary answered. "I'm sorry."

"Never mind," Simeon whispered, "you can give him these in the morning."

Mary, her shawl half hiding her face, stooped to take what the three lifted.

"They ain't presents, you know," Abel assured her positively. "They're just—well, just to let him know."

Mary set the strange assortment on the floor of the dining room—the things that were to be nothing in themselves, only just "to let him know."

"Thank you for him," she said gently. "And thank you for me," she added.

Ebenezer fumbled for a moment at his beaver hat and took it off. Then the other two did so to their firm fixed caps. And with an impulse that came from no one could tell whom, the three spoke—the first time hesitatingly, the next time together and confidently.

"Merry Christmas, merry Christmas!" they said.

Mary Chavah lifted her hand.

"Merry Christmas!" she cried.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — How Cato Found the Road To Happiness.

It Was Filled With Gold.

"CATO lived with his wife in a very humble little cottage at the edge of a village.

"He was a ditch digger; but, although he and his wife were very poor and were obliged to economize, they were not at all unhappy. You see, Cato had never lived in luxury, so he knew nothing of what he was missing.

"But one day something happened which changed Cato's point of view. He was digging away as fast as he could when his spade struck against a box.

"He dug out the box and found it filled with gold and silver. Cato's eyes glistened when he saw this treasure, for it was more money than Cato had seen during his whole previous life.

"But he was an honest man, and so he carried the box to the house of the man who owned the land.

"He had never seen such furniture and carpets and tapestries as he saw in the house of this man. The spirit of envy whispered to him, 'Wouldn't you like to have a house as beautiful as this?'

"So Cato began wishing, and he wished as hard as he could. He wished so hard that his eyes smarted and his heart beat very fast and he just trembled all over.

"Then a voice sounded in his ear. 'I am the earth spirit,' it said. 'Ask three things of me and they shall be granted.'

"So Cato asked for a beautiful house with beautiful furniture in it. When he arrived at his cottage he found it had been changed into a wonderful mansion.

"But poor Lyel, Cato's wife, was sitting outside of the mansion dressed in her poor clothes, weeping and wringing her hands because she was so poorly clothed and the house was so handsome.

"So Cato wished that Lyel should be changed into a grand lady, which she was instantly. That made two wishes, and Cato had one more.

"He then discovered that his clothing didn't match the grand house and the elegant Lyel, so he wished to be changed into a fine gentleman.

"Then when everything was outwardly changed he and his wife discovered that their minds didn't match the grand surroundings. They grew ill from sheer homesickness for the humble little cottage in which they had lived happily so long.

"Then the spirit of earth appeared and, finding how unhappy the couple were in the midst of their grandeur, gave Cato one more wish.

"What do you suppose Cato wished, kiddies?"

"To have everything as it was before, of course," said Jack.

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Mr. Parker had declined to permit his hard-working wife to buy a new dress for their daughter Marian's wedding. He had also refused new paper, carpet and curtains for the parlor.

When her husband and daughter had left for town to buy Marian's wedding dress, Mrs. Parker gave way to her grief and disappointment. Mrs. Hull, a neighbor, found her thus and took her home with her.

When Mr. Parker returned from town he reined up the horses by the back steps and called:

"Ma, come take these things, will you?"

There was no response; the house looked deserted. "Susan," he called again, "don't you hear?"

Finally he jumped down from his seat, saying,

"Strange! I wonder where she can be."

He carried the basket of provisions into the kitchen, but repeated calls brought no response. He drove to the barn, unhitched, then commenced a search of cellar, garden and berry patch. No trace of her could be found.

"She's gone to the neighbor's on an errand," he told himself reassuringly, but it was not her custom to go away. Indeed, he reflected that this was the first time since his marriage, twenty-seven years before, that he had ever returned to an empty house. It was nearly one o'clock and he was hungry. After waiting until half-past one he went to the pantry, ate some bread and milk, took a piece of apple pie and went to the field, feeling very much injured.

As he worked the sense of injury gave place to a strange dread. He remembered what his daughter, Marian, had said as they drove out of the yard on the way to take the train:

"Oh, father, you are breaking mother's heart!"

He had not answered nor paid any attention to her frequent use of her handkerchief on the way to town. He reflected with pride that he had not objected when she selected some expensive lace to trim her wedding dress and he was glad he had kissed her goodby when she left. It really was unnecessary, as she was to be gone only three days.

"I'm sorry I refused Susan the dress she asked for this morning. I'll get it for her yet. I'll go to the house and instead of scolding about having no dinner I'll say, 'Tomorrow we'll hitch up bright and early and go to town to get that dress, Susan.' Won't she be surprised?"

He chuckled in anticipation as he unhitched the horses and started for the house. He found it as lonely and deserted as he had left it. After searching everywhere for a note telling where she had gone, he did the chores, drank his lonely cup of tea and went to bed, but he was too troubled to sleep.

All night his memory was busy. He saw his wife, patient, hard-working, uncomplaining. He remembered with remorse the look of pain that crossed her face when he refused to let her paper the parlor and get new carpet and curtains before Marian's wedding. "Then I refused to let her get a new dress to wear at the wedding," he groaned.

He rose early, did the chores and came in to cook and eat his solitary breakfast. During the morning he worked near the house to be sure to see the mail carrier. His hope was now pinned on getting a letter. It came. He noticed the postmark was Olcott, their nearest town. With trembling fingers he tore open the envelope and read.

"Marlo: I have gone to the house of a friend to make the dress I have bought to wear at Marian's wedding. I will never come back to the farm, I will go and live with Marian, unless you can give me money to clothe myself decently and make my home half as good as the cattle barn is.

"Your wife, SUSAN."

He sank down on the grass under the tree and buried his face in his hands. His one glad thought was, "I haven't lost her; I can make it right yet."

When Mr. Parker brought Marian home two days later he found his wife cleaning the neglected kitchen. He went straight to her and laying his hands on her shoulders said, "Forgive me, Susan; I didn't see. I didn't understand. God helping me, I'll make amends to you."

3COOP, THE CUB REPORTER — They Are Arming The Infantry With Machine Guns Now — BY "HOP"

THIS BOY ANXIOUS TO SELL CHRISTMAS SEALS

The other day a little boy went into the Y. M. C. A., where the Red Cross Christmas seals are on sale, and asked for some stamps to sell.

"I haven't got a cent," he admitted, "but I can sell a lot of stamps, and I want to do it."

"All right, here are twenty-five," said Secretary Herbert E. Parker. "I'll trust you. Go ahead."

It was not long before he was back with the money and was anxious to sell more. He was accommodated, and is still working for the cause when he can get time to do so.

Perhaps it was curiosity that prompted the question, but anyway he was asked why he was so anxious to help sell the seals.

"Well, my father and two sisters died with tuberculosis," said the boy, "and I know that this money will go to help other sick people, and so I am going to do all I can for you."

Have you bought your share of Red Cross Seals?

The seals are on sale in Plainfield at the City National Bank, State Trust Company, First National Bank, Estil's book store (Will H. Williams), Laing's stationery store, A. E. Force & Co., Plainfield Milk and Cream Co., Queen City Hotel, Randolph's drug store, Schwed Brothers, Woman's Exchange, Y. M. C. A., Charity Organization Society, by the public school children of the city, by the children of several Sunday-schools and by a number of individual workers.

YOUNG CULPRITS HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY

John and Edward Calder, Ernest Drake, William Scott and Orville James, the five boys arrested on a larceny charge preferred by Gustav LaVere, the borough grocer, were held in $100 bail each for the grand jury, when arraigned before Justice Thomas Snape, yesterday afternoon. All except James were able to secure bondsmen, and if he cannot get bail today he will be taken to Somerville.

The boys have been giving the borough police considerable trouble, it is said. They were given a severe lecture by Justice Snape before he decided to hold the quintet for the grand jury. Bail for the Calder boys was furnished by their father, while Thomas Hurley put up a bond for Drake. Scott's bail was furnished by a friend.

TOMLINSON Y MEETING.

The Tomlinson Y will hold its regular meeting this evening, at the home of James W. Dunwell, 411 East Seventh street, when there will be a discussion regarding public drinking fountains. These fountains are said to be inexpensive and it is the purpose of the organization to try and locate several throughout the city.

TEMPERATURE REPORT.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 33 degrees; 11 a. m., 41 degrees; 1 p. m., 40 degrees.

EDUCATORS HEAR INSPIRING TALK

W. D. Lewis Principal Speaker at Union Meeting in P. H. S. Auditorium.

OVER 200 ATTENDED

Affair Held Under Auspices of Local Parent-Teacher Associations Was Centre of Attraction for County Workers.

An audience of two hundred persons interested in educational work throughout Union county, many of them representing co-operative associations, attended the mass meeting held under the auspices of the Plainfield High School Parent-Teacher Association in the new auditorium, last night, and heard an inspiring address delivered by William G. Lewis, principal of the William Penn High School in Philadelphia. He took for his subject "Socializing Schools" and gave many valuable suggestions to be followed by educators in schools of all types. Owing to the illness of the president of the organization, Principal Lindsey Best, of the High School, the first vice president, introduced the speakers. Dr. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of schools, also gave a short talk.

Mr. Lewis said in part:

"Boys and girls of the High School age have an overplus of social energy and this instinct must be curbed by the teachers in the schools and the parents in the homes. A sane and proper realization should be given boys and girls of the relation of the school to the home. The foundation of the average person's thinking concerning High School education is that it offers equal opportunities to all. It does not. While the courses, social activities and other branches of work typical of the High

$100 MORE PLEDGED TO BELGIAN RELIEF FUND

The fourth $100 contribution from a Plainfielder toward a fund of $1,000 which is being raised in $100 subscriptions has been received through the Daily Press, to be given to the Belgian Relief Fund. As with the other three donors, the latest to add his name to the list objects to it being made public. The local relief committee held a meeting this morning at the home of Mrs. Frederick Wallace, on Hillside avenue, and encouraging reports were made on the work which has been done. In a few days purchases of milk for Belgian children will be started, and Plainfielders will be asked to contribute money to buy a certain number of cans.

Anyone wishing to subscribe $100 to the $1,000 fund can notify the Daily Press, or the treasurer, Miss Hartridge.

EXPLAIN OBJECTS OF A FEDERATION

W. H. P. Veysey and S. T. Carter, Jr., Address Men of Heavenly Rest Church.

"The Aims and Objects of the Federation of Men's Church Clubs," were discussed in an interesting way at the monthly meeting of the Men's Association, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, last night. The speakers were W. H. P. Veysey and S. T. Carter, Jr., president and vice president of the Federation of Men's Church Clubs, and their remarks were helpful to the members of the club.

Mr. Veysey told of the work of the federation, what it has already accomplished and what it proposes to do, explaining how it has served to arouse the interest of men in civic affairs. Mr. Veysey told of the influence of the federation in regard to the liquor question here, and of its part in the plans for the "Community Christmas," and urging the support of the club in the latter movement.

Mr. Carter told how each club in the federation is a benefit to every other club and how much more can be accomplished through the co-operation of a large number of men. He also urged that the club lend its interest and support to the "Community Christmas" observance. At the conclusion of the talks, the club made a subscription to help in the Christmas work and a social hour was enjoyed.

RED CROSS SEALS HELP MANY TO BETTER HEALTH

"How do Red Cross Seals really help the consumptive? Here are a few illustrations from our experience," said the visiting nurse.

"There is little Leo. Almost everybody about town knows Leo, the little newsboy with a crutch. He came under the care of the association four years ago when he was a little fellow five years old. He had tuberculosis of the hip and ankle, the leg was misshapen and twisted, and he could walk only by the aid of two crutches.

"In these four years he has had expert treatment by specialists of the city, who gave their services to the free dispensary supported by the association, and he has been given every advantage of skill and nursing that the association provides for its patients. Today he uses only one crutch and a specially made shoe, and his is now an arrested case. While through carelessness the disease might develop again, he has no tuberculosis now, and it is altogether probable that he may eventually be able to throw away the remaining crutch.

"Then there is a working man, who, when found by the association had been unable to work for more than a year. Food and other needed things were provided, and as soon as he was able he was enrolled as a patient at the tuberculosis clinic. Improvement was slow at first, but he was careful and intelligent, and after some months he was able to go back to work. He is now so much better that he reports to the clinic only occasionally, and his improvement continues.

"Another man perhaps owes his life to Red Cross Seals. He had been unable to work for a good many years. Under the care made possible by the fund derived from the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals he is starting on his second year of work.

"A young widow, whose husband died from tuberculosis, had become infected through caring for him. She came to the association, and is now working and caring for her two little children.

"These are only a very few of the many cases that Red Cross Seals have helped."

IN BOROUGH COURT.

Chief Marshall George Weiss arrested J. P. Apgar, of 40 Clinton avenue, yesterday for shooting within the borough limits. He was arraigned before Recorder Hand today and sentence was suspended, but further action may be taken in the case as the game warden claims that he was hunting in the snow.

MAYOR MAY VETO "ZONE" AMENDMENT

Rumored That He Does not Approve of Change in Liquor Ordinance.

There is a rumor that Mayor Percy H. Stewart will not approve the amendment to the Tyler saloon ordinance which was adopted at the meeting of the Common Council, Monday night. Ten days are given after the passage of such an amendment for the Mayor to either approve or veto the measure and in this case it is said that Mr. Stewart may veto the amendment.

When questioned about the matter, last night, Mr. Stewart said that the law gives him ten days in which to approve or veto, and he was not prepared to make any statement for publication. In case of a veto the Common Council could pass the amendment over his disapproval.

Throughout all the discussion regarding the amendment to the Tyler ordinance, Mr. Stewart has not publicly expressed any opinion and it is not known whether the Mayor approves of the Council's action or not.

THIRD RECEPTION GIVEN BY LOCAL LODGE OF ELKS

Members of the local lodge of Elks were hosts for nearly 300 merry makers in the Watchung avenue clubhouse last night, the affair being the third of a series of winter social functions planned. The event last night was an elaborate one and all present thoroughly enjoyed the hospitality of their entertainers. The entire clubhouse was turned over to the guests and dancing proved the chief amusement of the evening, music being furnished by Van Epp's orchestra.

Throughout the evening refreshments were served by a committee and various talented members of the lodge provided other entertainment.

MRS. FREDERICK G. MEAD GUEST AT SILVER TEA

Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, who has just returned from an extended trip to China, was a guest at the silver tea held at the Y. W. C. A. building, yesterday afternoon from 4 to 7:30 o'clock. The affair was largely attended and the proceeds will be used to purchase material with which to make articles for the association's exhibit at the Panama-Pacific Exposition next year.

The rooms were attractively decorated with flowers by members of the association and lighted with candles. Miss Martha Uhlman was chairman of the committee having charge of the tea. A substantial sum was realized.

CHILDREN WLIL ACT WELL KNOWN FABLE

Pied Piper of Hamelin to Be Presented by Amateurs Tomorrow Night.

Rehearsals for the "Pied Piper" of Hamlin, which is to be presented tomorrow evening in the High School auditorium give promise of an unusually good performance. The children of the grades have been working faithfully for some time past on the interpretive dances and dramatic dialogue and are prepared to give their friends a rare treat. The first scene of the play is laid in the market place where the rats are running riot, endangering the safety and comport of the townspeople. They scamper off to their little homes as the townspeople enter and begin their morning marketing. There are to be dances by the childen such as "The Mountain March," "The Ace of Diamonds" and "Push the Business On." The rats infest the market place again and the townspeople determine to complain to the mayor and corporation. The "Pied Piper" enters and offers to rid the town of rats.

The second scene is laid on the village green. Here is seen the children at play. There will be dances by the children such as "The Play Polka," "The Dance of Greeting," "The Garland Gavotte," "The Ribbon Dance" and "The Moment Musical," "Seven Jumps," "Nursery Rhymes" and "A Hunting We Will Go" as the "Pied Piper" leads the children away.

The last act describes the grief of the townspeople and the mayor proclaims the resolutions of the citizens.

It is the aim of the Public Recreation Committee to give the residents of Plainfield opportunities to enjoy these splendid evenings at a very small fee. The work done by our young people is equal to that of professionals in many respects. Some of the dances they do will delight the audience as much as would Pavlowa and the Russian Ballet.

BOYS AND GIRLS TO TAKE PART IN CONTEST

The Young Men's Hebrew Association has arranged for a "speaking contest" on Jewish topics to be held in its rooms, 204 West Front street, Sunday evening, at 8 o'clock. There will be ten participants, boys and girls and silver medals will be awarded the winners. There will be a program of vocal and instrumental music and a talk by a prominent speaker from New York.

The association will select three prominent men for judges of the contest, one of whom will be Rev. Dr. Herman L. Martin, the new minister of Temple Sholem. A cordial invitation is extended to all interested to attend the affair.

SULLIVAN URGES FULL INQUIRY INTO CHARGES

Washington, Dec. 11—United States Minister Sullivan at San Domingo, against whom charges of unbecoming conduct had been made, today cabled a demand for a thorough and complete investigation of his administration in office. The cablegram follows:

"I cheerfully invite most rigid examination of any or all of my public or private acts at this post, and am glad to meet any definite charge made against me. I deny emphatically and unqualifiedly having any interests to serve except the interests of my government, which service has been made difficult by sinister influences anxious to exploit without restraint."

MORE TROUBLE IN COLORADO.

Washington, Dec. 11.—New troubles apparently have arisen in the Colorado strike region for the White House today received a telegram from Governor Ammons asking that the Federal cavalry remain in the troubled zone. The text of Governor Ammons' request was not made public, but the communication was referred to Secretary of War Garrison.

AROUSED OVER THE LOSS OF CHICKENS

Pair of "Ghost" Dogs Said to Be Killing Fowls at Watchung.

The North Plainfield Township Committee, at its monthly meeting, yesterday, paid out more than $75 to residents of the township as compensation for the loss of chickens during the past few weeks, and the wholesale slaughter of fowls has not only aroused the owners to action, but the Township Committee yesterday decided to do everything in its power to stop the cause. It is the opinion of the committeemen as well as the farmers that a pair of "ghost" dogs is responsible. One is supposed to be a large canine and the other a small one, judging by the footprints which have been discovered in the vicinity.

The Committee decided to send out notices to all owners of dogs to keep them chained up, for if they were found running about they would be shot. Owners of chickens are also to be notified to take extra precaution about the care of their poultry and if they see dogs in the proximity to take such action as they think best, at the same time notifying the authorities.

Among those who have lost valuable poultry are Rev. Dr. C. A. Eaton, a flock of geese; C. C. Wheeler, William O'Rourke, Gerard Underhill, George Schmidt and H. R. Kennedy, chickens, with all of whom the Committee has made a settlement. The rest of yesterday's meeting was devoted to settling up the year's accounts.

JUDGE CONNOLLY DENIES COMPENSATION TO DORWARD

Edwin A. Dorward, of this city, is denied compensation from Ira N. West, a builder of Plainfield, in a decision filed by Judge Connolly in the county clerk's office. The suit was brought under the employers' liability act and claimed compensation for what the petitioner asserted were permanent injuries received while in West's employ June 23 last. An appeal from the findings is to be taken by George W. V. Moy, counsel for Dorward.

The suit was tried in the Court of Common Pleas, October 26, and decision at that time was reserved to give the attorneys opportunity to submit briefs and cite cases establishing precedents for allowing and disallowing the claim. The decision is based on the testimony, which, in the opinion of the court, was insufficient as a basis on which to order the compensation.

BANISHED FROM THE HOME.

Because he was abusive and threatened to kill the matron at the Industrial Home on Rock avenue, yesterday afternoon, Michael Mottley, an inmate, was arrested and lodged in a cell at police headquarters. Arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, it was brought out that he has been the cause for several disturbances at the Home in the past and Overseer of the Poor Dunham refused to take him back. He was told to seek other quarters.

ROULERS RETAKEN BY THE ALLIES

London Also Hears That Armentieres is Again in Their Possession.

SERVIA CLEAR OF ENEMY

Aside From Belgrade But Little of the Country is in Invaders' Hands—Submarines Attack Boats in Harbor of Dover.

London, Dec. 11.—That the Allies have recaptured Roulers, and have driven the Germans out of Armentieres is indicated by reports received here today from the front in Flanders. The advance to Roulers gives an important strategical point to the Allies.

The capture of Armentieres shows the successful resumption by the Allies of the fighting around Lille. According to the despatches telling of the capture of the city the British troops drove the Germans from their trenches on Tuesday and forced them far back beyond the range of the British artillery.

The report of the capture of Roulers comes from the Daily Express correspondent, and from Amsterdam advices stating that correspondents of the Amsterdam newspapers at Sludis report the Germans driven from the city.

According to the Daily Express correspondent the Allies are pushing their offensive beyond Roulers, and expect to force the Germans out of Thoroult and Thielt. He reports that the Germans have completed preparations to evacuate these places before the Allies' advance.

There is every indication that the Allies are developing their offensive with success. While the advance at any point of the line has not been rapid this is explained by the fact

INJURY NOT AS SERIOUS AS AT FIRST REPORTED

Elmer Gayle, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Gayle, of Vine street, who was injured in Madison, yesterday, when a passenger train on the Lackawanna Railroad struck his motorcycle, had a restful night in All Souls' Hospital, Morristown, where he was taken immediately after the accident. Gayle's left leg was broken below the knee and it will be some time before he is able to get around again. He will probably be brought to his home in the borough in about a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Gayle visited the hospital yesterday and learned that the injury was not as serious as was at first reported. The accident happened at a crossing. He was approaching the crossing and saw the gates down. He slowed up and before he reached the gates they were raised by the gateman. Gayle did not stop his machine, but started to cross the tracks when struck. The engine picked him up from his machine and carried him on the fender for about thirty yards.

ATTRACTIVE XMAS DECORATION

One of the most attractive and elaborate Christmas decorations is to be found in the show window of Griffen's hardware store on East Front street, where a mountain scene with a running stream and Belgian hares combine to make a picturesque setting. The whole affair is very true to nature and is being greatly admired.

FIRSTBROOK BACK.

Walter Firstbrook, of the Plainfield Daily Press reportorial staff, returned yesterday afternoon from Charleston, S. C., where he spent a two weeks' vacation.

Over $10,000 a Day

Is being subscribed in New York City alone for various European relief funds. Just one day's receipts would more than cover the cost of the work of the Plainfield Charity Organization Society for a whole year!

That amount means about fifty cents a year from each Plainfielder who COULD give at least that much, and who WOULD give it if he clearly understood the aims of this Society.

Do YOU understand them? Perhaps you think you do, but if you haven't given even a little of interest or of help to this work, you are mistaken. No one can thoroughly comprehend it without coming to believe it.

THE CHARITY ORGANIZATION SOCIETY, 323 Babcock Building, is working for efficiency; for economy; for permanent betterment, not merely temporary relief; to prevent waste from duplication of effort; to remove the causes of poverty as well as simply to ease its effect. Let us explain more fully. We want YOUR support NOW.

HEROES OF MEDICINE.

Many an Obscure Physician Has Died For Humanity's Sake.

The physicians who have met death from diphtheria, from smallpox, from tuberculosis in the heroic discharge of duties so common as to seem trivial, cannot be computed. Time has failed to keep a record of the noble dead. A roster of their honored names is out of our power. Obscure heroes who have fallen in the strife for humanity fill our churchyards, where they sleep in unacknowledged graves.

St. Paul boasted he was a citizen of no mean city. We may boast in the same spirit that we belong to no mean profession, to no ignoble calling, and while ungrateful beneficiaries may accuse us of practicing medicine for money, we may be sure that alike in city and in country, alike among the homes of wealth and the hovels of destitution, there exists a great body of men who by unselfishness, by fortitude, by kindness and charity, sustain amply the traditions and fulfill worthily the scope of our noble calling.

To those men what is a money fee? It is not time and study and care alone that they offer to the afflicted. It is their own strength, their sleep, their very lives that they lavish upon them, and what is a fee in exchange? Do men sell their blood for gold?—"Recreations of a Physician," by A. Stuart M. Chisholm, M. D.

DIAMONDS IN SUGAR.

We Know They Are There, Because Science Has Extracted Them.

Although at first thought the statement seems incredible, it is perfectly true that a lump of sugar may be converted into diamonds.

Not all the substance of the sugar of course will enter into the composition of the diamond, but only the carbon that it contains. Sugar consists of carbon united with oxygen and hydrogen.

It is an easy matter to separate out the carbon, and in certain experiments for the production of diamonds this sugar carbon has been employed.

The diamonds so produced were of course very small and destitute of commercial value, but still they were real diamonds, and the chemical result achieved would be no greater intrinsically if they were as big as the Cullinan.

Scientists have often expressed the hope that an improvement in the process of manufacturing diamonds may be effected whereby the necessity of dissolving the carbon in molten iron may be dispensed with, and the required combination of great pressure with great heat may be brought about by some such operations as squeezing the carbon between redhot metal plates.—New York World.

Got In Her Answer.

"Maria," said Mr. Jollyboy very solemnly, thinking to take a rise out of the wife of his bosom, "I heard of a dreadful operation which was undergone by a girl. She seemed in danger of losing her sight, and the clever ophthalmic surgeon who operated on her found"—

"Yes!" breathlessly interposed Mrs. Jollyboy. "Found what?"

"That the poor girl had a young man in her eye!" rejoined hubby, with a chuckle.

Silence reigned supreme for the space of five minutes, at the end of which time Mrs. Jollyboy said quietly:

"Well, of course, it would all depend on what kind of young man it was, as there are many men she would have been able to see through." And, with a serene smile, Mrs. J. resumed her knitting.—London Express.

First Carrier Pigeons.

The sport of pigeon flying dates back 100 years, although the Egyptians trained pigeons to serve as messengers 4,000 odd years ago, and their example was followed by the Assyrians, the Chinese, the Greeks and the Romans. The first pigeon race was organized in Belgium in 1818, and two years later a bird was flown from Paris to Verviers, where its arrival was hailed by a procession with brass bands. In England the first pigeon race was held in 1875 from Newcastle-on-Tyne to Bexhill. The sport caught on rapidly, especially in Lancashire and Yorkshire, and such long distance flights as from Manchester to San Sebastian (700 miles) have been achieved.—London Standard.

Hardening Steel.

The usual method of hardening steel by immersion in oil or water or alkaline baths, it is said, results in the formation of a line of considerable tension between the hardened and unhardened parts. By the use of compressed air, however, the zones of cooling may be carefully graduated and much better results obtained. By adapting the shape of the nozzle to the work a wide range of results is possible.

Lampblack.

A German process of collecting lampblack consists in placing two electrodes in a flame rich in carbon and passing a direct electric current of about fifteen volts. The lampblack deposited on the negative electrode consists of much finer particles than the ordinary, the material being especially suitable for fine printing inks and high grade paints.

The Name "Beth."

Beth, in the names of places mentioned in the Bible, is the Hebrew word for "house." Thus Beth-lehem is the house of bread; Beth-saida, house of mercy.

Time and chance can do nothing for those who will do nothing for themselves.—Canning.
